In 1879 I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence country, N. Y., to Florida, which state I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St. Johns river and settled down, as I thought for life. The climate following the first winter, a series of most peculiar sensations came which proved to be the precursor of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of my stomach, accompanied by a dull dizziness and nausea. My head seemed [illegible] with a peculiar feeling of weariness. I had a thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated and I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I became restless and feverish and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing worse. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary that I could not survive another summer in the south. I determined to return north, but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at Upper Sandusky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am today a perfectly well and healthy man.—How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

Editors Republican: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or course of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the proprietors and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, my physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four week's trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks.

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure, is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malaria of five years' standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarial troubles which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

"Common Sense," says Prof. Huxley, "is science exactly so far as it fulfills the ideal of common sense, that is, sees facts as they are, or at any rate without the distortion of prejudice, and reasons from them in accordance with the dictates of sound judgment. And science is, simply common sense at its best; that is rigidly accurate in observation, and merciless to fallacy in logic."

The first railroad was laid in England from Darlington to Stockton. The first railroad in France was laid in 1832, from St. Etienne to Lyons. In 1835, after investigating the subject, M. Thiers said that "Railroads offer some advantages for the transportation of travelers, so far as the use of them is limited to very short lines terminating in cities like Paris."

I am very glad to say I have tried Hop Bitters, and never took anything that did me as much good. I only took two bottles and I would not take $100 for the good they did me, I recommend them to my patients, and get the best results from their use.

Ancient and Modern Oaths.

The earliest record we have upon this subject is in the Bible, where Abraham, swearing his eldest servant, requested him to place his hand under the thigh of Abraham that the mere act should be a witness to his promise, (see Genesis xxiv., 2, 4, 9,) and again we have in Genesis xlvii where Jacob about to die calls his son Joseph to place his hand under his thigh when promising to deal kindly with Israel and to not bury him in Egypt.

Oldfield tells us in his expedition into the Interior of Africa by the Niger that at Iddah, "placing a naked sword or knife to the throat is looked upon as the strongest proof of innocence and the most solemn form of oath they can administer. In this manner the king is sworn, or sometimes at the point of a poisoned arrow."

In Egypt in an early time the goose was considered in high veneration, and the custom which prevailed at Crete of swearing by the goose was supposed to have originated from such veneration.

Of the Mennonites, we learn from Henderson's Biblical Researches in Russia, that they refuse to conform their testimony by an oath, regarding this mandate to the old Testament dispensation; yet these people will affirm the same as the Quakers.

In Canton, "when they wish to swear a witness a live cock and a knife are presented to him, and is obliged to cut off the cock's head at the moment he takes the oath."

In Madagascar the people swear neither by God nor by their idols, but chiefly by their mother or their sovereign, and the act witnessing it is given us as being of two forms: one to "strike the water" and the other to "spear the calf." A further consideration is made that the one sworn by must be alive, for upon a Kaffir swearing by a deceased relative, his oath was deemed insufficient, as invofable.

Another form as being in use in Abyssinia, we obtain from Bruce's Travels, that "they took the two fore fingers of my right hand and, one after the other, then kissed them—a form of swearing used there, at least among those that call themselves Christians."

A few more illustrations upon this point. We find that the Athenians administered oaths in the names of Jupiter, Minerva and Neptune, also Themis, Ceres and Helois. The Romans to Fides, the Germans to the God and by their swords or beards; the Scandinavians besides in the name of God, touched a bloody ring in the hands of a priest. Roman Catholics swear also by the saints as well as God. The Jews swore by Jerusalem as well as upon the broken glass. By the temple was another form, also the God of Israel. The Hindoo swears by the Veda, which is his bible; the Chinese at times upon a saucer; a Christian takes off his hat, and in the United States raises his right arm; while the Jew keeps his head covered.

Many other quotations could be given, but enough are given to show conclusively the nature of the form of an act witnessing an oath and of the presumed veneration exercised at the time, that the thoughts of the person making would be carried to a higher plane than in the ordinary walks of life by referring to some person or thing deemed superior. And all these considered in accordance with the belief of the people and times, made by custom, became law.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER CURE WHERE OTHER PLASTERS FAIL EVEN TO RELIEVE.

I have been using Allcock's Porous Plasters for a number of years and always with marked benefit. I have been much troubled with muscular rheumatism; have been treated by five of our best physicians without receiving any relief whatever. I then used Allcock's Plaster on the parts affected and I can assure you the pain has almost entirely left me. I can recommend them to every one as the best plaster made. I have tried other kinds but found them worthless.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual gap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an specially prepared water proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is [illegible] moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, these qualities are of the [illegible] importance.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 20, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

A Baltimore clergyman recently preached on the subject, "Why was Lazarus a beggar?" We suppose because he didn't advertise.

On one of the postal cars near Washington a letter was found directed to "Hand Over Cart House." It was sent to Hanover Court House.

"I declare," exclaimed a slovenly writer, "I wish I could find a pen that would just suit me." And instantly came a chorus, "Try a pig pen."

"Why are we here?" was the subject of a St. Louis clergyman's sermon one Sunday morning. This is indeed a hard question, with the fare to Chicago down so low.

The Boston Courier gives the following wise piece of advice to its bachelor readers: "Never marry a girl unless you have known her at least three days and a picnic."

A Russian claims to have found a new substitute for rubber. It is strongly suspected that while traveling in this country recently he tackled a ham sandwich at a railway restaurant.

Wishing to pay his friend a compliment, a gentleman remarked: "I hear you have a very industrious wife,' "Yes," replied the friend with a melancholy smile, "she's never idle. She always finds something for me to do."

While the very young daughter of a country clergyman was playing in the garden one day, a stranger came along and inquired if her father was at home. "No," she replied, "but, my mother is in the house, and she will pray with you, you poor miserable sinner."

This is the way the editor of one of our New England cotemporaries gets even with a rival: "A dispatch informs us that the latest style of gentlemen's shirts are of black cambric, with small white spots. All that our editor friend will have to do to be in the fashion, will be simply to take a piece of chalk and make spots on his shirt."

"Your visits remind me of the growth of a successful newspaper," said Uncle Jabez, leaning his chin on his cane and glancing on William Henry, who was sweet on Angelica.

"Why so?" inquired William Henry.

"Well, they commenced as a weekly, grew to be a tri-wrekly, and have now become daily, with a Sunday supplement."

"Yes," said William Henry, bracing up, "and after we are married we will issue an extra——."

"Sh-h," said Angelica, and then they went out for a stroll.

"Brevity is the Soul of Wit."

The following amusing story, which was told by Franklin, ought to be read and acted upon by all correspondents communicating their thoughts to the newspaper press: A young man, on commencing business, proposed to paint over his shop window, "John Thompson, hatter, makes and sells hats for ready money," to which was added the sign of a hat. One friend suggested that, as he made and sold hats, the word "hatter" was unnecessary. It was therefore struck out and the sign remained, "John Thompson, makes and sells hats for ready money." Another friend advised him to omit the phrase "for ready money," as there would occur occasions for selling on credit; and so the sign read: "John Thompson makes and sells hats." It was then hinted that the buyer of the hat did not care who made it, and that the sign would be better if it read: "John Thompson sells hats." But another amputation was in store still, for a critic pointed out the uselessness of the phrase "sells hats," for, said he, "no one would ever suppose that the hats were to be given away for nothing." Thus at last this aspiring tradesman commenced business, like many worthy successors, under the modest sign of "John Thompson."

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. Why They Call Him "Old Man."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and falling out before its time. Use something? I would, but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you 'Old Man Jenkins.' It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

THE WORLD RENOWNED

WALTER A. WOOD

NEW IMPROVED BINDER.

M. E. Conklin, Agent.

TECUMSEH, MICH.

1883. FOR THE SEASON OF 1883.

There has been already sold 439,554 of these Machines.

This record, more than anything we can assert or claim for the merits of the WALTER A. WOOD HARVESTING MACHINES, should commend them to the favor of the Farmer.

The evidence of the success of our machines, and of their unrivalled superiority in merit and public favor, does not rest upon any bare assertion of ours, but upon facts, and these facts are uncontrovertible. We have always maintained, and do still maintain, that the best possible test of merit in Harvesting Machines is their long-continued success in practical use, and upon this standard we have ever been and still are content to rest our claims to public favor.

It is a well attested fact by all who use them, that the Wood Machines require far less repair than any other machine in use. No other Binder or Mower is as durable and free from breakages.

The Wood Twine Binder as now made retains those meritorious features which have rendered it UNAPPROACHABLE BY RIVALS in the past, and which are already familiar to the farming public, and also contains such RADICAL IMPROVEMENTS as will certainly place it ANOTHER LONG STEP IN ADVANCE of all competition. In the family war of the different machine manufacturers the Wood has come off victorious and remains master of the field.

The manufacturers have followed up the new binder, during the progress of the harvest of 1882, through grain fields without number, from one end of the United States to the other, from Texas to Dakota, from Virginia to Vermont, and even as far north as Prince Edward Island in the British Dominions—where the latest growing grain crops are to be found—and the results of this close and protracted inspection have fully warranted the representations made, strong though they be.

There has been various improvements of importance in the details of both the Harvester and Binder for 1883. All we ask is for the farmers of this vicinity to examine the Walter A. Wood Machines before placing their order, and we have no fear as to the result, as it is conceded by all that it is the most perfect machine in all its details, manufactured.

[illegible] which Tilden was elected to the presidency, are the following statements concerning the tariff. This was democratic doctrine then and is today.

We denounce the present tariff, levied in nearly 4000 articles, as a masterpiece of injustice, inequality and false pretense.

It has impoverished many industries to enrich a few.

It prevents imports that might purchase the products of American labor.

It has degraded American commerce from the first to an inferior rank on the high seas.

It has cut down the sale of American manufactures at home and abroad and depleted the returns of American agriculture—an industry followed by half our people.

It costs the people five times more than it produces to the treasury, obstructs the process of production and wastes the fruits of labor.

It promotes fraud, fosters smuggling, enriches officials and bankrupts honest merchants.

We demand that all custom house taxation shall be only for revenue."

THINK OF IT.

Let the farmers in this wheat growing section, as he sells his grain and buys implements and other articles for his farm, reflect that his hoe costs him 20 per cent. more than it should, his plow 30 per cent., the pine lumber for fencing and building two dollars a thousand feet, the paint for his house twenty-five per cent., the clothing for himself and family forty per cent. more than he would have to pay if he was not taxed to increase the profits of those who make these necessary articles, while the wheat which he sells is not advanced in price a single penny. His wheat is not and cannot be protected. The price he gets for it is determined by what it brings in Liverpool. Taxation of home products cannot regulate their price abroad.—Wheat is an exportable commodity and it can only bring the price fixed in the markets of the world. The price is not affected by the tariff in this country. Hence, plainly, whoever may be benefited by taxes levied on commodities the wheat grower is not benefitted. He is taxed that others may grow rich. He buys many articles that are advanced in price by taxation while the wheat he sells is not increased in price a penny by taxation. This is worth thinking of.

REFORM MUST BE GRADUAL

The Savannah News, which is one of the best papers in the South speaks these words on the subject of tariff reform.

Mr. David A. Wells, in the Princeton Review, recently examined the tariff question with the view of determining the probable effect of the repeal of the tariff on iron and iron manufactures, and showed that while temporary disorder would result from its removal, the consequence of this would be the transfer of the iron markets of the world from England. Commenting on Mr. Wells' paper, Bradstreet's, an eminently conservative journal, whose editor, William F. Ford, is one of the best posted journalists on the subject of finance and trade, remarks:

"We believe it to be certain that ultimately the United States will attain to industrial independence, but this should be brought about through gradual reductions rather than by a sudden transition to free trade. It is plain that there is growing up in the country a stronger and more widespread belief that a day not far distant the United States will be prepared to assert their industrial independence. It is to this growing force that we have sought to direct the attention of manufacturers to the end that it might be recognized rather than ignored."

This presents the question in a nutshell. Protection has long since been put on the defensive, and has been driven to call the lobby to its aid. Frantic appeals are made to the ignorant, but every new exposure of the inequalities of the protective system weakens it. There is not and will not be any disposition to overthrow the system at one blow. That cannot be done, but it can be undermined gradually till the fabric of injustice falls.—Then with a fair field and no favor the industrial supremacy of the United States will begin.

As it is, manufacturing industry in this country is in much the same position as the land was in feudal times. The manufacturing barons of our day are as much the masters of the people as the lords of the manors were of their serfs.

Reform is necessary and will be had, but, like all healthy reforms, it must be gradual and carefully studied. The people are being educated and that is half the battle.

The recent rains have been favorable for wheat and oats on high ground, but corn and potatoes are none the better for it.

SONGS NEVER SUNG.

"How does that verse run? Something like this isn't it?

There are who touch the music string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them:
After a fashion they do sing,

"Yes, that's beautiful, perfectly and true," said your representative. The poet alludes to people who are somehow suppressed and never get their full allowance of joy and air. Which reminds me of a letter shown me the other day by Hiscox & Co., of New York, signed by Mr. E. L. Williams, of Chapman, Snyder Co., Pa., a prominent businessman of that place. He writes:

"I have suffered with asthma for over forty years, and had a terrible attack in December and January, 1882. I hardly know what prompted me to take PARKER'S TONIC. I did so, and the first day I took four doses. The effect astonished me. That night I slept as if nothing was the matter with me, and have ever since. I have had colds since, but no asthma. My breathing is now as perfect as if I had never known that disease. If you know of anyone that has asthma, tell him in my name that PARKER'S TONIC will cure it—even after forty years." There was a man who escaped the fate of those whom the poet laments.

This preparation, which has heretofore been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. Inasmuch as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, and unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining, and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes, with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.
C. RYND, M.D.

Dr. B. Mincer and part of his family will visit Devils lake, upper landing, June 5th, and remain a few days. Parties desiring his services should remember the date.

ORIGIN OF MEMORIAL DAY.

The Iowa State Register gives this version of the origin of Memorial Day, from which it appears that the custom was originated by Michigan women: In the course of an oration delivered at Des Moines on Memorial day, the orator said: "At Arlington Heights on the 13th of April, 1862, just one year after the fall of Sumter, Mrs. George B. Evans, of the Second Michigan, Mrs. Marcia May, wife of the chaplain of the same regiment, and her two daughters, Josie and Ella, gathered wild flowers and strewed them upon the graves of seventeen of the Fifth Michigan, one of the Seventh, and several unknown graves of other soldiers in the woods adjoining. In May, 1863, this same little band of ladies decked the graves of the dead at Arlington, and again in May, 1864, at Fredericksburg. * * * Of that little company of four ladies, two remain, Mrs. Evans, of Des Moines, and Miss Ella May, of Michigan.

THE WOOL PROSPECTS.

During the last month we have made steady and persistent efforts to develop the condition of the wool market of the country, in order to place the facts before the readers of the HERALD, believing that a large number of our readers have a very considerable pecuniary interest in the situation. We have dozens of letters from manufacturers, merchants, wool commission merchants and parties who have made it a business for years to handle wool. We intended to give a synopsis of them this week, but have been unable through press of other work to do so. From all we can gather, however, we conclude that the market will be a dragging one.—Farmers will not sell at the prices buyers will offer; at least they will not do so early in the season, and we predict, as the result, that it will take several months this year to market the clip which has usually been disposed of in as many weeks. Many dealers will not come into the market this year at its opening, and those who do show up will try and buy the best clips at from 28c. to 30c. per lb., and from present outlook, this is, perhaps all the market will warrant them in paying. All we can say is that at present we would not sell, but wait a little for further developements. The situation is liable to change, and that too, suddenly.

Adrian Press: Gil Osmun, of the Evening News, has been elected chaplain of the "third house" at Lansing. His devotional exercises are marked with great simplicity. The brothers are assembled, (at the bar), ready for the opening exercises, and in a sweet, yet solemn voice, Gil impressively says: "Turn, sinners, turn; wine is a mocker and strong drink is raging; be not giving to mockery, nor let your hearts be filled with rage, but that you may properly legislate, conform yourselves to law-ger." Each sinner "turns" and drinks. These exercises are always well attended, and like those of the W. C. T. U., open and close every session.

He was then a delegate from Litchfield county, Conn., at the session of the Association held in New York city. This was only a few months before he came to Tecumseh to reside. He returned home one hour in advance of the fatal train which met with an accident at Norwalk, Conn., by which several members of the Association lost their lives. Shall we celebrate the Fourth? is now the question which agitates some of our patriotic citizens. Every village and cross-roads in the country proposes to celebrate, and why should we stand idly by and keep our enthusiasm bottled up.

Coal dealers are already purchasing their stock for the next campaign and say that prices range higher than last season. This is well calculated to make consumers whose base burners are still in operation turn blue about the gills, but thank heaven the next will probably be an open winter.

Saturday night as Michigan Central laborers were engaged in laying a side track across the T. & M. railroad at Marshall, a portion of the Marshall fire department turned out with an engine and turned a stream on the laborers, causing them to surrender. The T. & M. road was watched all day Sunday to prevent the Central crossing.

Monroe Democrat: The Reporter tells of a Dundee man who while fishing in the mill pond one day last week caught an eel measuring twenty-eight inches in length, and affects to think it something strange, but we have heard of Dundee men seeing eels by scores at dead of night miles from any water. TELEPHONE TALK

The state telephone line was opened for business in this village one year ago the 29th day of this month, and the local exchange was in running order early in July. The latter began business with 27 instruments and there are now 46 in the exchange, and the prospects are favorable for adding ten or fifteen more within the next few weeks. The telephone is no longer an experiment. It has become an established institution, as much so as the telegraph, and will be used for short lines of communication as generally as the telegraph is for long distance, within a very few months at the outside. New state lines are in process of construction and new local exchanges are being put in all over the state. These two branches of the service stimulate and aid each other. The more towns are connected by the telephone the more valuable is the service of a local instrument. A new directory was issued on June 1st, which will soon be distributed to our patrons, from which appear that the following Michigan towns are now connected in the different state circuits:

HOUSE BREAKING.

Last Tuesday morning about three o'clock Dr. R. B. House was aroused by a slight rustling at his window, but supposing it was the wind blowing the shade, thought nothing of it. A little later he heard another noise and getting up discovered that his pantaloons were missing. He then put on his other pants and started in pursuit. Deputy Sheriff Stevens was notified and the two gentlemen scoured the neighborhood, but found no trace of anyone. The doctor returned home and went to bed, but after a little while made up his mind to look around a little more. He found a suspicious looking character, and after some positive persuasion took said man to the lockup. The chap would not give his name and was consequently arrested for house breaking as a man whose name is unknown and who refuses to give his name, and described as a man about 23 years old, about 5 ft. 8 inches high, wearing a No. 9 shoe and No. 4 hat, with light complexion and holes in the heels of his stockings. The chap was found under suspicious circumstances and has been seen here before some weeks since. The officers think that they have sufficient evidence to convict him.

Since writing the above, we have found out that his name is John Durhine. He is brother of Chas. Durhine, city recorder of Ann Arbor, and he also has a brother in the cigar business in Ann Arbor.

A number of houses have been broken into here this winter and spring, and it is about time something was done to find out and convict the parties. The Doctor lost nothing and held the chap up in good shape, and we hope that if he is found guilty no pains will be spared to give him all the law allows.

Every day adds to the popularity of Wm. McCowen's furniture establishment, and it is a generally conceded fact that first-class furniture can be purchased cheaper there than at any other establishment in Lenawee county. Every day he ships load after load to the different townships and when a person buys once of him they are sure to go there the second time. His stock is full and he respectfully invites all to call and examine his goods and learn prices before purchasing elsewhere.

R. C. VanAntwerp has his ice cream parlors over Marsden's shoe store again this summer, and he makes just as good cream as ever. If you don't believe it give him a call and see for yourself.

A. E. Kennedy's cigar store and news depot was connected by telephone yesterday. "Chuck" proposes to keep posted about base ball.

The Tecumseh Lumber Co. have the contract for furnishing all the building material for several depots on the M. & O. railroad.

An exchange says: "Every man carrying a pistol ought to be obliged by law to wear it in a belt at his side and have it labeled "emotional insanity."

The streets of Tecumseh were so crowded with horses and people last Saturday afternoon and evening that it was almost impossible to pass or repass.

An exchange quotes the following old couplet, and if the prediction proves true there will be an abundant harvest:

"A dry April and a wet May Fills the barns with corn and hay."

Thos. Lee, of Macon, took a splendid span of matched geldings to Detroit last week Tuesday and sold them to Wm. A. Butler, the banker for $700 cash down. It was a good sale, yet the team was well worth the money. Mr. Butler tried them all day and had them thoroughly examined by competent horsemen.

The Universalist society of York will hold their annual Lawn Social at the residence of Mrs. Mary Phillips, in York, Friday afternoon and evening, June 15, 1883. In the afternoon there will be a diversity of pleasant amusements, such as glass ball shooting, base ball, croquet, etc. In the evening there will be a dance. Bill only 50 cents.

THE DEERING!

First Born of all the Twine Binders,

We were the first to blind with the [illegible]
Perfection ever [illegible]
When farmers saw the [illegible]

We work farther into the [illegible]
No competition [illegible]
We test and [illegible]
The morals of the [illegible]

[illegible] at the head of [illegible] as the Deering Twine Binder [illegible] not merely from those who use [illegible] to confess its admirable qualities.

1st. Because in the field no Binder has been so reliable, so free from breakages.

2d. The season of 1882 was one Grand Triumph for the Deering. In spite of the tangled and fallen condition of the grain, it picked up and bound it cleaner and more perfectly than could have been done by hand.

3d. In field trials and at fairs it has been universally successful, carrying off more prizes than any other machine made.

4th. It was the ONLY Binder last Harvest that separated every sheaf in the worst tangled grain.

5th. The binding [illegible] attention for operation, no lost trip to operate, no moving the binder backward, [illegible] to bind the grain, no [illegible] for the bundles to be tied, but all the grain goes into the [illegible] and is bound in neat, [illegible] sheaves of exactly the same size.

6th. Every sheaf is firmly and symmetrically compressed, and then tied with a firm, unyielding band of twine.

7th. There is no equal to the Deering in twine.

8th. ITS NEW KNOTTYER CONTAINS LESS PIECES OF CLOCK WORK THAN ANY OTHER SERVICEABLE BINDER MADE. [illegible] Harvester and Binder as readily [illegible] and stopping.

9th. There is no [illegible] adjustment as the Deering Binder Reel. It can be placed in every [illegible] in operation.

11th. It is many [illegible] only the best materials are used and the most skilled workmen are employed, therefore it [illegible] and get out of repair.

12th. The Deering [illegible] and grain wheel in a greater distance than any other. [illegible]

13th. The Deering has been often tried, never denied, and ready and willing to be tried again.

It has GRAY [illegible] and is in all edds the best finished machine in the market. It is sold exactly [illegible] and its agents do not resort to [illegible] acts to make sales.

J. R. CAIRNS & SON, TECUMSEH, Mich. JACKSON, Mich., April 30, 1883.

GENTLEMEN—Replying to your favor of 24th inst., permit me to say that I am surprised that you or any intelligent man whatever, would notice for a moment the story told by your competitors that all the Deering Binders sent into Michigan this year were 1882 machines painted over. Surely your competing Binders must be without any substantial merits to recommend them to the farmers of Lenawee county, if their agents are obliged to resort to such dirty work as this in order to make their sales.

You are hereby authorized to use my name at any and all times to pronounce such statements as wilfull and deliberate falsehoods, told by men who know they are [illegible] when they peddle such stuff.

So far from this being the case, Mr. Deering is now running his shops on his twelvth thousand for 1883, double the number of any other manufacturer. Is it likely or probable that he would build so many if he had been forced to carry over the amount stated by your competing friends, or even one-half, or one-fourth as many.

The truth of the matter is, Mr. Deering has not been able to fill all his orders at any time since he has commenced building his present perfect binder, and now with his force turning out 300 of those new knotters every day, he can't begin to fill his orders. I am waiting now for machines for Michigan, where orders were sent in three weeks ago.

As to our new knotter being an experiment, I ask you as a candid man, if it is at all reasonable, or to be thought of for a moment, that Mr. Deering, knowing that he had already the best binder in the world, would invest $150,000 in putting this knotter on 15,000 binders if it was only an experiment. No, indeed it has been thoroughly tested in every possible condition of grain in the heavy straw of 1882, and the green wheat in Texas in 1883.

We warrant it the best knot-tyer for Binders now known.

Now in conclusion, allow me to suggest that you will not under any circumstances, and I know you are too far above such, resort to the dirty, slimy work by which some machines are forced on the market. Mr. Deering has, by twenty-five years of straightforward, honorable conduct, built up one of the finest industries in the United States, and cannot afford to wreck it by conducting his business in an unbusiness like manner such as you speak of. He can, and will meet all honorable competition, but when it becomes necessary to resort to trickery and very questionable methods, to sell his machines, he will withdraw them from the market and retire from their manufacture.

Very Truly Yours,

JESSE L. BERCH,

Dr. Rush's Medical Association:

Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it an enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, until I had become convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles to make a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,

Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

A Liberal Translation.

A young lady, moving in the most excellent society circles of Galveston, after much toil and practice at the piano, learned to play with considerable dexterity a piece entitled "Picnic Polka." It is something after the style of the celebrated "Battle of Prague," in which the listener can readily distinguish the roar of artillery, the rattle of musketry, the shouts of the soldiers, and the groans of the dying. In the "Picnic Polka" the moan of the wind among the trees and the joyous carols of the birds are reproduced, the finale being a thunder-shower which disturbs the sylvan revelers. It happens that a country cousin is in town just now, and the young lady thought she would play the piece to him and hear his comment. He is a plain, simple-minded youth, and although not very bright, is very appreciative. She told him what the piece was and then proceeded to give him the "Picnic Polka." The first notes were military and imitating, the audacious sought to be overcome by the sudden solitude of the place, upon which the gentle zephyr (not better sight). After she got through the prelude, she asked him if he did not almost imagine himself in a lodge in some vast wilderness. He replied that he thought [illegible] of getting off. Said he, "There is always some darned fellow who oversleeps himself and keeps everybody else waiting."

She did not care to discuss the point with the ignorant fellow, so, to conceal her emotions, she once more let herself out on the piano. The woods were filled with music. The mocking-bird whistled as if his throat would split, the cuckoo filled the sylvan bowers with his repeated cry, while ever and anon the mournful cooing of the dove interrupted the matin song of the lark.

"There, now, I guess you know what that sounds like," she said, as she paused.

"You mean that tootle, tootle, chug, chug, chug? You just bet I understand that. Many is the time at picnics I've heard it from the mouth of a demijohn or the bunghole of a beer keg."

Her first impulse was to hurl the piano stool at him, but it passed off, and once more she went at the piano as if it were the young man's head and was insured for double its value. The thunder growled, the lightning flashed from her eyes, and the first heavy drops are heard upon the leaves. She banged and mauled the keys at a fearful rate; peal after peal of deafening thunder perturbed the atmosphere and re-echoed in still louder reverberations until it wound up in one appalling clap as a grand finale. Then, turning to the awe-struck youth, she said:

"I suppose you have heard something like that before?"

"Yes, that's what the fellow with linen pants said when he set down on the custard pie."

The audience found himself alone, but he picked up his hat and sauntered out into the street, densely unconscious that he had said anything out of the way.

Wolcott, N. Y., June 18, '82.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:—Gents—A few weeks since, while suffering with bilious colic, which rendered me unfit for business, I was advised to try a bottle of your Syrup. I had no faith in it at all, at that time, for the reason that I had tried so many things in years past without receiving any relief, but before the first bottle was emptied I was feeling better than I had for many years. I know now that I have tried it that it is the greatest remedy that exists in the world, and I feel proud to recommend the Rheumatic Syrup to all sufferers from bilious colic, for I am satisfied it has cured me. Wishing you every success with your most wonderful Syrup I am sincerely yours,

Walter W. White.

How a Miller Paid the Parson's Salary

A worthy miller—as the story is told in the Rev. Duncan Dunbar's memoir—was once pained by hearing that the minister was going away for want of support, the church having declared that they could no longer raise his salary. He called a meeting and addressed his brethren very modestly, for he was one of the poorest among the comfortable farmers. He asked if the want of money was the only reason for this change, and if all were united in desiring the services of the pastor, could they still keep him? There was but one voice in reply. The pastor was useful and beloved; but the flock was poor!

"Well," replied the miller, "I have a plan by which I can raise his salary without asking one of you for one dollar, if you will allow me to take my own way to do it. I will engage to pay the salary myself. Have I your consent?"

Of course, they could not refuse this; although they expressed surprise, knowing the miller to be but a poor man.

The year drew to a close. The minister had been blessed in his labors, and no one had called in for money. When they came together, the miller asked the pastor if his wants had been supplied, and his salary promptly met? He replied in the affirmative. When the brethren were asked if they were any poorer than at the beginning of the year, each one replied, 'No,' and asked how they had paid nothing? He asked again, "Is any man here any poorer for keeping the minister?" and the reply was the same as before. "Then," he said, "brethren I have only to tell you that you have paid the salary the same as you always did, only more of it, and with greater promptness. You remember you told me to take my own way in this matter, and I have done so. As each of you brought his grist to mill, I took out as much grain as I thought your proportion, and laid it away for the salary. When harvest was over I sold it, and have paid the minister regularly from the proceeds. You confess that you are no poorer, so you never missed it, and therefore made no sacrifice. Now, I propose that we stop talking about poverty, and about letting our minister go, and add enough to his salary to make us feel that we are doing something." Mr. Dunbar used to say: "O, for a miller in every church!"

Some Old American Laws.

There is a long list of these quaint laws a few of which will suffice to exhibit the condition of the society in which they existed.

No Quaker or dissenter from the established worship of the Dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for the election of magistrate or any other officer.

No one shall run on the Sabbath day, or walk in his garden or elsewhere, except reverently to and from meeting.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair, or shave on the Sabbath day.

No woman shall kiss her children on the Sabbath day or on a fasting day.

No minister shall keep a school.

The selectmen, on finding children ignorant, may take them away from their parents, and put them in better hands at the expense of the parents.

Married persons shall live together or be imprisoned.

A drunkard shall have a master appointed by the selectmen, who are to debar him from the liberty of buying and selling.

Whoever shall publish a lie to the prejudice of his neighbor shall be set in the stocks or be whipped ten stripes.

Try Ayer's Cathartic Pills! They are mild and pleasant in action, but thorough and searching in effect.

ANYWHERE BUT IN NEW JERSEY.—A young man whose mind was wandering, was placed in the care of Dr. ——, of the town of ——, in the State of New Jersey, in the hope that he might under his judicious treatment, soon be restored to health. He was however, very discontented with the place, and with the restraint on his movements that was felt needful; and the doctor, more than once, in kind and friendly conversation, endeavored to make him feel reconciled to his situation. And as the young man was of a religious turn of mind, and a constant reader of his Bible, the doctor one day, when talking with him, said, "You ought to remember, my friend, that the apostle has taught us that in whatsoever state we are, we should therewith be content."

"Yes, yes," replied the other. "I know Paul says that; but I don't think Paul ever was in the State of New Jersey."

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving a dying one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, boneache and fever symptoms. 25c sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

A witness in a criminal trial in France was asked if he wasn't a relative of the accused. "How can I tell," was the answer. "I am a foundling."

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Fifty cents a bottle.

PIGS IN BOOTS.—A missionary writes from China: "At Chin Yuen we saw a herd of swine in boots. It seems that, having far to be driven to market, the poor creatures' feet get knocked up; but giving to them a pair, or rather two pairs, of boots made of straw, they are enabled to do the journey without risk of hurting ther feet."

Sins of the Fathers Visited on the Children.

Physicians say that scrofulous taint cannot be eradicated; we deny it "in toto." If you go through a thorough course of Burdock Blood Bitters, your blood will get as pure as you can wish. Price $1.00.

How to Shorten Life.

The receipt is simple. You have only to take a violent cold, and neglect it. Abernethy, the great English surgeon, asked a lady who told him she only had a cough: "What would you have? The Plague?" Beware of "only coughs." The worst cases can, however, be cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. In Whooping Cough and Croup it immediately allays irritation, and is sure to prevent a fatal termination of the disease. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

Dr. Roger's Vegetable Worm Syrup.

Is one of the most pleasant, or palatable preparations for worms we have ever known. It is thoroughly efficacious, and never requires any other medicine to carry it off. Children like it, as it tastes like honey.

Townsley's Toothache Anodyne cures instantly.

"I swear," said a gentleman to his lady love, "you are very handsome." "Pooh!" said the lady, "so you would say if you did not think so." "And so you would think," answered he, "though I should not say so."

A Common-sense Remedy.
SALICYLICA.
No More Rheumatism, Cout or Neuralgia.
Immediate Relief Warranted.
Permanent Cure Guaranteed.
Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic. Refer to all prominent physicians and druggists for the standing of Salicylica.

SECRET.
SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.
It has been conceded by eminent scientists that ointments, liniments and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases, which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.
SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.
REMEMBER
that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.
Give it a trial. Relief guaranted or money refunded.
Thousands of testimonials sent on application.
$1 a Box, 6 Boxes for $5.
Sent free by mail on receipt of money. Ask your druggist for it.
But do not be deluded into taking imitations or substitutes, or something recommended as "just as good," insist on the genuine with the name of Washburne & Co., on each box, which is guaranteed chemically pure under our signature, an indispensible requisite to insure success in the treatment. Take no other, or send to us.

HIS OPINION.
191 West Tenth Street, NEW YORK, Aug. 11, 1880.
MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:
I am slow to pin my faith to any new curative agent. Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster has won my good opinion. I find it an exceptionally cleanly plaster to use and rapid in its action. Many tests of its qualities in my own family, and among my patients, have convinced me that there is no other single article so valuable for popular use, none so helpful in cases of lame back, local rheumatism, neuralgia, congestion of the bronchial tubes and lungs and lumbago.
You may feel free to use my name.
Very truly yours,

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC.
ONCE TESTED ALWAYS PREFERRED.
This great remedy has won its way to the highest place in the esteem of the most intelligent people. There are daily recruits to its host of friends. Its performance is invariably BETTER THAN ITS PROMISE.
It gives tone and power. For complaints of the kidneys, bowels, stomach, liver and lungs, for all the subtle troubles of women, and for those bodily disorders induced by anxiety, care and mental strain, its effects will surprise and charm you. It is not an essence of ginger. Delicious to the palate, a sundowner to the liquor habit, and exceedingly helpful to the aged and feeble. 50c and $1 sizes.

Minneapolis Harvester

AND

Twine Binder.

The only Binder Manufactured having

MR. APPLEBY'S Latest Improvements.

The record this popular binder made last season in Lenawee Co., is abundantly ample evidence to convince any farmer that this is the latest improved, easiest handled and by far the most perfect working Harvester and Binder in the market. Mr. J. F. Appleby, the inventor of the Appleby Binder superintends the construction of the Minneapolis, and with the improvements of 1883, especially the double packer trip, it is thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Michigan farmer, as there is a great variation in the size and condition of our grain the Binder can be moved instantly and easily, also the raising and lowering of the whole machine by the driver in his seat.

The machine has all the valuable points that any other has and many very vital points that no other machine has. Last season we sold 32 of these machines to some of the best farmers in this vicinity and we have a good testimonial from every one of them, besides others that own other binders that have seen the superior working of the Minneapolis acknowledge its superiority over all others. No other Binders ever sold in Lenawee Co. can produce such a record.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

ADDISON ATOMS.

It's rain, rain, rain.
On Saint and sage and sot.
Until Cook & Town farmers begin to quake.

At a flood and judgment, too hot.

Farmers of western Lenawee will probably finish planting by the first of July if the rain lets up.

A barn belonging to Mr. Ward Sanford, Jr., of Woodstock, was burned with its contents last week. When first discovered the fire had not made much headway, but being started in several places it was impossible to save the property. The work is clearly that of an incendiary.

Barnum and Jumbo, more particularly the latter, will be interviewed by a goodly number of Addisonites when they visit Adrian.

The fine dental rooms of Dr. C. S. Bullen in the Harrington block are thronged of late by tooth-achers of all classes.

Rumor says a new dry goods store will soon be added to the list of business houses on the west side.

Shall we celebrate the Fourth? is the question asked, but not answered as yet.

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Wet, wetter, wettest.

The church steeple has undergone substantial repairs.

But little corn cultivated yet. In fact but a small portion of that planted has come up.

Children's day next Sunday. All who can are invited to come to the church Saturday afternoon to decorate the audience room.

Since our last, Alva Waring of New York and Geo. Shipman of Ridgeway Macomb Co., have made short visits with friends and relatives about here.

Mrs. H. B. Eaton and mother are visiting at Detroit this week.

L. C. Miller, of Howell made a short call this week. He is overseeing some farm work done on the old homestead.

The turnpike below the Ridge has become almost unsafe because of the monstrous holes which have been dug out by travel during the recent wet weather.

Mrs. Wm. Swick, of Macon, died last week. The funeral services were held Saturday.

The youngest daughter of S. V. R. Ely died at her sister's, Mrs. Wm. Clarkson's, last week of consumption. The funeral services were held at the house Sunday forenoon.

Railroad work moves slowly on account of the extreme wet weather. 57 car loads of ties have been received at Britton. Iron will be laid from that point west soon.

Something like a half-dozen Bunnell instruments have been added to our local telegraph line recently.

There is quite an epidemic among horses about here and our local veterinarian calls it Pink high. No serious results yet but some very serious cases.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

Commencement exercises begin at 10 A. M., on the 22d of this month.—The graduating class numbers twelve, nine girls and three boys. Miss Marianna Brown, the assistant principal, addresses the class. Miss Brown has held her present position for the past six years, and has been very successful in her work. She has accepted a place as teacher, the coming year, at Earlham college, her alma mater.—Miss Maggie A. Newson, a graduate of Earlham, has been chosen to succeed Miss Brown. Mr. Townsend, professor of mathematics for two years past, returns to his home, in Iowa, at the close of this term, and J. H. Douglas, jr., who graduated this year at Wilmington college, has been chosen his successor. Miss Celia B. Jones, a graduate of the Seminary, and known in this community as a very successful teacher, will be the fourth teacher for next year. The managers have decided to remodel and repaper the students' rooms, repair other parts of the building, and put in new heating apparatus during the coming vacation.

Many of the old hotels in New York preserve their registers, and have accumulated large quantities of them, preserving thus the autographs of generations of eminent men. Other hotels destroy their registers because the landlords cannot afford to be summoned into court to testify that Richard Roe staid over night in such a hotel at such a date.

BARNUM AND JUMBO

Everybody knows that Barnum's Great and Only is to be at Adrian next Wednesday, June 20. Read what the N. Y. Daily Tribune has to say:

The first performance of the season of Barnum's "greatest possible show on earth" was given yesterday afternoon at the Madison Square Garden. The attendance on the first day is usually less than later in Barnum's seasons, but the crowd yesterday proved an exception to that rule. The Garden was packed from the rings to the roof. What the modest handbill describes as a "simultaneous presentation of professional, arenic and caravan splendors," commonly known as "the grand entree," opened the entertainment. There was a wonderful array of elephants, giraffes, and zebras, sacred cattle, Zulus and trick mules, imperial cavalcades and Oriental spectacles—and all in gilt, tinsel, beads and gew-gaws. Nearly all that glittered was really gold. After this procession had wrought up the spectators to a high pitch of enthusiasm, women in August costumes rode untamed steeds and turned sumersaults through their hoops, did queer acts on flying trapezes, stood on their heads and spun like tops. One ambitious young creature tied herself up in a double bow-knot, almost turned inside out, and retired amid a tumult of applause. Lovely young men in tights, jumped vaulted, and turned sumersaults over all the elephants that could be found in the neighborhood, and only stopped when the elephants gave out. Small children on bicycles performed marvelous antics on those peculiar machines. Then the trained stallions pranced about on each other's backs, and danced to slow music. Not to be outdone by the stallions, the elephants took a hand in the performance, did things that no grown man would ever think of doing. There were juggling and plate spinning, balancing and tight-rope walking, things done in mid air and things on the ground, until everybody felt he ought to go out and pay another price of admission or feel he had cheated the proprietors. The feeling was not general, but might have been if there had been time enough. When the performance in the rings had been concluded there was a rush for the menagerie to see Jumbo and the baby elephant. There was no dissenting voice in the opinion that the show was the best which Barnum had ever given in New York.

In the evening the crowd was even larger than in the afternoon. P. T. Barnum and the Rev. Robert Collyer viewed the "triumphal pageant" and the circus from Mr. Barnum's private box. When the curfew tolled the knell of parting day the lowing crowd wound slowly o'er the lea, and in a few minutes the Garden was as quiet and as peaceful as the most unassuming cemetery.

A NEW BOOK.

Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, pastor of the M. E. church of this village, has just published a book for general circulation, entitled "The Marriage Guide." The first edition of the book has been issued and is now ready for sale. The table of contents, which we give below, will indicate the general character of the work:

Chap. 1.—To marry or not to marry.
Chap. 2.—Man's duty to woman and to himself.
Chap. 3.—When to marry.
Chap. 4.—The first step in courtship.
Chap. 5.—How to find the right one.
Chap. 6.—How to win her.
Chap. 7.—Conduct during courtship.
Chap. 8.—Marriage.
Chap. 9.—Married life, its duties and privileges.
Chap. 10.—Married life, its dangers.
Chap. 11.—Married life, its objects.
Chap. 12.—The home.
Chap. 13.—Marriage and phrenology.
Chap. 14.—The marriage relation, its nature.
Chap. 15.—The marriage relation, its history.

From a somewhat cursory examination of the book, we consider that it fills a long felt want in the community. It is couched in the choicest language, high minded in tone, and yet full of good practical advice on a subject in which all young people are interested. The book will be sold thro' subscription agents and we prophesy for it an extensive sale.

THE MORENCI PIONEER MEETING.

The Observer gives the following program of the meeting.

The old settlers of the Bean Creek country will observe the 50th anniversary of the first settlement of this region on the fair grounds in this village on Saturday, June 16th. The committee has mapped out a general program after the following order. There are to be two sessions, the forenoon to be devoted to the experiences and narrations of the early settlers, to be followed by a general picnic dinner. In the afternoon Gov. Croswell's great oration will undoubtedly attract a large audience of all classes of our people. The Weston Grange glee club, which has a State reputation for its masterly rendition of farm and other ballads will sandwich the exercises by their best music. If the clerk of the weather shall vouchsafe to us pleasant skies the occasion will be one long to be remembered.

It is rumored that weddings will make sad havoc in the ranks of Adrian school ma'ams during the summer.

Barnum at Adrian next Wednesday.

A Cure of Pneumonia.

Mr. D. H. Barnaby, of Owego, N. Y., says that his daughter was taken with a cough which terminated with pneumonia, and all the best physicians gave the case up and said she could not live but a few hours at most. She was in this condition when a friend recommended Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs and advised her to try it. She accepted it as a last resort and was surprised that it produced a marked change for the better and by persevering in its use a permanent cure was effected.

Mothers, Attention!

Chas. Jones of Edgerton, Williams Co., Ind., says, I have dealt in medicine a number of years, and will say that Dr. Roger's Vegetable Worm Syrup is the most valuable medicine I ever sold. My customers were so pleased with its effects that they purchased a number of bottles to have it on hand. It is all that it is recommended to be.

"Mother sent me," said a little girl to a neighbor, "to ask you to come and take a cup of tea with her this evening." "Did she say at what time, my dear?" "No ma'am; she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind. That was all she said."

"Is your wife a Democrat or a Republican?" asked one Rockland citizen of another, recently. "She's neither," was the prompt response, and then glancing cautiously around and sinking his voice to a hoarse whisper, he explained, "She's a Home Ruler."

Well Rewarded.

A liberal reward will be paid to any party who will produce a case of liver, kidney or stomach complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure. Bring them along, it will cost you nothing for the medicine if it fails to cure you, and you will be well rewarded for your trouble besides. All blood diseases, billiousness, jaundice, constipation, and general debility are quickly cured. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price only 50 cts per bottle.

Sold by C. A. Wright & Co.

Speaking of farmers' horses, the National Live Stock Journal says the kind of animal needed by most farmers is one weighing from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred pounds, and fifteen and a half to sixteen hands high, compact, vigorous, hardy and docile. If beyond this, it has fine form and style allied to good action, so much the better.

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving calling one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, bones ache and fever symptoms. 25c sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

An old tin kettle may not point a moral, but we have frequently known it to adorn a tail.

"The press is mighty and will prevail," said the susceptible maiden when she was hugged by her stalwart lover.

The reason why American men became bald-headed at an early age has been explained. They wear their straw hats until the early frosts strike in and kill the roots of their hair.

How's the Baby?

"How's the baby?" "His croup is better this morning, thank you. We gave him some of Thomas' Eclectric Oil as you advised, doctor, and shall give some more in an hour or so." Next day the doctor pronounced the youngster cured.

Popular Everywhere.

"Burdane," the French name for Burdock, is as popular in France as in America. As an anti-scorbutic, aperient and diuretic it cannot be to highly extolled. Burdock Blood Bitters combine "in a condensed form" all its good properties. For gout, cutaneous disorders and kidney troubles they are unequaled. Price $1.00.

There are two periods in the life of man in which the evening hour is peculiarly interesting, in youth and in old age. In youth we love it for its mellow moonlight, its millions of stars; its thin, rich, and shooting shades, its still serenity; amid those who can commune with our loves, or twine the wreaths of friendship, while there is none to hear us witness but the heavens and the spirits that hold their endless Sabbath there, —or look into the deep bosom of creation, spread abroad like a canopy above us, and look and listen till we can almost see and hear the waving wings and melting songs of other worlds. To youth, evening is delightful; it accords with the flow of his light spirits, the fervour of his fancy, and the softness of his heart. Evening is the delight of virtuous age; it seems an emblem of the tranquil close of busy life,—placid, and mild, with the impress of its great Creator stamped upon it; it spreads its quiet wings over the grave and seems to promise that all shall be peace beyond it.—[Lord Lytton.

Modern warfare, in spite of all its terrible paraphernalia, does not destroy nearly so many lives as did the sword, bow and spear of the ancients, whose loss in battle compared with that of armies that fight now a days is computed to have been 33 per cent, against only 8 to 11 per cent.

The Yukon, a river nearly as large as the Mississippi, flows through Alaska. Steamers can navigate it; and 500 miles from its [illegible] twenty-five miles wide, is formed at the influx of a large tributary, which can also be ascended by vessels.

The weight of the bell of Moscow, the biggest bell ever made, is estimated to be 355,772 pounds, its height is 19 feet, and it measures around the rim 64 feet. It has never been hung, but in a broken condition lies on the ground at Moscow. Empress Anne of Russia had it cast in 1653.

A process for casting a metallic bolster on pocket knives, so that the scale lining and blade are substantially secured by a single operation, has been invented by the foreman of the John Russell Cutlery Works at Turner's Falls, Mass. The cost of making knives is much cheapened by this process.

Americans probably consume in one form and another, including great quantities of candy, more molasses and sugar than any other nation, it having been estimated that every man, woman and child of our population eats forty pounds annually. The demand has increased 50 per cent. within twelve years.

More silk is now produced in the United States than in any other country. The best silk thread and twist in the world are now manufactured in the United States, and plain black and dressed silk goods made in this country wear better and have a more desirable texture than goods of the same grade from abroad. We no longer import handkerchiefs, and our ribbons are much in favor. The United States imported in 1879, 1,590,666 pounds of raw silk.

From the misty past comes a quaint story concerning the origin of corsets. A certain butcher who lived in the thirteenth century had a wife that talked too much, and to cure her of the sorry habit, he ruthlessly compelled her to wear a pair of stays so tightly drawn about her waist that she could breathe only with difficulty. Other husbands eagerly became converted to the plan as a wholesome means of restraint to the unruly tongues of their spouses, and soon almost every wife in the city of London was in the distressing predicament of the first victim. Finally the women defiantly rebelled, made a fashion of the thing, and from that time to this corsets have been one of the essentials of every lady's wearing apparel.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have a vast meaning when fully comprehended. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier; it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents of Baker and Hall.

If there be any truth established by the universal experience of nations, it is this, that to carry the spirit of peace into war is a weak and cruel policy. The time for negotiation is the time for deliberation and delay. But when an extreme case calls for that remedy which is in its own nature most violent, it is idle to think of mitigating and diluting. Languid war can do nothing which negotiation or submission will not do better; and to act on any other principle is not to save blood and money but to squander them.—[Lord Macaulay.

Why They Call Him "Old Man."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and falling out before its time. Use samething? I would, but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you "Old Man Jenkins." It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

South Carolina, without the aid of a "temperance party," passed a law which prohibits the sale of all kinds of intoxicating liquors, including malt liquors and wines, outside of the incorporated cities, towns and villages where such liquors may be sold under a license from the State. The price of the state license is $100, which must be paid into the county treasury for county purposes.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual caps and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing to the recess, and this forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, miners, engineers, farmers and other hard-working men, who are constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, these qualities are of the utmost importance.

VALDOSTA, Georgia, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

General Washington.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S SKETCH OF HIS LIFE AND CHARACTER.

The following, from an English paper printed during the Revolutionary War, (London Chronicle July 25, 1780) will be read with interest at the present day, as showing the estimation he was held in by his antagonists:

"As this gentleman always refused to accept any pecuniary appointment for his public services, no salary has been annexed by Congress to his important command, and he only draws weekly for the expenses of his public table and other necessary demands. General Washington having never been to Europe, could not possibly have seen much military service, when the armies of Britain were sent to subdue the Americans; yet, all, for a variety of reasons, he was by much the most capital man on the continent, and probably never has there been placed at the head of the American army. The very high estimation he stood in for integrity and honor, his engaging in the cause of his country from sentiment and conviction of her wrongs, his moderation in politics, his extensive property and his approved abilities as a commander, were motives which necessarily obliged the choice of America to fall upon him.

That nature has given General Washington extraordinary military talents will hardly be controverted by his most bitter enemies. Having been very early actuated with a warm passion to serve his country in the military line, he has greatly improved his talents by unwearied industry, close application to the best writers upon military tactics, and by a more than common method and exactness. In reality, when it comes to be considered that at first he only headed a body of men entirely unacquainted with military discipline or operations, somewhat ungovernable in temper, and who at best could only be styled an alert, good militia, acting under very short enlistments, unclothed, and at all times very ill supplied with ammunition and artillery, and that with such an army he withstood the ravages and progress of near 40,000 veteran troops, plentifully provided with every necessary article, commanded by the bravest officers in Europe and supported by a very powerful navy, which effectually prevented all movement by water—when all this comes to be considered, we may venture to pronounce that General Washington may be regarded as one of the greatest military ornaments of the present age.

General Washington is now in the forty-seventh year of his age; he is a tall and well-made man, rather large boned, and has a tolerably genteel address; his features are manly and bold, his eyes of a blue cast and very lively, his hair a deep brown, his face rather long and marked with the small-pox, his complexion sunburnt and without much color, and countenance sensible, composed and thoughtful. There is a remarkable air of dignity about him, with a striking degree of gracefulness; he has an excellent understanding, without much quickness; is strictly just, vigilant, and generous; an affectionate husband, a faithful friend, a father to the deserving soldier, gentle in his manners, in temper rather reserved; a total stranger to religious prejudices, which have so often excited Christians of one denomination to cut the throats of those of another; in his morals he is irreproachable, and was never known to exceed the bounds of the most rigid temperance. In a word, all his friends and acquaintances universally allow that no man ever united in his own person a more perfect alliance of the virtues of a philosopher, with the talents of a general; candor, sincerity, affability and simplicity seem to be the striking features of his character till an occasion offers of displaying the most determined bravery and independence of spirit."

Positive Cure for Piles.

To the people of this county we would say we have been given the agency of Dr. Marchisi's Italian Pile Ointment—emphatically guaranteed to cure or money refunded—internal, external, blind, bleeding or itching piles. Price 50 cents a box. No cure, no pay. For sale by Waldo & Doty, druggists.

To burn away in mad haste the divine aromas and plainly celestial elements from our existence; to change our holy-of-holies into a place of riot; to make the soul itself hard, impious, barren! Surely a day is coming when it will be known again what virtue is in purity and continence of life; how divine is the blush of young human cheeks; how high, beneficent, sternly inexorable, if forgotten, is the duty laid, not on woman only, but on every creature, in regard to these particulars! Well, if such a day never comes again, then I perceive much else will never come again. Magnanimity and depth of insight will never come; heroic purity of heart and of eye; noble pious valour, to amend us and the age of bronze and lacquer, how can they ever come? The scandalous bronze-lacquer age of hungry animalisms, spiritual impotencies and mendacities, will have to run its course, till the pit follow it.—[Carlyle.

A census enumerator in a New Hampshire town found one family where the mother's age was twenty-six years, and that of her eldest son fourteen years. Inquiry revealed the fact that the mother was married when eleven years and six months old to a man twenty-three years old. THE WORLD RENOWNED

NEW IMPROVED BINDER.

M. E. Conklin, Agent.

TECUMSEH, MICH.

1883. FOR THE SEASON OF 1883.

There has been already sold 439,554 of these Machines.

This record, more than anything we can assert or claim for the merits of the WALTER A. WOOD HARVESTING MACHINES, should commend them to the favor of the Farmer.

The evidence of the success of our machines, and of their unrivalled superiority in merit and public favor, does not rest upon any bare assertion of ours, but upon facts, and these facts are uncontrovertible. We have always maintained, and do still maintain, that the best possible test of merit in Harvesting Machines is their long-continued success in practical use, and upon this standard we have ever been and still are content to rest our claims to public favor.

It is a well attested fact by all who use them, that the Wood Machines require far less repair than any other machine in use. No other Binder or Mower is as durable and free from breakages.

The Wood Twine Binder as now made retains those meritorious features which have rendered it UNAPPROACHABLE BY RIVALS in the past, and which are already familiar to the farming public, and also contains such RADICAL IMPROVEMENTS as will certainly place it ANOTHER LONG STEP IN ADVANCE of all competition. In the family war of the different machine manufacturers the Wood has come off victorious and remains master of the field.

The manufacturers have followed up the new binder, during the progress of the harvest of 1882, through grain fields without number, from one end of the United States to the other, from Texas to Dakota, from Virginia to Vermont, and even as far north as Prince Edward Island in the British Dominions—where the latest growing grain crops are to be found—and the results of this close and protracted inspection have fully warranted the representations made, strong though they be.

There has been various improvements of importance in the details of both the Harvester and Binder for 1883. All we ask is for the farmers of this vicinity to examine the Walter A. Wood Machines before placing their order, and we have no fear as to the result, as it is conceded by all that it is the most perfect machine in all its details, manufactured.

SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours,

PHILIP MOORE.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 14, 1883.

The cyclone season seems to have broken down very early. Now look out for the potato bug.

All things human have an end. The star route jury will soon hand in their verdict and vacate.

Next week the Democrats will hold their state convention in Ohio, and then look out for fun.

The Tilden literary bureau is again in an active state of eruption. This has a suspicious portent.

Hendricks of Indiana, in a published interview has expressed himself in favor of the old ticket, Tilden and Hendricks.

Merrick's closing plea in the star route trial was a model of eloquence and power. He effectually silenced Ingersoll.

The Philadelphia Telegraph correctly remarks that "Ohio is going to cut a broad swath in the next Presidential campaign."

Bismarck has been chosen as the capital of Dakota. The German premier should now relent and let up in his warfare on the American hog.

The fact that so many Republican newspapers are in favor of Sam Randall for the speakership has a very suspicious look, to say the least.

Ex-Secretary Blaine's new book is looked for with much interest. It is said that it will contain a critical and exhaustive chapter on sunstrokes.

The remains of John Howard Payne have been finally laid away to rest, and the bones of the poet now slumber in their own Home, Sweet Home.

The refusal of Harvard college to confer the degree of LL. D. on Gov. Butler is a pretty good illustration of biting one's nose off to spite one's face.

Many theories have been advanced as to the cause of the accident on the new Brooklyn bridge. None of them are wholly correct. If the bridge had never been built, the accident would never have occurred.

When the "leading University" of New England refuses an honorary degree to Gov. Butler which was willingly given to one R. B. Hayes, it places the "leading University" in rather a sorry situation.

The New York World, under the new management, is rapidly increasing its circulation. It is now a first-class independent Democratic newspaper, something the party has long needed in New York.

Henry Ward Beecher has been creating a sensation again, having preached a sermon in which he discards in toto the doctrine of vicarious atonement. Col. Bob Ingersoll must look to his laurels, or Beecher will soon catch up with him.

Many people complain at the growing influence of saloons and the decline of the churches. The churches are opened for business one day in the week. The saloons are in full blast six days, and their back doors are generally left unbolted on Sunday.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 12, 1883.

Business called me to the office of the White Star Steamship Line one day last week. Clerks and messengers were perspiring as they rushed on with their work, while at the booking desk there was a line of people engaging passage for Europe. One gentleman was examining a diagram of staterooms on a certain vessel and finally selected two. "Will you reserve them for me fifteen minutes," he asked. "I want to ask my companion whether the location of the rooms suits him." "No sir," replied the clerk, "I couldn't hold them for you for ten seconds. Either you want them or you don't. If you please stand aside and let the next gentleman place a chance."

The rush to Europe is simply tremendous this spring, and now that the low weather has set in, it is almost trebled. Single men who can get off for a vacation of three weeks or a month, come to the conclusion that it is more pleasant and at the same time cheaper to take a trip over the Atlantic than to swelter away at some fashionable watering place or other summer resort. The Pavonia which left last week was full to overflowing, "and," said the agent of the Cunard Line, "we had enough applicants for berths to have filled and sent out another vessel of the same size. As it is I think we will have to put on extra vessels in a few weeks.—This is a thing which several lines have already done to meet the demand. As always, when the supply of a certain commodity is limited, the demand becomes greater and hence people who are anxious to be in the swim at present are ready to pay almost any price for a passage. The Duke of Athol, who sailed last week paid a man $500 for his ticket, which is a bonus of $400. There is not a passenger vessel leaving port now on which the rooms of the officers are not all let to passengers for good stiff figures. On one steamer all the bath tubs were fitted up as berths at night and rented out to people on condition that they would rise at 6 o'clock. It is not at all uncommon for people to go in the steerage, paying saloon prices, so that they really belong to the saloon list."

Everybody employed on the steamers of course make money, and now I find it quite intelligible how the saloon stewards so far from receiving a salary, pay the chief steward a bonus of $250 a season for the privilege of serving. The tipping system on board ship is carried on to a frightful extent. Down to the boots who gives your leathers a dull kind of polish everybody expects to be rewarded, and if you fail, woe betide you. Even the barkeeper beats you, for he never has any change when you purchase any refreshment. Said a gentleman to me the other day, "I bet you any amount that you want, that Jay Gould makes his trip around the world in his own yacht at less cost than Vanderbilt can travel to Europe in a passenger steamer and stay in Paris for a month." I replied that this was not a legitimate subject for a wager as he wanted to bet on a sure thing.

A comparatively large portion of travellers to Europe at present is made up of actors and actresses. I was speaking about this to a well known theatrical manager. Said he, "Although they all nominally go for rest, the truth is every mother's son and daughter of them is hopeful of making what they call a "London debut," and eventually getting an engagement there. The majority of them believe that it will help them here should they come back with a small sized English nimbus. Others again are finding that where they have been received as popular favorites, they are now losing their hold. Hence they expect to find pastures new, aided by their former reputations. Many too calculate on going to Australia. There is quite a number of American actors over there now, and they are doing well. Hence others mean to try it as well, and of course they all expect to come home laden with Australian gold."

William Ottmann, whose alleged theft of $47,005 worth of treasury notes, is again a topic for the Washington correspondents, has for two years been head bartender at one of the leading hotels up town. I saw him only last week and his face is growing more pinched and set from day to day. His hair is graying fast and his gray eye has that set expression which betokens that the man has been brought to bay and means to fight it out. His is another case of seeking to get rich too fast. He had one of the most prosperous bar-rooms in Washington. It was a little box of a place, but it was beautifully fitted up; the liquors were excellent and it was patronized by government officials and the best class of Washington male society. "Billy" kept a fast horse and had his daughter, a charming girl educated at a convent. Then he was seized with the desire of becoming rich, and becoming rich fast. The end of it was that his life was blighted.

Let them obey who know how to rule.

People wishing their teeth to look white,
Use "Teaberry" daily—at morning, at night:
It sweetens the breath and reddens the gums,

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

Dr. B. Mincer and part of his family will visit Devils lake, upper landing, June 5th, and remain a few days. Parties desiring his services should remember the date.

A DISTRESSING CASE.

The Adrian Times of Tuesday says: Mr. H. S. Russell, superintendent of the poor, was last Saturday apprised of what is probably the most distressing case ever brought to light in this city for years. He was informed that in the little house at No. 26, College avenue, a woman, who was already surrounded by eight children, had given birth to a child; that her husband, who had moved the family into the house about a month ago, had abandoned them and that they were in the most dire necessity, there not being a bed, or a morsel to eat in the house. The necessary steps for a speedy relief were at once taken, and the family are now comparatively comfortable, although a larger part of the children, the oldest of whom is but 13, have the measles. The wretch who thus abandoned his family when they were in the greatest need of care is Oscar Jones, and he is understood to have lived in the neighborhood of Wellsville before coming to the city. Provisions and clothing for their relief are being brought in by various prominent families about town, so that all their immediate necessities are supplied. As soon as the children recover from their sickness, the older ones will be provided with suitable homes, and Mrs. Jones placed in a position to support herself.

A DAY AT CLEVELAND.

Business having called us to Cleveland last week we had the pleasure of a day's sojourn in that beautiful city during the session of the American Medical Association. One thousand doctors were domiciled within the city limits for four days, and to say that the hotels were crowded would be drawing it very mildly. We arrived there about ten o'clock on Tuesday evening, proceeded to the Kennard House, and by dint of much coaxing engaged a cot for the night. The next forenoon we transacted our business and in the afternoon proceeded to the Case hall, where the sessions of the convention were held, to see what we could see. The first thing that attracted our attention was the unexpected harmony of the proceedings. One expects to see some fun at a medical convention: The next thing we saw was Dr. S. Catlin, of this village, who was on the anxious seat earnestly taking in the address which was then being delivered. We angled our way down from the gallery and through the crowd to the row of chairs in which the doctor sat, and finding a vacant seat enjoyed the scene and a palm leaf fan for an hour or so to our entire satisfaction. We then went with him to another hall where another section of the convention was in session. Owing to the large attendance and the length of the program each afternoon session of the convention was held in sections at five different halls. By this arrangement the necessary business was expeditiously dispatched. Dr. Vaughn, of Springville, and Dr. Peters, of Blissfield, were also in attendance at the convention, but we did not meet either of them. Excepting the inconvenience occasioned by the crowded condition of the hotels the strangers in the city were well entertained, and the session of the convention was generally regarded as a very successful one.

The T. & M. road was watched all day Sunday to prevent the Central crossing.

Pontiac Bill Poster: Allowing the little members of the Pontiac Band of Hope to march through the mud and rain Decoration day was, in our opinion, about as foolish as anything could be, and comes under the head of cruelty to children. To see big, healthy men riding along in carriages and these little boys and girls tramping through the mud, was enough to disgust the average spectator.

Educational News: Our attention has been called to certain vulgar language made use of by the teacher of a neighboring school, and to the use of objectionable modes of punishment. It is to be regretted that the present system of school supervision is so imperfect as to allow teachers to continue teaching year after year, whose manners are so rude, and whose moral tone is so degraded as to make them unfit to stand before their pupils as examples worthy of imitation.

A person who will drop a piece of poisoned meat in a door-yard, for the purpose of killing a dog is a coward, and would not stoop to any mean act. There are people of this description in this village, and they have already commenced their spring work. If a neighbor's dog troubles you make your complaint to him, and then if he fails to take care of it complain of him for keeping a nuisance, and if this fails, walk up like a man and shoot it and suffer the consequences.

Mr. Wentworth, the mill-wright, informs us that the work will be completed week after next, and that the mill will be the most complete now in Michigan.

WOOL PROSPECTS.

Prices for wool are expected to rule lower this season than last, and will open at from 33 to 35 cents. None has been brought into our market, the season being unfavorable for washing and shearing.

A small clip of wool was brought into Hudson last week and sold for thirty cents.

The last Michigan Farmer closes a lengthy review of the wool market as follows: "So far as Michigan is concerned, no washed wools are yet ready for the market, many flock-masters having only washed their sheep the past week. The wools of thoroughbred flocks are generally in first hands, and are likely to stay there until manufacturers and dealers are willing to pay something like a fair price for them. While undoubtedly manufacturers have been severely tried by the depressed state of trade owing to the tariff agitation and an unfavorable season, they know quite well that it is only temporary without Congress should repeat its folly of last winter, and that is not likely. It is therefore folly for them to attempt to bulldoze wool growers, who are quite as able to hold their wool as dealers and manufacturers are to do without it. As it looks at present the market is likely to be a very quiet one this season, with buyers offering prices far below the true value of wool. In such circumstances a little backbone among wool-growers will act as a tonic. It will not be wise to rush your wool into market until you know something about what you are going to get for it. Any anxiety to sell will give buyers a big advantage, and when once your wools are in the hands of the dealer and manufacturer the depression will have passed away."

CONNUBIAL CHAINS.

Marriage of Thomas Taber, of West Bay City, to Miss Rose De Puy.

Prominent among the social events of the week is the marriage of Mr. Thomas Taber, of West Bay City, and Miss Rose De Puy, of Tecumseh, which occurred last evening at the residence of the bride's father. At an early hour about forty invited relatives and friends assembled in the brilliantly illuminated rooms, which were decorated with a profusion of flowers, smilax and rare exotics, and at seven o'clock the bridal couple entered the parlors and took a position beneath a beautiful floral arch, from which was suspended a floral horseshoe. The bride was attired in rich stem green silk, with an elaborate garniture of oriental lace and natural flowers. The groom wore the conventional black. There were no bridesmaids. President Durgin, of Hillsdale college performed the ceremony in a solemn and impressive manner, after which a delicious collation, including coffee, cake, fruits and confectionery was served. The scene was brilliant as well as pleasing, and amidst a shower of congratulations and good wishes, the happy couple left on the evening train for West Bay City, their future home. Among the many useful and appropriate presents were the following:

Rush's Medical Association:
Dear Doctors—I unhesitatingly add my name to the long list of regular practitioners who have recommended your "Specific for Consumption." I have used it for many years in my practice for all pulmonary affections, and have always been more than satisfied with the results. I consider it the best compound known for all lung diseases.

Wm. G. Osgoodby, the well-known safe manufacturer of Buffalo, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Newark, and Atlanta, Ga., says:

Office of Osgoodby's Improved Safes, 17 South Broad Street, ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 13th, 1881.

Rush's Medical Association:
Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $2 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,
Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

Dr. Rush's Medical Association:
Gentlemen—I have been troubled with rheumatism for two years. I tried all the best advertised oils and liniments, and many first-class physicians without relief. Rules of Quoits.

A GOOD GAME FOR THE BOYS TO PLAY IN THE COUNTRY IN THE SUMMER TIME.

Quoits is by no means a difficult game to play, seeing that neither great strength nor science is required; on the other hand skill and dexterity, which are both acquired by practice, will make boy, youth or man a skillful quoit-player. There is of course a considerable amount of knack in the game, as in all games, and the player needs strength of wrist, for the acquisition of an accurate aim rests entirely with the degree of steadiness in this member when delivering the missile. So long as the space surrounding the "pitch" is fairly level the intermediate space may be rough or broken. Quoits "are of different sizes and different weights, but few good players use the former weapons for steel players, in addition to length of time, have to have the strength and endurance, should always use the lightest he can possibly wield. Steel quoits are in other respects similar to the other iron ones and as much care should be taken of them as with a pair of steel skates. The appended rules which were agreed to at the Birmingham Conference are recommended by all good quoit players:

First—That the distance from pin to pin shall be nineteen yards, and that the player shall stand level with the pin and deliver his quoit at first step.

Second—That no quoit be allowed which measures more than eight inches external diameter, and that the weight may be unlimited.

Third—That the pin be one inch above the clay.

Fourth—That all measurements shall be taken from any visible part of the pin to the nearest visible part of the quoit. No clay or quoit to be disturbed.

Fifth—That no quoit shall count unless fairly delivered in the clay from the outer rim, and that no quoit on its back shall count unless it first strikes another quoit or the pin.

Seventh—That an umpire shall be appointed, and in all cases of dispute his decision shall be final.

Coal Tar.

Every day adds to our high appreciation of this wonderful material for various farm uses. Dry lumber coated with it becomes almost imperishable, but its most remarkable effects are upon green timber. The increased value of wood seasoned in a sheltered place, or coated with it, has long been known. Timber for places requiring the greatest strength and durability is prepared in this way. Every one knows the worthless character of posts dried in the open air; but posts seasoned under shelter is valuable wood. The effect of coal tar is better than housing and many coats of oil; it excludes air and water, and the wood becomes like iron. A board of green cottonwood, well coated, has as straight as the best pine, and it is as durable used upon the sills and floors of barns; and around the openings upon swine houses and fences it would return to the farmer in durability ten-fold cost. Were it not for appearances we should advise its use upon the outside of barns. Its remarkable preservative properties and its extreme cleanness are in its favor. One barrel, costing two or three dollars, will coat the posts for more than one mile of fence, or would cover nearly all the out-buildings on a common farm. For all cheap buildings we commend coal tar and whitewash.

"A Blessing in Disguise."

454 Adelphi St., Brooklyn, N.Y., March 29, 1881.

No family should be without Allcock's Porous Plasters; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with Brandreth's universal life giving and life healing pills, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good and sound health. Mrs. G. Fox plains.

One Trial.

If you have been using other Plasters, one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their wonderful superiority. Take no other so-called porous plasters that claim to be better, they are all frauds gotten up to sell on the world wide reputation of the genuine article.

The greatest human virtue leans not proportion to human vanity. We flatter ourselves better than we are, and are generally disposed that others should think us still better than we think ourselves. To affects for actions or dispositions that merit praise is not to contract a benefit, but to pay a tribute. We have always praised some to fame which, in our own hearts, we know to be disputable, and which, we are conscious, to strengthen by a new suffrage, we have always hopes which we suspect to be fallacious, and of which we eagerly snatch at every confirmation.—Dr. S. Johnson.

SONGS NEVER SUNG.

"How does that verse run? something like this isn't it?

There are who touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them;
Alas! for those who never sing,

"Yes, that's beautiful, pathetic and true," said your representative. "This poet alludes to people who are somehow suppressed and never get their full allowance of joy and air. Which reminds me of a letter shown me the other day by Hiscox & Co., of New York, signed by Mr. E. C. Williams, of Chapman, Snyder Co., Pa., a prominent business man of that place. He writes:

"I was afflicted with asthma for over forty years, and was terrible at times. But December and January, 1882, I hardly knew what prompted me to take PARKER'S TONIC. I did so and the first day I took four doses. The effect astonished me. That night I slept as if nothing was the matter with me, and have ever since. I have had colds since, but no asthma. My breathing is now as perfect as if I had never known that disease. If you know of anyone that has asthma, tell him in my name that PARKER'S TONIC will cure it—even after forty years." There was a man who escaped the fate of those whom the poet laments.

This compound, which has heretofore been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. Because this ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, and unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger, we drop the misleading word.

There is a change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, and in the genuine medicine it the trade-mark of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

Medicinal Qualities of Buttermilk.

For a summer beverage, there can be nothing more healthy and strengthing than buttermilk. It is excellent for weak or delicate stomachs, and far better as a dinner drink than coffee, tea, or water, and unlike them does not retard, but rather aids digestion.

A celebrated physician once said that if every one knew the value of buttermilk as a drink, it would be more freely partaken of by persons who drink so excessively of other beverages; and further compared its effects upon the system to the cleaning out of a rusty stove that has been clogged up with ashes that have sifted through, filling up every crevice and crack, saying, that the human system is like the stove, and collects and gathers refuse matter that can in no way be exterminated from the system so effectually as by drinking buttermilk. It is also a specific remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion, soothes and quiets the nerves, and is very soporific to those who are troubled with sleeplessness.

There is something strange in the fact that persons who never tire of singing its praises, while those who are not fond of it never weary of wondering how some people can drink it. So far as is possible, persons should overcome their aversion to it, and learn to drink it for health's sake. One gentleman of our acquaintance is so extremely fond of it that we knew him one time to drink about three glasses, then set his glass down with a thud, exclaiming earnestly as he smacked his lips: "That's food and raiment both." While another buttermilk enthusiast made the statement once that where the liver has become lifeless from torpidity and inaction, and is too dead to perform its functions, buttermilk will cause a new one to grow in. Whatever exaggerated statements may have been made concerning buttermilk, its medicinal properties cannot be overrated, and it should be more freely used by all who can get it. Every one who values good health should drink buttermilk every day in warm weather, and drink as much of it as they can comfortably, and let tea, coffee and water alone.

For the benefit of those who are not already aware of it, I may add, that in the churning the first process of digestion is gone through, making it one of the easiest and quickest of all things to digest.

It makes gastric juice and contains properties that readily assimilate with it, with little or no wear upon the digestive organs.

Replacing a Horse's Shoe.

In the busy season on the farm there is often much time lost and work delayed by frequent journeys to the blacksmith shop. Many of these visits are unavoidable; but when made for the simple resetting of a single horseshoe, it is expensive. A job like the replacing of a "thrown" shoe should be done at home. It is not a difficult one, and the needed tools are few and inexpensive. A light hammer, a pair of pincers, a punch, all of which every farmer's work shop should contain for other uses, and a few horseshoe nails are all that is necessary. It might be well to add to this a blacksmith's plane to smooth down the face of the foot, but for the simple resetting of the shoe this is not required. If the shoe is only loose, it may be tightened by driving up the old nails and clinching them anew, but if quite loose it had better be taken off, which can be done with the pincers, care being taken not to break the hoof. All the old nails should be removed by using the punch. The most difficult matter is the driving of the new nails, which must be so "pointed" as the end that they may not go into the "quick" but come to the upper surface of the hoof an inch or so above the sole. This can be learned by watching a blacksmith, and if he is a good-natured one he will willingly show how it is done. A little practice will render it an easy matter to drive the nails in the proper manner. As the nails are driven through, they should be turned down, and afterwards nipped off with the pincers and carved in to hold firmly. The work of resetting a shoe can be quickly done, and at a time when no loss is incurred. The morning before work, or the hour of rest at noon, may be so employed, and a journey saved, of miles it may be, to the nearest blacksmith. The shoe may come off at a time when replacing it at once will save the labor of the team and hands for a half day or more, in which case the ability to reset the shoe is a very labor-saving accomplishment, and should be possessed by every economic and energetic farmer throughout the country.

Home-Made Feather Duster.

A feather duster is an article the convenience of which every housewife appreciates, but it is often too expensive for many farmers to buy. For all such, some hints as to how a duster of equal utility and durability to a store one may be made at home from the feathers that would otherwise go to waste, may be useful. If beauty is not sought, any round stick of the proper size, such as the end of a broom handle, will serve for the handle of the orush; if one happens to have an old duster handle that can be used once more. With a saw make a series of grooves or notches in the lower end of the handle. By the aid of a hammer the lower portion of each quill should be so flattened as to pass into the grooves. As fast as the feathers are put in they should be tied with strong twine; and as the work proceeds glue should be added, that the feathers may be more firmly fastened. In this way new rows of feathers, followed by the twine and glue, may be added until the end is completely covered and the duster is of sufficient size, after which the finishing row of large feathers, selected for the purpose, is placed around the whole, and tightly bound with twine. Outside of the base of this last row of feathers, a neat strip of leather may be gilded to both improve the appearance and render the feathers more secure. A brush thus made will serve all the purposes of a purchased one, and if the work is carefully and thoroughly done, it is neat in appearance.

Havesville, Ohio, Feb 11, 1880.
I am very glad to say I have tried Hop Bitters, and never took anything that did me as much good. I only took two bottles and I would not take $100 for the good they did me, I recommend them to my patients, and get the best results from their use.
C. B. MERCER, M. D.

During 1879, 20,059 applications for patents were presented in the United States patent office, 12,735 of which were granted. The total receipts of the office were $703,921.47; total expenditures $529,027.97, leaving net surplus of $174,893.50. On January 1, 1880, there was a balance to the credit of the patent office fund of $1,820,806.56.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla requires a smaller dose, and is more effective, dose for dose, than any other blood medicine.

Consumption.

Physicians used to hold that a fatal issue must follow the formation of tubercles on the lungs. So long as tubercular formations could be arrested, there was hope of a patient's recovery; but when these had planted themselves in the lungs, their growth was inevitable and fatal. But nature is wiser than physicians and teaches those who study her ways rather than books. Careful dissection in recent years has brought to light many curious facts. Foremost among these is the certainty that consumption in its tubercular form, is often cured. A series of post mortem examinations, in an Edinburgh hospital, disclosed the fact that the lungs of one-third of the persons who died after 30 years of age bore marks of tubercles whose growth had been checked, and in many cases the disease wholly cured. Part of the lungs have even been destroyed, and the cavities filled by the contraction and adhesion of the walls. In some cases tissue had completely inclosed the parts disintegrated by the disease. If consumption is curable, as these facts seem to indicate, invalids will never rest till they have ascertained the most effective methods of treatment.

Not one person in a hundred, at the age of sixty, can say that they are free from Rheumatic pains. All can be cured of this most dreadful disease by the use of Rheumatic Syrup.

To whom it may concern: Wolcott, N. Y., April 11, 1882.—This is to certify that I am an engineer by trade, and for the last five years have been troubled more or less with rheumatism, and for the last five weeks before this date I have been entirely unable to work, and when I commenced using the Rheumatic Syrup I could hardly leave my chair. After using one-half of a bottle of the Syrup I began to grow better, and am now at work as usual. Having been cured with three bottles I should advise any one troubled with Rheumatism to use Rheumatic Syrup. Enough cannot be said in its praise.

A Specific for Change of Life.

We are in receipt of a letter from J. T. Hamby, Esq., of Floral, Ark., in which the writer says: Samaritan Nervine cures female decline, and during the change of life it is a specific." Suggestive facts, truly. $1.50

Ungratefulness is the very poison of manhood.

Mr. Patterson meant what he said.

Lyman Dorman, of Huntington, Conn., August 29, 1866, writes: My boy, ten years of age, was taken sick with congestion of the lungs. An eminent physician of this place stated the boy would run down with Quick Consumption. A Mr. Patterson told me that Coe's Cough Balsam was curing similar cases, and advised me to try it. My wife laughed at me but I knew that Mr. Patterson meant just what he said, and I determined to try it. Two bottles cured him, and he is as healthy as any body.

Andrew's Bazar says: "Gathered waists are very much worn. If the men would gather the waists carefully and not squeeze so like the blazes, they wouldnot be worn so much. No More Rheumatism, Gout or Neuralgia.
Permanent Cure Guaranteed.
Five years established and never known to fail in a single case, acute or chronic. Being an eminent physician and druggists for its standing, prescribe Salicylica.
SECRET.
THE ONLY RESOLVER OF THE POISONOUS UREIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.
SALICYLICA is known as a combination remedy, and used in hospitals for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and lauded panaceas only scratch the disease.
It has been conceded by eminent scientists that certain applications, such as rubbing with oils, animal liniments, and sponging lotions will not cure the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.
SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.
REMEMBER
that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.
Give it a trial. Relief guaranteed or money refunded.

The Wonderful Efficacy of
DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS
Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?
Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and brings on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in times like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.
Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by all druggists at 25c. per box, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.
Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:
Gentlemen—At my request I have bought in open market samples of Benson's Capsicum Porous Plasters and Allcock's Porous Plasters, and have submitted them to chemical analysis to determine their comparative merits as external remedies.
I find in Benson's Capsicum Plasters valuable medicinal ingredients, which do not exist in Allcock's Porous Plasters; hence in my opinion they are superior to those of Allcock's.
Yours Respectfully,

The Northwestern Lumberman says: "Cedar is one of the woods that many pine operators are holding in reserve. On one stream in Michigan a large saw-mill concern owns a large body of cedar, but they will not sell a stick of it, and at present have no occasion to cut it themselves. They think it is good property to hold on to, consider[illegible] doubtedly they are right. When the company's pine is exhausted the cedar will come in play. This is but one of many similar cases."

Minneapolis Harvester AND Twine Binder.

The only Binder Manufactured having

MR. APPLEBY'S Latest Improvements.

The record this popular binder made last season in Lenawee Co., is abundantly ample evidence to convince any farmer that this is the latest improved, easiest handled and by far the most perfect working Harvester and Binder in the market. Mr. J. F. Appleby, the inventor of the Appleby Binder superintends the construction of the Minneapolis, and with the improvements of 1883, especially the double packer trip, it is thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Michigan farmer, as there is a great variation in the size and condition of our grain the Binder can be moved instantly and easily, also the raising and lowering of the whole machine by the driver in his seat.

The machine has all the valuable points that any other has and many very vital points that no other machine has. Last season we sold 32 of these machines to some of the best farmers in this vicinity and we have a good testimonial from every one of them, besides others that own other binders that have seen the superior working of the Minneapolis acknowledge its superiority over all others. No other Binders ever sold in Lenawee Co. can produce such a record.

THE MORENCI PIONEER MEETING.

The celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of Bean Creek valley took place at Morenci on Saturday last. A large gathering assembled early in the day. A double program was presented sandwiched with a picnic dinner.

After a little preliminary visiting and handshaking the meeting organized by electing John C. Porter president, E. D. Allen, secretary, and O. E. Green treasurer. The forenoon was largely given up to an experience meeting, at which several of the old settlers recounted the trials and privations incident to their early pioneer life. The speeches were interpersed with music by the Lyons cornet band and the Weston glee club. After a concluding song by the Glee club, the president announced that they would adjourn for dinner, and in a short time the pioneers were attacking the eatables with the same vigor and earnestness that characterized their attacks on the virgin forests years ago.

The exercises for the afternoon were opened by music by the band, and a song by the glee club, after which the president introduced Judge Stacy, of Adrian, who delivered the address of the afternoon.

The Judge briefly spoke of the early history of the county, the growth of its schools and churches, and the improvement of its farms. The first land entered in the county was located at Tecumseh in 1823. The first 4th of July celebration was held at Tecumseh in 1825, at which forty-seven persons met to keep in remembrance the anniversary of our independence. The Judge's first visit to this section was made in 1844, when in company with Judge Beaman, he stumped the country for the democratic candidates for president and vice president. The speaker closed with a few remarks to the old settlers who were grouped in front of him, reminding them that their ranks were gradually thinning and that ere long the farms they had helped to clear, and the familiar places they were wont to visit, would know them no more.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Hon. Geo. W. Moore, of Medina, gave a historical sketch of Bean Creek settlement, which extended 50 miles north and south, by 20 miles east and west. Of those who helped to make that settlement, only a few are left to celebrate this, its fiftieth anniversary.

After music by the band, Hon. T. F. Moore, of Madison, delivered an earnest and eloquent address.

The appropriate song, "One Day Nearer Home," was then sung by the glee club, after which T. S. Baker recited the poem, "Fifty Years Ago."

The exercises were concluded by a song by the glee club, entitled "The Jolly Old Tanner," and the giving of three cheers for the speakers, the band and the glee club. It was estimated that fully one thousand people were present to witness the exercises.

The Sea Serpent's Rival.

This from the Virginia City Enterprise: The big fish of Lake Tahoe again made his appearance day before yesterday. He suddenly rose in front of the steamer, Governor Sanford, and disputed her passage. There was quite a rough tussle for about ten minutes, when the fish leaped upward and snapping off the bowsprit, went away with it in his mouth. As the fish is making so much trouble, the owners of the steamers will send below for a harpoon to be fired from a cannon, and will try to kill it. Heretofore the fish has only been seen two or three times in the past twenty-five years. In 1868 he attacked a large boat and drowned four Canadians, since which time he has not been seen till this year.

Peterson's Magazine for July is on our table, ahead of all others, and even more brilliant than usual. The leading illustrated article is entitled "Where Colonel Newcome Died," and will be read, with the greatest interest, by every admirer of Thackeray. The principal story is "A Fifth Avenue Romance," a novelet of which the first four chapters are given, and which, besides being written with great spirit, is evidently from the pen of one entirely at home in the society she describes. The other stories however, are all exceptionally good. We really do not see how any lady can do without this magazine. It combines more, and of a better quality, at a less price than any other. The terms are but $2 a year, with great deductions to clubs, and handsome premiums to persons getting up clubs. Specimens are sent gratis, if written for, to those wishing to get up clubs. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The June number of the Grand Army Magazine contains a very interesting article on the Toledo War from the pen of Geo. C. Bates, who now resides at Denver, Colo. We shall endeavor to give the article to our readers before long.

The Port Huron hotel keepers, liquor dealers, etc., are trying to arrange matters so that the local celebration will take place on the 3d instead of the 4th of July. In Eaton county a number of farmers living northwest of Bellevue have made a practice of late of coming to town Saturday afternoons and filling up with "that liquid that kills grief," and having a regular picnic. Last Saturday was no exception, and Monday morning the village marshal swore out warrants for half a dozen or more, who were brought before the justice and fined $3 apiece and costs, and warned that the fine would be doubled for each subsequent offense. Most of the parties are well-to-do farmers.

JENNIE'S GRADUATION DRESS.

"Now go on with your studying, Jennie. It's useless to discuss the matter.

"But, mother, I don't see——

"Of course you don't see, dear, but when your father has decided, he has decided, you know. Don't think any more about it. Come, I can't spare you but fifteen minutes more. You must help me on Johnny's jacket—just the button-holes, my eyes are so poor.

"Why don't you get Miss Stitchson to make the button-holes?"

"Don't ask me. What did your father say yesterday noon, and again just at supper time? If you will make them I can get the jacket finished to-night. He needs it bad enough.

"Now, mother Mayberry, it's too bad! Tom's suit is shabby, but I don't believe that he cares. One day more won't make much difference, anyway; and I will help on the button-holes to-morrow afternoon. If Prudie don't come for me to practice that duet with her."

"No, no, dear. 'Never put off till to-morrow what can be done to-day'—Grandma's motto, you know. I wish you would bear it in mind more, but you do. There—now [illegible] mother would keep your thoughts on your lesson. I shan't speak for fifteen minutes."

At this Jennie resumed her studying, for she was as desirous as her mother was for her to be correct in recitations. She had been dreading this last review in history, which was to determine her rank in scholarship. And her father was anxious that she should stand high at graduation—only three weeks hence. He had even taken pains to go over with her all the battles of our civil struggle and the events of the Franco-German war, the dates were such a trouble to her; and taught her an old method of his own [illegible] memorizing such things accurately.

She went on patiently with the words of the book. But I am sorry to say her thoughts wandered to Prudence Winn's new dress, and to a small package in her pocket which she had not yet had the courage—opportunity, she would have said—to show her mother; yet, which she must see this very evening if her long-cherished hopes were to be fulfilled.

A pencil was needed to mark the battle of the Wilderness for her memorizing method, and in taking it from her pocket out came the package also. Her pink cheeks took on a deeper hue as she hastily snatched at it before it fell to the floor, and there was a confused droop of her quivering eyelids before her mother's questioning glance. Not a word was said, but Mrs. Mayberry extended her hand, and Jennie dared not ignore the unspoken request.

"What does this mean, daughter? Jordan & Marsh's shop bill—black silk samples! —said Mrs. Mayberry, slowly, as she unfolded the little package.

"I wanted to know what it would cost," came the reluctant words, as the girl's nervous fingers turned and re-turned the pages of her history. "Other girls, lots of them, do."

"Do what?"

"Send for samples."

"Without consulting their parents? I hope not, Jennie. How could you?"

There was no answer, and the question was repeated. But before she had time to reply, Mr. Mayberry and Tommy, who had been busy over an hour in the barn looking after the comfort of the little heifer and Nan, her mother, and seeing that Jinks, the old roan, and Daisy, the pony, were all right, and everything about the premises snug and orderly, came hurrying in.

Mr. Mayberry, quick to read faces, saw that something unpleasant was under consideration. Presuming [illegible] was the same subject—graduation and its expenses—which had been talked over at tea time, he said: "I've been thinking it all over, Jennie. I can't bear to have you feel unhappy and dissatisfied, and instead of giving money for hiring music that day and evening I'll let the class have the use of our piano, you and Prudence Winn can play well enough for anybody who'll be there. How do you like that? I'll take it to the schoolhouse, and back again, too.

Jennie did not answer. She had not recovered her confusion, and only a sickly smile showed that she understood his suggestion.

"A good idea—don't you think so, mother?" he added, with a little chirrupy laugh, which Mrs. Mayberry answered with another—but hers was forced and hollow.

Tommy saw the samples of silk, still in his mother's hand. "Something for my new jacket trimmings, is it?" he asked.

"Oh, no. Jennie, you might as well tell your father all about it," was the response, in low sad tones.

Jennie began to cry.

"Hi! hi!" said her father, cheerily. "This won't do for a seventeen-year-old young lady. What's up? I don't see anything to cry about. You're getting nervous, sis. Too much study I'm afraid. I shall be glad when you get through this terrible last term. But you're coming out well—that's not the trouble, I hope? Let's run over the battles again, so as to be sure of them." And he took up the book she had pushed aside.

Mrs. Mayberry laid the strips of silk upon the book. "What do you think of those?" she said, gently.

"Those?" he asked. "Why, what are they? How came you by them?"

"Is it best for Jennie to have a graduation suit like either of them?"

"Our Jennie? Our little Jennie rigged out like a fifty-year-old? You're joking, wife!"

Jennie had ceased crying, and now looked up anxiously.

"Never was I more in earnest, John."

"Well, I don't pretend to know about these things. But you don't really want it, do you, child? Such a gloomy thing. Why, you ought to have something bright and cheerful then, it seems to me.

"It would be very serviceable," said Jennie, meekly.

"Serviceable—how?" queried her father. "Your mother's dresses are always serviceable, and they are not silk. And then look at the cost of it! Ten—fifteen dollars I suppose."

"More than double that," returned Mrs. Mayberry.

"That settles the question. No, it will not be serviceable for my daughter—not at that price."

"But if I get the school at Stapleton?" asked Jennie.

"Oh! If! Time enough to talk about silk dresses when you've money that you don't know what to do with. If you do teach you shan't begin for over a year."

"More than half the girls in our class will have silks for graduation, Trudie says, and—"

"I suppose she will; she looks like that kind of a girl. And, as usual, her father is going to borrow my mowing machine next summer, and the new plow, that I must buy in April. No, no, daughter—no black silk for you yet. However—let me see. I have it now! One of my happy thoughts—just in the nick of time, I declare!"

He drew out his pocketbook, and from its folds took several bank-bills. "Mr. Simonds paid for his hay this afternoon. I'm right glad to get the money just now—was intending it for a certain purpose, a plan your mother and I made a while ago. But I've changed my mind within an hour, and, Jennie, if you'll wear the same dress you have on now—this neat gray flannel, with the pretty pink neck-tie—at the graduation, you shall have every cent he paid me, to spend as you choose."

Jennie looked troubled.

"I'll be there to see," he added. "Moreover and furthermore," he continued, merrily, "Tommy and I will get as many spruce trees and as much evergreen to trim the school-room as you will accept. And mother'll lend all her plants, every flower-pot, I've no doubt."

"Certainly, with pleasure," responded Mrs. Mayberry.

"The graduation, or commencement, rather—for then you will really begin your life as a woman," said Mr. Mayberry, "ought to be a joyful occasion, and yet a serious and thoughtful one, as you then lay aside childish things and take the first step toward the sober realities of life. And I want you to know, Jennie, that the decision you will have much to do in determining your future course. Don't begin with show and extravagance, then, even if you—that is—can afford it; it would not be right or becoming."

"Mike Brady hasn't any overcoat, father, because Mary's got to to have a new gown to graduate in," said Tommy.

"And Mrs. Drayton told me a fortnight ago that Hannah had left the High School on account of the expense of graduation," said his mother.

"Well, I suppose there are others 'in the same box,' as Uncle Russel expressed it. He said to me the other day that he shouldn't be able to take up his note as soon as he expected, next month, his two boy's school expenses are so great this last term."

"All the girls are telling what they shall wear, and I thought—I expected—" began Jennie, in a trembling voice.

"Think of it over night, dear. You have had good teachers, and you are fond of them, I know, and are attached to your mates. You have had many happy hours in the old school-room, and will wish to look back on the last days spent there with pleasant memories. Spend the money—it is yours now—in a way that will give you the most delightful recollection."

"Now, please, let us drop the subject," said her mother, laying the samples on her work-stand, and taking up Tommy's jacket. "Am I to have your help on the button-holes, dear?", she added, quietly.

Jennie gave her a bright smile, gathered up the bits of silk, went directly to the stove and threw them in the fire.

"Button-holes, buttons—anything you say," was her answer, as she seated herself on a stool at her mother's side, that both might sew at the same time.

"How about your battles? Dates all right?" asked her father. "Let me hear them."

She recited them slowly and correctly, ending with a gay laugh, and saying: "I was determined to have them right."

"And you have succeeded. Add another—a victory for General Goodsense, at Mayberry Point. What's the date?"

"Never mind. Graduation day we'll call it, perhaps," and having clasped her purse with a vigorous snap, there was a tinkle of its steel rings as she slipped it into her pocket; and then her skillful fingers ran rapidly through the mazes of button-hole stitch. So Tommy's jacket was completed, and he was glad enough to have it ready to wear the next day.

Graduation day was remarkably fair for March. The school-room was crowded with the parents and friends of the pupils. Everybody admired the decorations of the evergreens and flowering plants, which Mr. Mayberry not only provided, but assisted in arranging.

Not one of the pupils passed more creditably through the exercises than Jennie Mayberry, and certainly not one looked prettier than she in her modest gray dress, with a pink bow at her throat. More than one among the gentlemen visitors inquired who that handsome girl in gray was—"And such easy, charming manners," added some, "And such a fine scholar," said others.

The music—only "Jennie Mayberry's piano, and singing by the pupils"—was liked so well that a persistent encore of the last song brought its repetition; during which Mr. Mayberry, bearing a large package, passed slowly up one of the crowded aisles to the teachers' platform. When the singing ceased, all eyes turned in expectation towards him as he carefully unfolded a large picture from its wrappings.

It was a fine engraving in a beautiful frame. "My daughter's gift to the school, in memory of pleasant hours here passed," said Mr. Mayberry to the Principal.

A complete surprise was this, and everybody seemed astonished at the generous gift. In a few words Mr. Mayberry told the story of its purchase. Then it was hung on the wall back of the teachers' desks.

And that is the way that the change in the graduation exercises of the High School at Mayberry Point was brought about; and why the pupils wear their everyday dresses, and furnish their own music, and make the decorations themselves for that occasion. The reason, too, that there is always such a large class to graduate; and that there is less love of dress and finery among the young people of the place; and such good books in its school library; and so many nice pictures on the school-room walls; and those two Rogers' groups in the corners.

A Remarkable Cure of Scrofula.

William S. Baker of Lewis Vego County, Ind., writes to tell you that my son was taken with scrofula in the hip when only two years old. We tried several physicians but the boy got no relief from their treatment. Noticing your Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup recommended so highly, I bought some of it of you in the year 1862, and continued taking it till the sores finally healed up. He is now 21 years of age, and being satisfied that your medicine did him so much good when he used it, we want to try it again in another case, and now write to you to get some of it.

Baker's Pain Panacea cures pain in man and beast. Use externally and internally.

Shakespeare foresaw that oleomargarine would some day be used as a term of reproach when he wrote: "O, thou mechanical salt butterman!"—Puck.

Does Might Make Right?

THE TABLES TURNED.—A HACKMAN WHO UNDERSTANDS THE RULES OF RAILROAD TARIFFS.

A communistic person identified with the dangerous classes of the Comstock and notorious for his disregard of truth and contempt for vested rights, has just returned from a visit to San Francisco. This morning he endangered the good name of the Chronicle by entering its editoral room. The nihilist declared that he had "a good thing on Stanford and Steve Gage," but he supposed the Chronicle, like the rest of the corrupt and time-serving press, would be afraid to publish it.

"Tell your story," said the editor with dignity, gazing inquiringly at the boot of the socialist, which was resting upon the editoral table. The boot remained there, however, while the following ridiculous narrative was delivered:

"Its fine weather at the bay, and everybody who can afford it takes a spin occasionally out of the dust and heat. Last Saturday Stanford and Gage were walking along Kearny Street, and when they got to the corner of Bush the Governor took off his hat, wiped his brow and remarked:

"Steve, it's too hot for anything. What do you say to a breath of fresh air?"

"Have we time?" inquired Mr. Gage, pulling out his watch. So did the Governor, who replied:

"There isn't anything very pressing for a couple of hours, I guess, and we may as well take a spin out to the park. It isn't worth while to have out my horses. Let's take a hack, and then we can enjoy a walk when we get there. It'll be better than riding around the drives."

So they got into a coupe and were driven out to Golden Gate Park. At the entrance the governor and Gage alighted.

"What's the fare?" asked the governor.

"On'y $15, guv'nur."

"What!" yelled Stanford and Gage in the same breath.

"Fifteen dollars," repeated cabby, unbuttoning his coat and spitting on his hands.

"But my good man," protested the governor, "such a charge is exorbitant. The law confines you to a reasonable price for your services, and you can be arrested and punished for such a violation of the ordinance.

"Hang the law!" growled cabby. "My money bought and paid for this hack an' hosses, an' as Guv'nor Stanford said in his letter to the New York Chamber of Commerce, 'the essence of ownership is control.'"

"Hem!" coughed the governor, looking slyly at Steve, who began to grin. "That's all well enough when applied to my railroads, but—but—er, now if you charge us fifteen dollars to bring us to the park, what on earth would you charge us to take us to the Cliff House?"

"Five dollars."

"From here?"

"No: from the city."

"But it's twice the distance!"

"Yes, but it's a competitive point. Fifteen to the park, five to the Cliff. No hoggin' about it. 'Through rates to the Cliff, local rates back to the park added'—just as you fellers do when you charge $300 for drawing a carload of stuff from New York to 'Frisco, and make it $800 if you drop the car at Elko, about 500 miles nearer New York."

It was Steve's turn to cough and the governor's to grin.

"Well, said the governor with a sigh, "take us to the Cliff."

At the Cliff House the governor and Stephen drank their beer and smoked a cigar, and listened to the barking of the seals, and filled their lungs with the sea-breeze. Suddenly Steve clapped himself on the leg and cried out:

"By jove, governor! I forgot that lot of coal of Smith's that the sheriff is to sell at 3 o'clock. It's 2 now. If we miss that, a chance to save at least a thousand dollars will be gone."

"Good heavens!" cried the governor snatching out his watch, "let's hurry back at once. Driver! Oh, driver!"

"Here, sir," answered cabby, who had been leaning over the balcony parapet within ear-shot, "here, sir."

"We want to return to town immediately," cried Mr. Gage.

"Ya-as, I s'pose so," said cabby, slowly chewing a straw, "but I'll take my pay in advance, if it's all the same to you gents."

"Taint enough," said cabby contemptuously.

"In heaven's name, how far will your extortion go?" snorted the governor. "How much more do you want?"

"Five hundred more," calmly replied the hackman.

"Hey?" shrieked Steve and the governor.

"How sir—er—damme, sir! how do you dare ask such a price for driving two gentlemen four or five miles?" spurted the governor.

"I base my charge on 'what the traffic will bear,' same as the railroad does," replied the hackman, with a grin. "If taters is sellin' in Los Angelos for fifty cents a bushel and at $3 a bushel at Tucson, you fellers charge the poor devil of a rancher $2.50 a bushel to haul his taters to Tucson and gobble all the profit. Now, I ain't a hoggish as that. I heered Mr. Gage say if he could get into town by 3 o'clock he could make a thousand dollars. As there ain't no other hack here, I'm as good as monopoly for this wunst as any blasted railroad on earth; but ain't so greedy. I dont want nil you can make by usin' my hack. I'm willin' to get along with half.

"Now, see here," said cabby, as he closed the door of the hack on his victims, "I've done for wunst what you roosters day in an day out have been doin' for years, an' made your millions by it. I happened to be able to give you a small dose of yer own medicine for wunst, an' I don't want you to do no kickin. I know you kin send me to jail for runnin' my business on your principles, but if you jails me I'll have to have your blood when I get out, an' don't you forget it."

Hereupon the hackman clapped the door to with a bang, and climbing to his seat drove at a rattling pace to the place where the sheriff was about to sell out poor Smith.

Smith was a coal dealer who didn't have special rates.

When the nihilist had finished this absurd and libelous tale he took his foot off the editoral desk, laughed hoarsely and departed for the nearest saloon.

Where are our Boys?

One of our exchanges asks "Where are our boys at night?" We can't tell. And it would take a prophet or the son of a prophet to tell where some of them are in the daytime. When the first bell rings in the morning the good little boy hies away toward the school house, and as soon as he is out of sight skins off toward the creek for a quiet swim. And when he should be mastering vulgar fractions and the history of his country, he is monkeying up and down the creek, diving off the bank and tying knots in the clothes of the other bad boys. Then he comes back, and at noon turns up at the dinner table as hungry as a bear and hurries back to school. In the afternoon he varies the programme by going down in the woods and having a game of seven up, or learning the mysteries of chewing plug tobacco down behind the corn cribs near the depot.

We are pained to see this. Instead of studying and becoming wise and great men like we are, they will go the other way and eventually get to be nothing more than mere politicians and members of the legislature. Turn back, before it is everlastingly too late.

We once knew a little boy who wouldn't go to school. He monkeyed around town peddling bills for the shows, ringing bells for auctions, etc., anything under the shining sun to stay out of school. Well, he didn't amount to much as a scholar, but he could swear just like a grown person, chew dog-leg tobacco, and lie like a stump speaker.

There was a great, and good man living in the same town who had gone to school when he was young, had been corporal in the militia, assistant secretary in a church choir, wore a plug hat and wanted to go to the legislature. Among his other vast possessions he owned a mule. As he (the mule, not the man) was rather light behind, and it was dangerous within a radius of forty feet from his heels, the statesman posted a sign reading,

"BEWAIR THE MUEL."

People who had been to school read the sign and "bewaired," but this bad boy couldn't read it and he walked up as brave as a lion and took a good look at the animal. The sleepy mule glanced out of the corner of his north eye, and in two seconds the bad boy went through the roof and away up among the twinkling stars until he could look down on the shining spires of the New Jerusalem. A part of him lit over in the next county and a part of him is going yet. His grief stricken parents couldn't gather up enough to hold an inquest over, and it all happened just because this bad boy didn't go to school.

Boys, remember, and when you start for school go there, and you may be wise and great, and some time will be president of the day on the Fourth of July, or may be a Lieutenant-Governor.

A Startling Discovery.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all throat and lung diseases is daily curing patients, that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best physicians using it in their practice. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1.

A Dozen Waterspouts.

We left Aspinwall on the 11th of May for New York. The weather was good until the 17th. At or about half-past two o'clock in the afternoon of that day Captain Williams and a number of the officers, crew and passengers were astonished by the appearance of a large waterspout. I have seen this remarkable phenomena before, but never on such a gigantic scale. The first one was seen about six miles away. A stream of water seemed to rise from the level of the ocean, and at the same time another stream descended from the heavens and depended from a dark rain-cloud like a great rope. The two streams met about midway between sky and water, and then began to move rapidly to the eastward. The base of the waterspout appeared to be nearly a quarter of a mile wide, and then it tapered toward the middle into an almost imperceptible line. Suddenly it broke, and there was a mighty hissing and commotion about of the waters in the vicinity. We saw twelve spouts that afternoon during some heavy rain squalls. At one time I saw four of them at once. They looked like lofty spires of a cathedral. Through our glasses we could see that the tops of the spouts were lost in the clouds. It is a scientific fact that the discharge of a cannon in the neighborhood will always cause these water-columns to break. The passengers insisted that the discharge of a pistol would create sufficient vibration in the air to destroy a spout which was a mile away. I loaded my revolver and fired twice at the spout. At the second shot it broke. I don't know whether it was the result of the firing or not, but the thing happened just as I tell you, and at least it was a remarkable coincidence. Every time a spout burst, the top part of it seemed to vanish into vapor, but the under part would rock the sea for miles, and our vessel experienced the violent effects. In [illegible] that afternoon the water was [illegible] several times it was thought [illegible] have to change our course, but [illegible] not approach too near for s[illegible]

Why They Call Him "Old Man."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and falling out before its time. Use something, I would, but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you "Old Man Jenkins." It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

Flocking to the Cities.

The tendency of population to towns and cities has been made the subject of much study and comment of late years. It has been often deprecated as inimical to the general welfare of society. Fruit-growing and gardening is to be commended because of its independence, its healthfulness and its almost invariable remunerativeness.

Very few farmers ever "fail in business," while in mercantile pursuits ninety-five out of every hundred fail. Despite these startling figures, there is a tendency, that verges upon a mania, to seek business and social life in cities and villages. There are many legitimate and natural reasons for this. Not all men are adapted to farming and kindred vocations. Men who have a natural genius for mechanism will succeed better as artisans than agriculturists. Men with the appetite for merchandise will not hardly be content with the culture of the soil. And so with all callings and professions; men should follow the line of business for which they are naturally qualified.

Social, educational, religious and esthetic reasons also obtain. The advantages of the city, in all these requisitions, are apparent, and not to be denied. It is true that, in their enjoyment, we lose many advantages that pertain to rural life; but, with a large number of people, the attractions of city life outweigh all country attractions. It is well that is should be so. The country without villages and cities would be a very desirable one to emigrant from; and the city without its rural surroundings would indeed be very helpless, as well as undesirable place of abode,—in fact, an impossibility. It is obviously in the economy of nature that these two conditions of society should always exist.—Howard Courant.

A Perfect Remedy in 50 Diseases.

Ashfield, Mass.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to Brandreth's Pills which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three years of my life is owing solely to their use. Your Pills saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with Brandreth's Pills, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough.

In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhoea; even dropsy, paralysis, and apoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of Brandreth's Pills. In fact I have found them the Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease, and labor.

THE NEW PATENT DUST-PROOF Stem Winding Open Face Case, MANUFACTURED BY THE AMERICAN WATCH CO., WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with our specially prepared water proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight joint to protect the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

[illegible] travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, these qualities are of the utmost importance.

VALDOSTA, Georgia, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

Saved by a Frog.

A gentleman from the country gives us the following as his experience with a rattlesnake: He says that the pigs had been getting into his garden, and he was looking around for the hole. In one corner the weeds and grass had not been cut down, and as he went up close to see if the hole was there, he heard a noise, and then the warning his snakeship gave out. He turned as I saw a large snake coiled and darting his tongue, while his tail quivered and shook until the little shells on the end seemed to him as loud as the twin organs. The little shining eyes of the animal were brilliant with fury and seemed to dart forth rays of burning poison that filled his soul that made him shiver from head to foot. The fence was high and solid plank; there was no stile near, and the snake was not seven feet off, and right where, in trying to get out, he would have to pass nearer and he knew if he moved the enraged thing would dart forward and strike its poisonous fangs into him. Most he could not; to call for assistance would only make matters worse. He tried to pray, but was so scared that he could only utter, "Now I lay me down to sleep—good Lord, he's going to bite—" and so on. He said that [illegible] and agonizing moment of his life, and he has charged many a time under the old "Stonewall" upon the Yankees. He thought that he had been in that fix for two hours, when he heard a slight rustle. The snake heard it too, and stopped its rattle; in a second or two a large toad was seen hopping toward me, and as it approached, the snake looked squarely into the man's eyes and seemed to say: "Keep quiet, and I'll get the toad and let you off." The frog got within about six feet of the snake, when the rattle, was again sprung, and the little terror-striken toad was seized before it knew where to look for its enemy. As soon as our friend saw the frog with its head down into the snake's throat, and his feet kicking in the air, he made a desperate spring and went to the house, procured a shotgun and proceeded to kill the snake, but he found it not. He looked high and low, but there was no snake and no sign, only where it had coiled. He says he owes his life to that frog.

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving calling one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, bones ache and fever symptoms. 25c sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

Very Sensible Views.

There is much growling lately about newspapers. A man who will denounce a newspaper as indecent and yet will always subscribe for it, had better close his mouth on the subject of higher journalism. A man who takes a paper and is weak enough to fear its gun, and wishes to spike it by secretly supporting the very form of journalism he pretends to despise, is a very poor creature. The press owes much to the public, and yet that part of the public that deems themselves representative of advanced thought and intelligence, who are in favor of nobler manners and purer laws, owe something to the press and to themselves. They owe it to the press when they ask with owlish solemnity, "Why is not the press loftier in its aim and more decent in its conduct?" to stop supporting papers whose spirit they pretend to spurn. Does any man suppose a newspaper will rise above the dialect of the ditch, the gossip of the gutter, the politics of a police gazette, when it finds that these things tickle and please those who think they stand at the top of society just as keenly as those whom we know wallowed at the bottom! The public that clamors for a purer press can always make the press what it chooses—can always make its choice between journals of good and evil report. The honest man who can not afford to be abused by a disreputable newspaper had best review his honesty, for his action casts suspicion on his conscience. No honest man need pay moral blackmail, by subscribing for an immoral paper.—Marshall Statesman.

THE WORLD RENOWNED

WALTER A. WOOD NEW IMPROVED BINDER.

M. E. Conklin, Agent.

TECUMSEH, MICH.

1883. FOR THE SEASON OF 1883.

There has been already sold 439,554 of these Machines.

This record, more than anything we can assert or claim for the merits of the WALTER A. WOOD HARVESTING MACHINES, should commend them to the favor of the Farmer.

The evidence of the success of our machines, and of their unrivalled superiority in merit and public favor, does not rest upon any bare assertion of ours, but upon facts, and these facts are uncontrovertible. We have always maintained, and do still maintain, that the best possible test of merit in Harvesting Machines is their long-continued success in practical use, and upon this standard we have ever been and still are content to rest our claims to public favor.

It is a well attested fact by all who use them, that the Wood Machines require far less repair than any other machine in use. No other Binder or Mower is as durable and free from breakages.

The Wood Twine Binder as now made retains those meritorious features which have rendered it UNAPPROACHABLE BY RIVALS in the past, and which are already familiar to the farming public, and also contains such RADICAL IMPROVEMENTS as will certainly place it ANOTHER LONG STEP IN ADVANCE of all competition. In the family war of the different machine manufacturers the Wood has come off victorious and remains master of the field.

The manufacturers have followed up the new binder, during the progress of the harvest of 1882, through grain fields without number, from one end of the United States to the other, from Texas to Dakota, from Virginia to Vermont, and even as far north as Prince Edward Island in the British Dominions—where the latest growing grain crops are to be found—and the results of this close and protracted inspection have fully warranted the representations made, strong though they be.

There has been various improvements of importance in the details of both the Harvester and Binder for 1883. All we ask is for the farmers of this vicinity to examine the Walter A. Wood Machines before placing their orders, and we have no fear as to the result, as it is conceded by all that it is the most perfect machine in all its details, manufactured.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months, been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours,

PHILIP MOORE.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 21, 1883.

The edict of extermination has gone forth. The English sparrow must go.

"Ohio is the nursery of great men" observes a Cincinnati paper; and it might have added, of office-holders.

It is reasonable to suppose that Col. Rob Ingersoll will believe in something now, viz: a Washington jury.

Dorsey and Brady have been acquitted by the jury, but they have been condemned at the bar of public opinion.

The court room lobby seemed to be immensely tickled over the star route verdict. But people in general are not so easily edified.

Col. Eldredge, congressman elect from this district, has our thanks for a copy of the last report from the Consuls of the United States.

The Farmers Mutual Hail Insurance Company is the name of a new institution out in Colorado. Cyclone insurance companies will come next.

There is one consolation in the outcome of the star route trial. The expenses must have taken a big slice from the defendants' ill gotton gains.

President Arthur regards the miscarriage of justice in the Star route trial as "a very serious blow." This is an encouraging sign to say the least.

The Albany Argus favors the pioneer ticket of twenty years ago: McClellan and Pendleton. This would be a much stronger ticket to-day than it was then.

Jug Tavern is the name of a town in Georgia, and yet the inhabitants thereof petition the Legislature to prohibit the sale of liquor within 3 miles of the town.

The star route verdict reminds one of the decision of a jury foreman out west on a trial of a man for stealing sheep. "Not guilty, your Honor, but he must not do it again."

This is the opinion of the St. Louis Republican on a very important question. There never was anything prettier than a plump pretty young woman in short sleeves and a Bertha waist.

The editor of the Pioneer-Magnet at Big Rapids, who has spent 50 years in investigating the ways of the world, reads his young men subscribers a useful lesson in money matters. He figures out the cost of billiards, cigars, treats, candies, etc., with mathematical nicety, and shows that those who avoid those constant drains upon their earnings are the ones that get on the best in the world.

The prospective school fund of Texas is something wonderful to think of. By Constitutional provision the proceeds of her sales of public lands go to this fund, and there are already $2,000,000 in the Treasury and 10,000,000 acres of land to sell. The proceeds at a very moderate estimate, will amount to $100,000,000, which is an amount equal to the aggregate school funds of all the other states.

The citizens of Grand Haven have organized an Improvement Association, the objects of which are those stated in the call for the meeting. An organization of this kind would be an admirable institution for Tecumseh.

The object of the Association, will be to advance the material interests of Grand Haven in every way possible, but principally

By increasing the manufacturing interests by inducing the building of factories here;

By increasing the size of the assessment roll by inducing capital to locate here;

By preventing the assessment roll's decrease by preventing the removal of capital from the city;

By increasing the shipping facilities by inducing the construction of railroads here, and

By doing any and everything possible to help the city.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 19, 1883.

There ought to be a law passed, it seems to me, protecting people who live beyond the age of sixty, for rich or poor they seem to be legitimate game for their descendants. If they are poor they are ill treated and neglected. If they are rich, life is made miserable by the schemes of the heirs for their property. The Gill affair which has aroused the attention of the public this week is a case in point. Hereis an old man over eighty years of age. He has four children all of them married and well advanced in age. I presume they led him such a dance, one trying to cut the other out that he thought it best to live alone. So he got two sisters as house keepers and seems to live in peace and quiet. But no sooner did these women have him in their control than they began [illegible] on his property. The upshot of the matter is that the old man has now been spirited away by his children who will probably keep him safe against any "undue influence."

I know of another case where an old lady has been in a private asylum for some two or three years, simply because she favored one child more than her three others. She is nearly ninety years old, and although naturally of course, childish she is not insane. True, she is pretty well taken care of, but it is indeed hard on the poor old lady, that the last few years of her life must be passed under restraint. There are scores of similar cases, I have no doubt, and any student of the vice of filial ingratitude may find plenty of material by spending a day among the records of a court. Most of these commitment cases are transacted quietly before a referee, and thus very few of the circumstances get into the public prints. This is done "to spare the feelings of the family of the unfortunate man or woman."

I was at the Navy Yard a few days ago to witness the departure of the United States steam corvette Yantic. She is the convey of the steamer Proteus, commanded by Lieutenant E. A. Garlingten, of the Greely Relief Expedition for the North Pole. As the vessel glided into the stream, there was much feeling among the Naval officers and others who were assembled to bid the venturesome voyagers Godspeed. "Poor fellows," said a retired officer to me, "God knows whether they will ever return. I for my part would never sail in such a vessel. She is totally unfit for Polar service. If she should ever be caught in pack ice, good bye to her. Moreover the men aboard of her, though all brave fellows, are nearly all inexperienced in the work and the hardships they will have to endure before they become familiar with the dangers and terrors will come near breaking many a poor fellow's heart."

Society at present is nothing if not sporting, and what with racing, yachting, boating regattas, base ball, cricket and lawn tennis, the fair sex is occupied as much as their sterner brethren. In connection with racing quite a new business has sprung up, and that is the selling of "tips," as to the probable winners of the different events on the card. The traveller on a race who is not entirely taken up with "picking winners" for himself will be much amused by the shouts and antics of the different tipsters.—First comes "the celebrated Mr. Goodrich, who has nothing to do with the big firm of Goodwin Bros. who have a flash office in Broadway and charge six dollars a week for information," "Gentlemen," he says: "I glory in the fact that I am a poor man, and that I do not charge fancy prices. I charge you but twenty-five cents, and guarantee you at least two winners, otherwise I will refund the money."

In fun perhaps, you spend twenty-five cents and you are handed a little slip on which are printed the names of the horses which the tipster thinks will come in first or second. Mr. Goodrich's yell is still ringing in your ears, when you are greeted with "Jack's selections! The phenomenally successful Jack! Gave fifteen winners and seven seconds at Jerome Park, including the winner of the Westchester Cup, and the great short horse the Cyclone colt paid 10 to 1. Only twenty-five cents! I've got a good thing for the Coney Island Stakes to-day and you'll regret it if you don't buy Jack's selections!" "Jack passes on," and up comes a little fellow who looks as if he had once been a Jockey.—"Andrew's selections! Andrews! The old reliable Sheepshead Bay trot!—Never left yet! Don't waste your money on bogus tips. Here's the genuine article. Twenty years experience in the business!"

These people simply guess at the winners. They have no means of securing information from stables, and if they do now and then strike a short horse, it is pure chance. If they knew all the good things they promise to be certainties they would be fools to tell other people about them because they could in a short time become Crœsuses. As it is they make a good thing out of selling their little slips.

A stock company has been formed at Marshall to engage in carriage manufacturing.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

155 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. F. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

Dr. B. Mincer and part of his family will visit Devils lake, upper landing, June 5th, and remain a few days. Parties desiring his services should remember the date.

The spring term of our public schools will close next week.

A grand Fourth of July celebration will take place at Beardsell's landing, devils lake. Oration by L. H. Salsbury. Music and mirth, dancing and fireworks, boat riding, etc.

We notice that Brant Roberts has treated himself to one of those elegant Surrey carriages built by the Columbus Buggy Co., and sold here by Slayton & Son. It is a beauty and he may well be proud of it.

The statement in the HERALD of the 7th inst., to the effect that Mr. R. F. Herriott died suddenly while in the act of crossing a field, does not apply to said gentleman, but to his brother, John A. Herriott. The death of both brothers was sudden, and within nine days of each other, but that of R. Finley Herriott occurred at home.

Another soap man did a limited amount of "advertising" on the streets last week. He was surrounded by quite a crowd, many of whom, at his request just for fun, picked out the packages containing the 10 and 20 dollar bills. They knew they could do it every time, and were only prevented from blowing in their money by the immorality of the game. Some of them will probably try it, should an opportunity offer, when they are away from home, and will know more then than they do now. The amount of business transacted was not large; but it is surprising that any can be found who will invest when they know it is a skin game, and only pay their money because they regard themselves as sharp enough to beat it. The experience of others will never do this class any good; they will have to see for themselves how it works.

THE TECUMSEH SCHOOLS.

The graduating exercises and other exercises incidental thereto will take place next week. Our high school has always borne a high reputation among similar institutions. The policy of employing good instructors and paying them well for their work has proved a good one and it is to be hoped it may be kept up in the future. The graduating class in the high school this year is smaller than usual, consisting of three young ladies. Two new features have been inaugurated this year which will undoubtedly meet the approval of all. One is a program of promotion exercises connected with the promotions from lower to higher classes. The other is the delivering of an annual sermon to the graduating class, with members of the high school department present. Rev. W. H. Babbitt has been invited to deliver the first sermon this year. It will be a union service, the other pastors in the village joining.

We herewith give a general outline of the week's program.

Sunday evening, June 24th—Annual sermon by Rev. W. H. Babbitt at the Presbyterian church. There will be no services in the other churches that evening.

Wednesday evening, June 27th—Promotion exercises at the opera house. All the departments below the high school will be represented in these exercises. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged to defray expenses.

Thursday evening, June 28th—Commencement exercises of the graduating class at the opera house, consisting of essays by the graduates, an address to the class, music, etc.

Friday evening, June 29th—Alumni reunion. The orator and poet have both failed to respond, but a history and essay will be presented, and a banquet will be given. It is expected that the latter will be on a more elaborate scale than usual and that the reunion as a whole will be fully equal to former ones.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 21, 1883.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

Commencement next week.

The Morenci pioneer meeting last Saturday was a big success.

A large number of our citizens went over to Adrian yesterday to see the great Barnum show.

Miss Jennie Morton, of Toledo, is spending a few days visiting Mrs. Roth, Logan street.

The Lake Shore road will sell half fare tickets on the 2d, 3d, and 4th of July, good to return on the 5th.

The late continued rains have made the grass grow so rank, that farmers think the hay crop will be materially injured.

The Schermerhorn Bros. issued a daily paper during the Hudson races last week. It was a neat little sheet called the Daily Program.

Web Anderson and his son, R. E. Anderson, started for the west yesterday. Web will visit friends in Kansas, and R. E. will go to Colorado.

There are many receipts for getting rid of mosquitoes, but there is nothing so sure in its results as to blindfold him and back him under a pile-driver.

The diphtheria cases at Mr. Calhoun's in Raisin are much improved. There were some hopes of the little girl's recovery but she died yesterday. All other patients in the family doing well.

"The Popular Science Monthly" for July is a strong number in its variety of instructive reading, and contains several striking articles. Various contributions make the number a peculiarly attractive one. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 50c per number, $5 per year.

The July number of Demorest's monthly Magazine is certainly one of the most attractive issues of this interesting periodical and should be in the possession of every one, the beautiful illustrations alone making it well worth possessing, to say nothing of the advantage it is to the household in the way of select reading and useful information.

An exchange thus moralizes on the June commencements "This is the month of commencements. The old bachelors who this year look upon the sweet girl graduates, without sighing over their condition deserve to sew on buttons and live on hash the balance of their days. Boys, it was not so when your fathers were young. No pretty girl was allowed to escape in those days."

Free Press: The M. & O., it is reported, is about to expend a large sum of money for terminal facilities at Toledo. In regard to its progress through Michigan it is estimated that the grading in Calhoun and Lenawee counties as far west as Battle Creek, will be completed by the first of August. The rails are expected to be laid to Homer by July 15. A freight depot is being built at Battle Creek and a stone water-tank at Gun Marsh. A ballasting train is at work near Yorkville.

Once upon a time an editor looking for food was compelled to pawn his diamond shirt-studs for a loaf of bread. While conveying the humble meal to his castle a hungry dog ran off with it, and a few moments later robbers deprived the editor of his watch. Instead of being rattled by these incidents, the editor smilingly remarked: "I thank the gods that I still have my appetite left." We are taught by this little fable that true contentment is the greatest of all journalistic boons.

A clerk of an eminently respectable house, the head of which is a deacon, was instructed to prepare an advertisement and have it inserted in the papers. He prepared one which read: "The pot scooped! We hold four aces to the bob-tail flush of any other house in town on fine table cloths."—When the deacon saw that ad. it positively made him dizzy, and the fact that he was called upon by the church to explain it, didn't make the clerk's act of resignation any more pleasant for him to go through.

The building boom for this season is now fairly opened and the Tecumseh Lumber Co. are taking advantage of it. Among other jobs they will furnish the material for Mrs. Freeman's two story house on Pottawatomie st., Mrs. Forestall's house, Mrs. H. S. Lee's new house, also new window frames and sash for Bidwell's block. They furnish the sash and frames and interior work for Mr. A. W. Mill's residence, for G. P. Waring's new house at Ridgeway, Geo. Smith's new house at Britton and Al. Hoxie's new house at Holloway. They also have the contract for all the flooring, siding, sash and doors, ornaments and mouldings for all the passenger and freight depot buildings on the M. & O. road between Dundee and Marshall.

To-day is the longest day of the year.

The mercury went up to 90° last Tuesday.

Miss Florence Shepard has accepted a position in the Grand Haven city schools, at a salary of $360.

C. J. Brewer has been very sick for several days, but we are pleased to say that this morning he is much better.

The HERALD boys all went to see Jumbo yesterday. They are unanimous in the opinion that Jumbo is a "big thing."

Miss Minnie Sutton, daughter of N. M. Sutton, of Tecumseh, graduated at the Detroit Seminary on Thursday of last week.

Wilson & Co's. mill is now running to its full capacity. The two burrs and one set of rollers are kept constantly on the move.

Manager Bowen of the C. T. line returned from Chicago last Monday, where he has been in attendance to the railway exposition.

Heck Bros. expect to start their mill next Monday or Tuesday and then we can see what kind of flour the new rolls will make.

James P. Keyser, brother of Geo. and I. P. Keyser, came home from California Monday. He has been away from Tecumseh 24 years.

C. C. Tefft started last week for an overland trip to Ionia, to visit relatives and friends residing there. His daughter, Ettie, accompanied him.

E. Hause has just received his new teas from San Francisco, Cal. Now if you wish to enjoy a cup of pure tea call and get a sample of the choicest tea ever offered in this market.

Detroit Evening News: The salvation army at Adrian has received several illustrious recruits. Stearns, of the Press, and Applegate, of the Times, are reported as thinking about enlisting—if bounties are offered.

The C. T. company completed the extension of their line west to George Knapp's to-day, thus making about seven miles of line in operation. They expect to push it to Franklin Centre and Sand Lake on the west and to Ridgeway on the east.

W. Comfort is going to put in a new flume and water wheel in his mill next month, and ye farmers that want to exchange their good wheat for some of Comfort's good flour to last them till after harvest had better do so between now and the 4th of July.

Ann Arbor Register: The scholars of the Clinton schools write novels and serial stories as a part of their regular exercises. The school board will probably have the productions published under the title of the "Climbing Candaverous Caitiffs of the Clinton Cliffs; or, the Lank and Languid Lackeys of Lone Lenawee."

E flat cornet, Alf. Jaynes.
" " Fred Allen.
B flat cornet, Del Goodrich.
" " Dr. Burchard.
" " Dr. Banks.
Solo alto, David Haggart.
Baritone, S. W. Demuth.
Tenor, Porter C. Smith.
" Frank Wallinger.
Tuba, Bel. Mills.
Bass drum, E. R. Vest.
Snare drum, L. K. Davis.

Adrian Press: In an old scrap book that we were looking over the other day we find the following: "Twenty years ago to-day, W. H. Wiggins, township clerk of Adrian township, (he wasn't married then,) wrapped up the "School-marm" in buffalo robes, put a warm brick to her feet and drove with her in a cutter to the school house; the snow was nearly a foot deep. How was that for the 8th of May?"

Preparations for the Detroit art loan exhibition, to be held at Detroit next September and October, are speedily assuming definite proportions. The dimensions of the main building are 135x135 feet and is to be one story high, with brick walls and brick partitions and asbestos roof, thus making it practically fire proof. No signs or advertisements are to be allowed in any room, and the only designation of credit will be mention of the names of contributors in the catalogue.

There will be a grand temperance mass meeting on the Morenci fair grounds next Tuesday, June 26. Ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas and other temperance workers will address the meeting. Good music by Lyons' band. Stirring songs by Weston grange and Wauseon glee clubs. The two railroads will sell round trip tickets at reduced rates. The train going east on the Lake Shore road will be held at Morenci till 4 P.M. Everybody invited, take your baskets for a picnic dinner. Our friends on the Jackson branch can attend the meeting and get back the same day. Meeting to begin at 11 o'clock sharp. A small fee of 10c will be charged at the gate to pay expenses.

WOOL PROSPECTS.

H. W. Stevens has shown us a wool circular issued by W. C. Houston & Co., of Philadelphia, from which we clip the following:

"The fleeces from New York, Michigan, Wisconsin and Indiana rank next after Ohio; for while the choice clips are often equal to average Ohio the former states do produce some heavy and poorly grown wools, and the best of them are rarely equal to Ohio wools. In speaking of Michigan we refer also to kindred washed fleeces such as those from Indiana, Illinois and the best section of Wisconsin. It is our object to show that wool should be sold on its real merits and intrinsic value, not according to the state where it is grown; for in many cases as good wools are grown in sections against which a prejudice exists as are raised in sections which are supposed to always produce the best wools. There has always been a prejudice among eastern manufacturers and dealers against Michigan fleeces as compared with Ohio which of late years is to a great extent unwarranted by the condition of the Michigan wools. To the growers we would say that stuffing fleeces with unwashed tags is not only dishonest but poor policy on their part for it is largely owing to this that manufacturers insist on buying Michigan fleeces at prices below what their general character and outward appearance would seem to warrant."

The preference of our wool buyers in regard to tags, whether washed or unwashed, is that they should be kept out of the fleece and sold on their merits the same as other wool.

Hudson Gazette: The Hudson market is hardly established, as yet. The staple is rather dull at 28c. and 30c.—Mr. Frensdorf has bought one or two lots at the higher figure.

Hillsdale Standard: The first purchase of wool at this market was bought by B. F. Ellis at thirty cents. It was washed wool and good quality.

Hudson Gazette: Ohio wool brings a few cents more than the Michigan article, and consequently Ohio buyers are rambling through the southern tier of counties in Michigan buying wool, sending it over the line, and getting Ohio prices therefor. Michigan farmers should make these sharp Buckeyes whack up on that racket.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 9, 1883.

There is no improvement in the wool market since our last issue, and a customer wishing to purchase more than a few thousand pounds just to supply immediate wants would be a curiosity.

Among manufacturers there is a feeling that wools are higher than they will be later. There will be on the 10th of the present month in the state of Rhode Island alone one hundred and ninety set of machinery lying idle: therefore, no anxiety is being felt as to any scarcity of wool in market to supply all requirements.

The backwardness of the season has prevented shearing in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan, and it now looks as if we should there see a late slow market. Buyers say they cannot pay over 28 to 30c in Michigan and 30 to 32c in Ohio for best wools. If they persist in this, they will get the wool at just the price they should get for it with the present outlook.

It is useless to cover up the situation. Many foreign wools are in bond already, to come out July 1st. Goods are fast accumulating in the hands of the Commission Houses; when a sale is made, it is at so low a figure that a loss is incurred by the manufacturer. Clothing houses are carrying over large stocks of manufactured goods, and their Spring trade has not come up to that of former years. With all these facts before us, we cannot look for high prices in wool in the near future.

We copy the foregoing for the benefit of our readers in order that they may see and understand the instructions of wool merchants in their buyers in the country, believing that in this way farmers will obtain a clearer, better view of the real situation than in any other manner. There seems to be a determined disposition among manufacturers to buy wool at less price than heretofore, or else not to buy at all. What the outcome will be we are not wise enough to predict. The United States furnishes comparatively only a very small portion of the annual wool clip of the world, and among those in a position to judge well, the opinion appears general that the change in the tariff will effect the price of wool to the extent of at least two or three cents per pound less, which would be quite a serious loss to the farmer if there were no other depressing causes.

To Europe and Return for 30 Cents.

If you can't afford to pay $22 for one of W. H. Brearley's round trip excursion tickets "From Detroit to the Sea," with which you could leave Detroit June 27th, July 11th or July 25th, for a 2,200 mile pleasure tour to the White Mts. and Sea Shore, the next best thing would be to send ten 3 cent stamps to W. H. Brearley of the Detroit (Mich.) Evening News, for a copy of his new 68-page illustrated excursion guide book. It also contains particulars of three cheap excursions "From Detroit across the Sea" to Liverpool. The book is graphic in its descriptions, and affords for thirty cents an excellent substitute for an excursion to Europe, with the advantage that calm weather and exemption from sea sickness may be relied upon. One of these guide books has been received at the office of this paper, where it may be examined by any one interested.

The Clinton cornet band has been organized and they will toot for practice on Monday and Tuesday evenings of each week.

Elder McLean, of Morenci, preaches to his flock on Sunday and on week days takes off his coat and helps drive nails in the new parsonage.

The editor of the Clinton News has bought a new tape line with which to measure big strawberries. A gentle hint to his patrons to pass in some of the fruit.

The salvation army of Adrian have issued a paper called "The War Cry." In typographical slouchiness and literary gush it is about on a par with the other accoutrements of the army.

Blissfield Advance: F. H. Brown & Co. purchased on Monday the first clip of wool. It was unwashed and brought 25c. per pound. It is not expected more than 30c. will be paid for combing or delaine, except for choice lots.

Morenci Observer: It is said that some of the wealthy farmers of Fairfield, who have been constant patrons of the wide-known Horton cheese factory, have received more money from that concern than their farms are worth to-day.

Deerfield Record: S. W. Beverly and J. Heminway jr., have bought a lot of L. Ormsby, next to Burton's lot, and will erect a two-story brick block upon it. They have begun work and will push it to an early completion.

Morenci Observer: There are said to be only five farmers in the township of Medina who are now living on the farms they originally purchased of the government. These are G. W. Moore, Amasa and Benjamin Converse, Justus Cooley and John L. Hall.

The Adrian street railway company has been organized with the following board of directors and officers:

Board—J. H. Blain, H. H. Osgood, H. Bowen, W. H. Waldby, Wm. S. Wilcox.
President—J. H. Blain.
Vice President—H. H. Osgood.
Treasurer—Wm. S. Wilcox.
Secretary—J. M. Blain.
Superintendent—H. Bowen.

Morenci Observer: The complete drainage of the fair grounds made some ten years since having become obstructed and otherwise out of repair, a considerable force of men have been at work there the present week, putting things in complete order in respect to the surplus water which has fallen in such profusion for the last month or so. It is said that the track is in splendid condition for the races which commence next week.

Adrian Press: Editor Smith, of the Record, has grown so wealthy that he gives public notice to everybody to trust no one on his account. He is the only newspaper man in the county from whom such a notice is necessary. The rest of them can't get trusted on their own application, let alone other people running them in debt. Business men don't need to be warned not to trust newspaper men. They refuse from force of habit, on general principles.

Henry Smith, of Raisin was beautifully "taken in" by a number of horse traders this week. On Tuesday he traded horses and gave $20 "to boot." The animal was almost worthless and on Wednesday he came back to effect another trade. The traders in the meantime had dyed the hair on different parts of the horse he had traded the day before and on taking a fancy to the animal traded and gave $5 "to boot." It was not until yesterday morning that he learned that he got his own horse back and that he was $25 out. The traders had gone for other "pastures green."—Blissfield Advance.

Blissfield Advance: The largest house that has yet turned out to a theatrical performance greeted A. O. Miller last Saturday evening, upon the production of his new play, the Lime Kiln Club. The play was pronounced a success, but yet there were a number of crudities, which will be given the necessary 'pruning' before it will again be placed upon the boards. In the play Mr. Miller has a bonanza, as nearly every one has heard and read of "Bro. Gardner," and all are anxious to see it. We predict, for it's a good run.

Rush's Medical Association:
Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last week. I have taken nearly one bottle and am highly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I became convinced that I could not live long. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,

Fruits for Canning.

Since the preservation of fruits by canning has become so general, it is desirable to know which varieties are best adapted to the purpose. As a rule, those whose taste is sweet or insipid are not desirable, while those that have a decided flavor are to be preferred. Black cap raspberries, sweet cherries and blueberries are among the poorest small fruits for canning, as their flavor is insipid when they are in their best state, and [illegible] by the application of heat. Strawberries, though most delicious when fresh, become somewhat insipid when cooked. Red raspberries are excellent when canned, but they should, to preserve their flavor and aroma, be put up as soon as they are gathered. Blackberries are inferior to red raspberries, but if canned shortly after they are picked they will come out in very good condition, and be well relished. Red and white currants possess a tart flavor which seems to be very desirable. It is better to extract their juice and canned it into jelly. All who relish black currants will like them after they have been canned. They form an excellent sauce without further cooking, and are esteemed a delicacy in pies and tarts. Gooseberries, if gathered before the skins become tough, are excellent after they are canned. They are especially desirable for eating during the spring, when the appetite craves acid fruits. Early Richmond cherries, all things considered, are the best of all the small fruits for canning. If managed with skill they will retain the color, form, flavor and aroma they had when freshly picked from the tree. Most kinds of plums are good, but owing to their size and firmness of their flesh they require more cooking. Of the sweet fruits there is none better than pears. Even the inferior varieties are excellent when canned. The quince is admirably adapted for canning purposes, being almost the only kind of fruit that is improved by cooking. Being scarce and expensive, there is economy in putting them in the same jars that contain apples or pears of inferior flavor. The larger varieties of crab-apples form a valuable addition to the stock of canned fruits.

Consumption.

Physicians used to hold that a fatal issue must follow the formation of tubercles on the lungs. So long as tubercular formations could be arrested, there was hope of a patient's recovery; but when these had planted themselves in the lungs, their growth was inevitable and fatal. But nature is wiser than physicians, and teaches those who study her ways valuable lessons. Careful dissection in recent years has brough to light many curious facts. Foremost among these is the certainty that consumption, in its tubercular form, is often cured. A series of post mortem examinations, in an Edinburgh hospital, disclosed the fact that the lungs of one-third of the persons who died after 30 years of age bore marks of tubercles whose growth had been checked, and in many cases the disease wholly cured. Part of the lungs have even been destroyed, and the cavities filled by the contraction and adhesion of the walls. In some cases brous tissue had completely inclosed the parts disintegrated by the disease. If consumption is curable, as these facts seem to indicate, scientific physicians will never rest till they have ascertained the most effective methods of treatment.

We All Believe

That it is a long lane that has no turning; that many a shaft at random sent, finds a mark the archer little meant; that no remedy cold will cure coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and all throat and lung troubles so quickly nor permanently as Dr. Bigelow's Positive cure; that our druggists, Baker and Hall, are very generous to give trial bottles of this remedy free of charge.

A French physician has called spinach "the broom of the stomach," for it cleanses and purifies this father of a mutinous family when badly treated. This vegetable has a delicate flavor and needs a careful washing; it is then boiled in a small quantity of salt water for fifteen minutes. When drained and pressed from all moisture it is placed in a dish and served with melted butter or egg sauce; there may be a dash of tarragon vinegar added. The spinach is garnished with rings of hard-boiled eggs. After dandelion is carefully washed, pour boiling water over it and let it be steeped until the strong bitter taste has disappeared; then after straining boil the greens fifteen minutes with some salt; drain off all the water and serve with vinegar or lemon juice and water.

We Know All

That water never runs up hill; that kisses taste better than they look, and the better after dark; that is better to be right than to be left; that those who take Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic never have dyspepsia, costiveness, bad breath, piles, pimples, ague and malarria diseases, poor appetite, low spirits, headache or diseases of Kidneys and Bladder. Price 50 cents, of Baker and Hall.

Life in Large Cities.

Cities are costly luxuries, and the bigger the city the more expensive the luxury. The assessed valuation of property in the city of New York for the year 1825 was $101,160,046, and the tax for that year was $987,448. In 1850 the assessed valuation of property was $207,142,476—having doubled in twenty-five years. The amount of taxes had however, increased eight times, being $3,230,085. In 1875 the assessed valuation had risen to $887,643,545, while the total amount of taxation had reached the enormous sum of $32,367,744—having been multiplied one hundred times in fifty years, while the State tax charged against the city has risen from $50,580 in 1825 to $8,012,386 in 1875. In 1880 the assessed value of property was advanced to $942,-571,690; but the total tax was reduced to $28,937,272, due to the reduction in the State tax levied on the city from $8,000,000 to $3,571,322, the city tax remaining the same. Another great grievance under which the New York citizens labor and groan is the extravagance and recklessness of the expenditure of the moneys raised by taxation. If we may credit the statements of the journals of that metropolis nearly half the city funds are absolutely squandered, worse than wasted.

SONGS NEVER SUNG.

"How does that verse run? Something like this isn't it?

There are who touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them:
Alas! for those who never sing,

"Yes, that's beautiful, pathetic and true," said your representative. The poet alludes to people who are somehow suppressed and never get their full allowance of pro and air. Which reminds me of a letter shown me the other day by Hiscox & Co., of New York, signed by Mr. E. C. Williams, of Chapman, Snyder Co., Pa., a prominent business man of that place. He writes:

"I have suffered with asthma for over forty years, and had a terrible attack in December and January, 1882. I hardly know what prompted me to take PARKER'S TONIC. I did so and the first day I took four doses. The effect astonished me. That night I slept as if nothing was the matter with me, and have ever since. I have had colds since, but no asthma. My breathing is now as perfect as if I had never known that disease. If you know of anyone that has asthma, tell him in my name that PARKER'S TONIC will cure it—even after forty years." There was a man who escaped the fate of those whom the poet laments.

This preparation, which has heretofore been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. Inasmuch as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, and unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of HISCOX & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

WARREN CO., PA., VILLAGE OF ENTERPRISE.

Personally appeared before me Holland Sutliff, who, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says: That he resides in the Village of Enterprise, Warren Co., Pa. That for the space of six weeks or more he was bed-fast, he endured terrible suffering from rheumatism; and during this time he could get no rest or sleep, and was not able to do any work. He had tried all and every remedy he could hear of, and had a doctor attending him all this time, and was growing worse all the time until he was recommended by a friend to take Wilson's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism. This medicine gave him immediate relief and performed a perfect cure in forty-eight hours, and that he is now perfectly free from the disease. H. SUTLIFF.

New Ideas About Corn.

We have learned much that is new about corn during the past few years, and much that we have learned has been taught us by boys. The report of the corn crops grown by Vermont boys given in these columns recently is an extraordinary lesson for old farmers, and one of the greatest value. A few years ago it would have been received with incredulity, but the new ideas which now prevail in regard to corn render that surprising statement perfectly credible. What farmer after reading the account given can doubt the possibility of himself reaching the yield of 100 bushels of corn per acre. This record is but one of many that have been given in these columns during the past three or four years, and in each case the conditions of success appear to be the same. This uniformity of result is sufficient to amount to a law, and its requirements may be taken as including everything that is needed for one to reach the same ends. These requirements are very simple and but few in number. They are: The selection of good seed of some established variety; ing or fertilizing, and the best cultivation frequently given and long continued, and in many cases it has been shown that level cultivation is most effective. Now these requirements are nothing new. Every farmer knows that they are needed for any and every crop and that, when they are provided, the soil responds with alacrity and liberality, and the corps reach the maximum. It is simply doing the best for the soil, always generous and ready to repay back with interest what is given to it. It is the true principle of economy, which is, to use the means we have so as to produce the very best results, knowing that every surplus bushel produced by the addition of fertilizers and cultivation adds to the profit in a larger ratio, because the fixed charges for land, for plowing, for the seed, for planting, for the greater part of the cultivation, for the cutting, handling and hauling are the same for ten bushels per acre grown on poor soil as 100 bushels per acre grown on the richest land.

Air and water are food for plants; they not only contribute to their sustenance, but they assist proportionately in reducing organic matter to its mineral elements and to a soluble condition, and to effect a disintegrating and solvent action of the mineral particles of the soil. The more the surface of the soil is stirred and loosened the more moisture is absorbed and reaches the roots; and as the circulation of moisture and the changes of temperature consequent upon it are necessarily followed by circulation of air, both water and air are, therefore, encouraged to circulate in the soil by frequent cultivation, and thus the desired and necessary effects are produced. One of the largest crops of corn that has been grown, viz., 160 bushels per acre, was cultivated once a week up to the time when the ears were forming, and when the silk had been fertilized; and at this late period a dressing of special corn fertilizer was cultivated into the soil. It is one of the points to be aimed at that the growth of ears and grain should be encouraged rather than that of stalk and leaf, excepting up to a certain size. A stalk nine or ten feet in length is large enough for the purpose of fodder, and if it is not more than one and one-half inches in thickness at the base it is enough. Plenty of leaf growth is desirable because the grain cannot be matured without this; but beyond the requirements of the grain, excessive leaf growth is not of importance.

Now it seems to be proved that frequent cultivation of the soil helps the plant to produce more grain, increase its sexual fertility and prevents abortive ears or vacant spaces in the ears, and this is precisely what we should aim at in growing corn, because we can grow large enough stalks, but we do not very often bring anywhere near maturity the numerous small ears or nubbins, or fill with ears the many husks which appear at the sheaths. If we can succeed in doing this, as has been very successfully attempted by Professor Blount, we cannot tell what the limit of the possible product of corn may be up to 200 or 300 bushels per acre. For if we can produce eight or ten good ears on every stalk upon an acre of ground—and this has been done upon some stalks—we need not stop short of 600 or 800 bushels of grain per acre. Whether we may ever reach the half or the quarter of this no one can tell, but when we consider what has been done it may not be very rash to hint at what may yet be done when we shall have learned the whole secrets of corn-growing. The necessity for thorough cultivation of the soil and the absence of weeds among the plants—frequent and clean cultivation, in fact, is the fourth new idea that we have learned in regard to corn-growing.—New York Times.

An old tin kettle may not point a moral, but we have frequently known it to adorn a tail.

"The press is mighty and will prevail," said the susceptible maiden when she was hugged by her stalwart lover.

The reason why American men became bald-headed at an early age has been explained. They wear their straw hats until the early frosts strike in and kill the roots of thei hair.

It seems impossible that a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., should make so many and such great cures as Hop Bitters do; but when old and young, rich and poor, pastor and doctor, lawyer and editor, all testify to having been cured by them, you must believe and try them yourself, and doubt no longer.

HICKORY-NUT MACAROONS.—Make frosting as for cake; stir in enough pounded hickory-nut meats, with mixed ground spice to taste, to make convenient to handle. Flour the hands and form the mixture into little balls. Place on buttered tins, allowing room to spread, and bake in a quick oven.

"A Celebrated Case."

It seems probable that Michael O'Connor, of Galesburg, Ill., is not related to the celebrated, Charles O'Connor. He says: "Samaritan Nervine cured me of dyspepsia and general debility."

Not long since a young lady, who has been engaged to a fine young man for some time, met a richer person, and soon put off the old love for the new. She wrote to her old lover requesting him to return her photograph. Here was a chance for revenge, which he took by sending the following note: "I would gladly comply with your request, but if I do it will spoil my euchre deck. I have a collection of photographs which I use for playing cards, and I do not want to break it by giving away the queen of diamonds."

Boats, Bicycles and Hay Fever.

Nature has resolved that all the people shall not enjoy themselves at once. With the opening of the season of outdoor sports comes the time of trouble for the poor victims of hay fever. For them flowers have no odor, and the summer little or no beauty. To sniff, sneeze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months—this is their pitable portion. Whether this form of catarrh is called hay fever, hay-cold, rose-cold or rose fever, makes no difference; they suffer just the same. There is no help in sea voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. Those only lighten the pocket and leave the disease unabated. But there is a positive cure in Ely's Cream Balm. We could cram these columns with grateful letters of the rescued. Try it and join them. If you continue to suffer it is because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant.

The Bostonians on a certain memorable occasion, when they disguised themselves as Indians, were only indulging in a rural recreation. They were taking tea in the arbor.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—Feeling grateful for what your medicine has done for me, I desire to make the following statement: For two years or more I have suffered from rheumatism. Much of the time I could not dress myself nor put food to my mouth, and suffered the most intense pain all the while. Some five weeks since I was persuaded to try your Rheumatic Syrup. Before I had used two bottles the pain had all left, so that I slept soundly nights; I can now dress myself and need no one to feed me, and in fact, feel as well as ever I did in my life, all from the use of the best medicine in the world—Rheumatic Syrup. Pure Blood.

Many families pride themselves on their noble ancestry; but here, in this democratic country we do not care so much about our pedigree as our health; or, at least, that ought to be the principle object of our solicitude. We cannot have good health without pure, rich blood. When the blood is out of order, disease manifests itself in the skin and flesh, and in fact, all parts of the body. To be restored to health take Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup. Physicians speak in the highest terms of this medicine.

Dr. Everett, Cooper Plains, Steuben Co., N. Y., mentions two cases of scrofula and erysipelas in which Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Sprup effected a cure, and says, "I think it one of the best purifiers of the day. It has met with perfect success in every case where I have used it."

Entomologists use a mixture of sour beer and molasses, spread on the trunks of trees or on boards in the evening, to attract moths. It has been suggested that it would be a good way to destroy the moths of worms destructive to fruit by poisoning the liquid applied.

Palpitation of the Heart.

J. M. Might, Syracuse, N.Y., writes: "When I first commenced using your Burdock Blood Bitters I was troubled with fluttering and palpitation of the heart. I felt weak and languid, with a numbness of the limbs; since using, my heart has not troubled me, and the numbing sensation is all gone." Price $1.

Prof. Packard, of Bowdoin college, who has been connected with it since 1812, gave a lecture on his reminiscences of the college, in which he said the first commencement was held in an unfinished church during a severe rain storm, and the president presided, holding an umbrella over his head.

Magic in the Nineteenth Century.

N. McRae, Wyebridge, Ontario, writes: "I have sold large quantities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil; it is used for colds, sore throat, croup, etc., and in fact, for any affection of the throat it works like magic. It is a sure cure for burns, wounds and bruises."

A base-ball boy tripped, fell, and tore his clothes while chasing a stray chicken in a neighbor's lot. He told his mother he had been sent to grass by a foul. She reached for home base, and the youth went on a strike, howling for the old man to act as referee.

Despised.

By the unthinking, Burdock has been considered a weed, and its luxuriant growth, unpleasant smell, etc., has rendered it, to those "not knowing its virtues," a nuisance, and yet the root has long been acknowledged by savants as most invaluable as a diuretic, aperient and blood purifier. Burdock Blood Bitters embodiy all its good qualities. Price $1.

A Galveston school teacher had a great deal of trouble making a boy understand his lesson. Finally, however, he succeeded, and, drawing a long breath, he remarked to the boy: "If it wasn't for me you would be the biggest donkey on Galveston island."—Galveston News.

The Wonderful Efficacy of
DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and brings on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in times like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address DR. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK, FOR LEXINGTON AVE. AND 23D ST. NEW YORK, April 27, 1887.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:

Gentlemen—At your request I have examined in open market samples of Benson's Capsicum Porous Plasters and Allcock's Porous Plasters, and have submitted them to chemical analysis to determine their comparative merits as external remedies.

I find in Benson's Capsicum Plasters valuable medicinal ingredients, which do not exist in Allcock's Porous Plasters; hence in my opinion they are superior to those of Allcock's.

Yours Respectfully,

Star of Bethlehem.

London Telegraph: The reappearance of the star of Bethlehem is predicted by astronomers for this year or the next. On Nov. 11, 1572, Tycho de Brahe discovered a star in Cassiopea which equalled Sirius, and even Venus, in brightness for a month, and then fell back into its former insignificance. Conjecture has sought to establish a connection between this phenomenal phenomenon and two similar apparitions in 1264 and 945. A not unnatural inference was that the same increase in volume of this remarkable star occurred before 945, which would bring us to about 960 and 979, and to the date of the Nativity. The star is now again due.

DIED.

HERRIOTT—At his home in Macon village, on Monday May 21, 1883, Mr. Robert Finlay Herriott, having arrived within one day of his 59th birthday.

The deceased was born near Farmer Village, Seneca county, N. Y., May 22nd, 1824. In that delightful region between Seneca and Cayuga lakes, the first thirteen years of his life were spent. In the fall of 1837 he came with his parents to this State, the family being among the earliest settlers in the township of Macon. In January, 1851, he was united in marriage to Martha E. Richart, who with an only daughter survives him. Married life was begun on their own farm, opposite the old homestead, and there the greater part of the active life of the deceased was spent. During a short period he was a resident of Newton, Calhoun county, and during the last years he lived in Macon village. His was an exemplary life. In his home and public relationships he was beloved and respected. Jovial, kind, upright, he gained very many friends. The children of the neighborhood in which he lived were ever among these friends—for them he ever had a kind word, and their interests he always sought to advance. Hence it was that during the days of his health his energies were so largely devoted to the cause of education, both secular and religious. Especially in the Sunday School he has done much good work. His name is found among the members of the earliest local temperance society, organized in 1841. To the principles avowed by becoming a member of said society, he remained true till the last. While in Calhoun county he made public profession of religion, and in 1870 became a member of the First Reformed Church of Macon. In this church he has for several years held the office of deacon. And now he rests from his labors, and his works do follow him. His last illness, though painful, was very brief. At midnight the summons came, "Come up higher." He was ready. The funeral services were held at the family residence and were conducted by Revs. W. H. Babbitt and J. A. De Spelder, and were largely attended.

MARRIED.

Minneapolis Harvester AND Twine Binder.

The only Binder Manufactured having

MR. APPLEBY'S Latest Improvements.

The record this popular binder made last season in Lenawee Co., is abundantly ample evidence to convince any farmer that this is the latest improved, easiest handled and by far the most perfect working Harvester and Binder in the market. Mr. J. F. Appleby, the inventer of the Appleby Binder superintends the construction of the Minneapolis, and with the improvements of 1883, especially the double packer trip, it is thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Michigan farmer, as there is a great variation in the size and condition of our grain the Binder can be moved instantly and easily, also the raising and lowering of the whole machine by the driver, in his seat.

The machine has all the valuable points that any other has and many very vital points that no other machine has. Last season we sold 32 of these machines to some of the best farmers in this vicinity and we have a good testimonial from every one of them, besides others that own other binders that have seen the superior working of the Minneapolis acknowledge its superiority over all others. No other Binders ever sold in Lenawee Co. can produce such a record.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

CLINTON CULLINGS.

The talk is that we are to have another hotel, grocery store and drug store soon.

Some are rusticating among the mosquitoes and picturesque scenery of Sand Lake this week.

[illegible] tival, Tuesday evening, for the benefit of St. John's church, was a pleasant affair as well as a financial success.

Miss Hess Cupples, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Mrs. J. E. McCollum last Sunday.

A gang of boys ranging from 6 to 14 years old barricade the sidewalk on Main street every evening and make the very air ring with their oaths and obscenity.

What Clinton most needs just now is a good wide-awake wool and wheat buyer, one with character and cash. There is a fertile field open here for the right man.

The Clinton News of last week contained a card signed J. W. Payne, wherein he applies the ecclesiastical title of "Bishop" in referring to a Mr. Smith, a Baptist preacher of Saline, who once preached in the Baptist church at this place. We were not aware that Clinton had been the "see" of a Bishop. But possibly J. W. P. made a mistake and the title should have been spelled with a small "b."

MACON MUSIC.

George Frost and Harrison Crittenden are erecting new houses.

Rev. J. A. De Spelder goes to Holland City, this week to attend commencement exercises.

Mrs. Anna Harring, who has been sick for a long time, is very low, there being no hopes of her recovery.

The schools at the village closed last week with literary exercises. The exercises were excellent, and the pupils did credit to themselves and teacher. Many of the patrons of the school are anxious to secure the services of the present teachers for the coming year.

The young and old will hie away to Ann Arbor, June 30, to see his lordship, Jumbo.

The Union Sunday School will have a picnic to celebrate the Fourth. The school at the Center has been invited. Several committees have been appointed and a grand good time is anticipated by the school. Do not think we are boasting when we say the people of Macon village have sufficient enterprise and go-ahead to make anything of this nature a brilliant success. Your worthy reporter is not a resident of said village at present writing.

The members of Macon Grange will have a Strawberry Social at Grange Hall, on Tuesday, July 3d, at 6 P. M., sharp. Special meeting at 7:30. A full attendance is requested, as there is important business to be transacted. By order of Com.

J. W. BAKER, M.

THE RACES NEXT WEEK.

Mr. C. D. Bills, secretary of the Southern Michigan Circuit has a fine program of races arranged for next week. They will take place on his new track in the eastern part of the village which has been put in fine condition for that purpose. The entire program will consume three days commencing on Wednesday, July 4th, and closing on Friday, July 6th. All indications point to a large crowd and an interesting meeting. They will be the best races that Tecumseh has seen in several years and we hope the men who have labored to make them a success will receive substantial encouragement. Below we give the program for each day:

FIRST DAY.

1. $150. Three minute class.—1st, $75; second, $37.50; 3rd, $22.50; 4th, $15.

7. $100. Running race.—1st, $60; 2d, $30; 3rd, $10.

Deerfield Record: Sunday morning last, as the congregation were quietly filing out of the M. E. church, somewhat of a sensation was caused by the breaking of a sleeper and settling of the floor in the vestibule.

Rev. Judson Swift was installed pastor of the 1st presbyterian church at Allegan last week.

A Saginaw woman put $145 in her pocket and went to see the circus—and had her pocket picked.

A Jonesville firm has taken a contract for furnishing 500 car loads of cobble stones for Detroit parties.

Marvin's new opera house at Ovid is nearly completed, and much taste is displayed in its management.

George Feige, of East Saginaw, has the contract for making the furniture for the new capitol of Colorado.

Clinton county farmers, whose corn did not do well, have planted peas where the corn failed to show up.

A man living near Lapeer washed 70 sheep in one day. The sheep stood it nobly, but the man hasn't been out of bed since.

Five tons of whitefish arrived at Bay City by boat one day last week, all captured at Point Lookout within a few hours before their arrival.

A Grand Rapids paper says a member of the legislature from over on the Lake Michigan shore "raked in over $1,000 at poker while at Lansing."

A painter named Albert Stacy, of Grand Blanc, fell 30 feet at Pontiac and was seriously but probably not fatally injured.

The Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad company has broken up a gang of thieves that has long been pilfering property on the line.

The G. R. & I. railroad company sent about 100 of the employes at and about Grand Rapids to Chicago to see the exposition, paving all expenses.

A Bay City man, who was going to Fenton to be married, tarried a minute too long to adjust his necktie and missed the train.

Twenty year ago Mr. Bailey, now one of the partners in the great circus firm of Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson, was a bell boy at the Hodges house at Pontiac.

Fred Watson, of North Lansing, constructed a toy engine, and with it he and his brother Albert were having heaps of fun, when the boiler exploded, scalding both lads severely.—Fred may lose one eye.

A Port Huron wife-beater is now at the house of correction, and a chronic drunk of the same place is in jail. One draws $12 a month pension and the other $40, and yet, says the Port Huron Telegraph, widows with large families to fight the battles of life for, get but $8 per month.

Fred Sleet, of Bay City, arrested for burglary committed at Bridgeport.—He had also piled railroad ties on the F. & P. M. track, for pure deviltry.—He is but 18 years old, but appears to have some of the qualifications for becoming a first-class devil.

Circulars have been strewn about Ann Arbor purporting to come from the W. C. T. U., in which a fierce attack is made upon the bondsmen of the many liquor dealers in that city. Among the assertions made is one as follows: "To say that Ann Arbor has no use for any of these men is to say but half the truth. Ann Arbor would be better off morally, socially, intellectually, and in every other way, if this disgustingly long list of men would every one of them die with the small-pox within the next week." Then it was resolved to boycott them all.

NEW BUSINESS.

Mr. Heesen, on behalf of the night watch association asked the council to make an appropriation of $200 for the payment of the night watchman's annual salary. After some discussion on the subject it was decided not to make the appropriation asked for until the association make a report in writing to council setting forth the amount contributed by the association during the past year, and the amount paid the night watchman, the officers of the association, and the rules by which it is governed.

In order, however, that this action may cause no embarrassment to the association in its relations to the present watchman, on motion, the Recorder is directed to draw an order on the Treasurer for $16.67 to be paid such watchman at this date and an order for a like sum to be paid on the 18th day of July next, thus giving the association ample time to prepare and present the report asked for.

The council then took into consideration the amount of money necessary to be raised for contingent expenses for the current year. After a submission of the various estimates it was on motion,

Resolved, That a levy of 3½ mills on the dollar of the assessed valuation of the property of the village be made for the augmentation of the contingent fund for the current year, and the Recorder was instructed to spread such tax.

The street committee were instructed to procure the services of the county surveyor for the purpose of determining the lines on Union and Brown streets in this village.

Council then adjourned.

P. S. McKINNON,
Recorder.

Hudson Post: A lady has been stopping in this village for a few weeks, whose husband owns a meat market. Some two weeks ago one of our merchants was at Adrian, where said meat market is kept, and the husband said he would like to send some meat to the folks. Ever willing to oblige, our merchant said he would be pleased to do the errand, and put the meat in his grip. Last Monday morning, wishing to get something from his satchel, he opened it in his office, and in less than a minute that store smelled like a limberger cheese factory, filled with dead cats. He did not deliver the meat.

DISCONTENT.

In a lonely bog
Lives a polliwog,
Wishing he's a frog.

Comes a hungry snake
Polliwog to take
For his stomach's sake.

[illegible]

Snake knows a dodge
Slips into the lodge
Where the polliwog
Is going to dine.

[illegible]

Snake says, "Oh, my!
Now or can I wait
Till you outgrow
Your tail and get fat?"

Polliwog looks to see if the coast is clear, and finding that the way is clear, he doesn't make the polite thing he might, and invite the snake to come in, but says, "Why, Mr. Snake, I'm very much obliged to you for your kind intention, but I don't care to be eaten just now. Will you please come back in two weeks and make the offer?"

And now

THE RESCUE.

A REVOLUTIONARY ROMANCE.

It was an autumnal evening—the forests had begun to den their mantles of gorgeous colors. The fields, shorn of their harvest treasures, lay like golden lakelets in the rich and mellow sunset. The noble Highlands, like giant warriors clothed in their panoply of rock and foliage, threw sullen shadows far out upon the bosom of the glorious Hudson, which, rolling on in its path of beauty, gleamed like a fallen rainbow in the innumerable tints of occidental glory. Far in the distance towered the venerable Cro'nest, begirt with a diadem of purple and gold. The first star was twinkling on the brow of twilight; dark clouds were encircling the zone of creation, rock and mountain, tree and shrub, hill, dale, valley and rivulet, all commingled in one hazy softness, rendering it a scene of indescribable loveliness, beautiful as in those days of primitive innocence ere sin was known, or desolation and the curse had fallen upon blossoms of our earthly Eden. Such was the evening when a barge was seen to leave the promontory of West Point, in the neighborhood of which we locate our narrative, in the year 1782. In it were several persons attired in the military costumes of that period, who, with well-measured strokes of their oars, made it dance over the golden waters like a ray of light. In the stern was seated a man about 50 years of age. His head was uncovered, and revealed to view a wide and capacious brow; his features were marked and masculine; his mouth, which was peculiarly characterized by a closeness of the lips, gave to him a look of determination, yet which in no way impaired the mild and merciful expression which reigned over his general aspect. Like the others in the boat, he wore a dark-blue coat, with broad buff facings, closely buttoned to the throat; corded hat, close fitting buckskin small-clothes, high military boots, with spurs of steel, with a belt of buff encircling his waist, in which was fixed a straight sword. Such was the costume of the personage who was destined to achieve the liberty of his country, and to burst the fetters of oppression. Reader, need you ask who was? In your minds eye does he not stand before you? Is not his name the watch-word of your independence, and a memory cherished in the heart of every son of freedom? It was George Washington!

As the barge gained the opposite bank, one of the rowers leaped ashore, and made fast to the root of a willow which hung its broad thick branches over the river. The rest of the party then landed, and uncovering saluted their commander, who respectfully returned their courtesy.

"By 10 o'clock you may expect me," said Washington. "Be cautious—look well that you are not surprised. These are no times for trifling."

"I do," he responded, and bidding them farewell, departed along the bank of the river.

That night a party was to be given at the house of one of his old and valued friends, to which he, with several other American officers, had been invited. It was seldom that he participated in festivity, more especially at that period when every moment was fraught with danger; nevertheless, in respect to an old acquaintance, backed by the solicitations of Ruby Rugsdale, the daughter of the host, he had consented to relax from the toils of military duty, and honor the party for a few hours, with his presence.

After continuing his path for some distance along the river's side, he struck off into a narrow road, bordered thickly with brush-wood, tinged with a thousand dyes of departed summer—here and there a gray crag peeped out from the foliage, over which the green ivy and the scarlet woodbine hung in wanton dalliance; at other places the arms of the chestnut and mountain ash met in leafy fondness and cast a gloom deep almost as night. Suddenly a crashing among the branches was heard, and, like a deer, a young Indian girl bounded into the path, and stood full in his presence. He started back with surprise, laid his hand upon his sword—but the Indian girl only fell upon her knee, placed her finger on her lips, and by a sign with her hand, forbade him to proceed.

"What seek you my wild-flower?" said the General. She started to her feet, drew a small tomahawk from her belt of wampum, and imitating the act of scalping an enemy—then again waving her hand, as if forbidding him to advance, she darted into the bushes, leaving him lost in amazement.

"There is danger," said he to himself, after a short pause, and recovering from his surprise. "That Indian's manner betokens me no good, but my trust is in God—he has never yet deserted me," and, resuming his path, he shortly reached the mansion of Rufus Rugsdale.

His appearance was the signal for joy among the party assembled, each of whom vied with the other to do him honor. Although grave in council and bold in war, yet in the bosom of domestic bliss no one knew better how to render himself agreeable. The old were cheered by his consolatory words, the young by his mirthful manner, nor even in gallantry was he wanting, when it added to the virtuous spirit of the hour. The protestations of friendship and welcome were warmly tendered to him by the host. Fast and thickly the guests were assembling—the smile, the laugh, and mingling music rose joyously around. The twilight was fast merging into night, but a thousand lamps of sparkling beauty gave a brilliancy of day to the scene—all was happiness—bright eyes and blooming faces where everywhere beaming, but, alas! a serpent was lurking among the flowers.

In the midst of the hilarity the sound of a cannon burst suddenly upon the ear startling the guests and suspending the dance. Washington and the officers looked at each other with surprise, but their fears were quickly dispelled by Rugsdale assuring them it was only a discharge of ordnance in honor of his distinguished visitors. The joy of the moment was again resumed, but the gloom of suspicion had fallen upon the spirit of Washington, who now sat in moody silence apart from the happy throng.

A slight tap upon his shoulder at length roused him from his reverie, and looking up, he perceived the person of the Indian standing at the bosom of the myrtle bush close to his side.

"He" again! he exclaimed in astonishment, but the interpreter bade him be silent, and kneeling at his feet, presented him with a bouquet of flowers. Washington received it, and was about to place it as his breast when one approached him quietly by the arm, and pointing to it, said in a whisper, "Look, look!" and the next moment mingled with the company, whom appeared to recognize her as one well-known and esteemed.

Washington regarded the bouquet with scrutiny, he saw nothing to excite suspicion, however, sunk deeply into his mind, and, looking closer upon the nosegay, to his surprise he saw a small piece of paper in the midst of the flowers. Hastily he drew it forth, and, confounded and horror-stricken, read: "Beware! you are betrayed!" It was now apparent that he was within the den of the tiger, but to quit it abruptly might only draw the consummation of treachery the speedier upon his head. He resolved, therefore, to disguise his feelings and trust to that Power which had never forsaken him. The festivities were again renewed, but almost in a moment interrupted by a second sound of the cannon. The guests now began to regard each other with distrust, while many and moody were the glances cast upon Rugsdale, whose countenance began to show symptoms of uneasiness, while ever and anon he looked from the window out upon the broad, green lawn which extended to the river's edge, as if in expectation of some one's arrival.

"What can detain them?" he muttered to himself. "Can they have deceived me? Why answer they not the signal?" At that moment a bright flame rose from the river, illuminating for a moment the surrounding scenery and showing a small boat, filled with persons, making rapidly toward the shore. "All's well, he continued; in three minutes I shall be the possessor of a coronet, and the cause of the Republic be no more." Then turning to Washington he said: "Come General, pledge me to the success of our arms." The eyes of Rugsdale at that moment encountered the scrutinizing look of Washington, and sunk to the ground; his hand trembled violently—even to so great a degree as to partly spill the contents of the goblet. With difficulty he conveyed it to his lips, then retiring to the window, he waved his hand, which action was immediately responded to by a third sound of the cannon, at the same moment the English anthem of "God Save the King," burst in full volume upon the ear, and a band of men attired in British uniforms with their faces hidden by masks, entered the apartment. The officers drew their swords; but Washington, cool and collected, stood with his arms folded upon his breast, quietly remarking to them: "Be calm gentlemen. Then turning to Rugsdale said: "Speak sir: what does this mean?"

"It means," replied the traitor, placing his hand upon the shoulder of Washington "that you are my prisoner; in the name of King George I arrest you."

"Never," exclaimed the General. "We may be cut to pieces, but surrender we will not. Therefore, give way," and he waved his sword to the guard who stood with their muskets leveled as if ready to fire should he attempt to escape. In an instant their weapons were reversed, and dropping their masks, to the horror of Rugsdale, and the agreeable surprise of Washington, his own brave party whom he had left in charge of the barge stood revealed before him.

"Seize that traitor!" exclaimed the commander. "In ten minutes from this moment let him be a spectacle between the heavens and the earth."

The wife and daughter sprang to his knees in supplication, but an irrevocable oath had passed his lips that never should treason again receive his forgiveness since that of the miscreant Arnold.

"For my own life" he said, while the tears rolled down his noble countenance at the agony of the wife and daughter, "for my own life I heed not, but the liberty of my native land—the welfare of millions demand this sacrifice—for the sake of humanity I pity him, but by my oath, and in the presence of Heaven, I swear that I will not forgive him."

Like a thunderbolt fell those words upon the hearts of the wife and daughter. They sank lifeless into the arms of the domestics, and when they had recovered, consciousness, Rugsdale had atoned for his treason by the sacrifice of his life.

It appeared that the Indian girl, who was an especial favorite and domesticated in the family, had overheard the intention of Rugsdale to betray the American general and other valuable officers that evening into the hands of the British, for which purpose they had been invited to this "Feast of Judas." Hating in her heart the enemies of America, who had driven her tribe from their native forests, she resolved to frustrate the design, and consequently waylaid the steps of Washington as we have described; but failing in her noble purpose, she had then recourse to the party, left in possession of the boat.

Scarcely had she imparted her information and the shadows of the night closed around, when a company of British soldiers were discovered making their way rapidly toward the banks of the Hudson, within a short distance of the spot where the American party was waiting the return of their commander. Bold in the cause of liberty, and knowing that immediate action could alone preserve him, they rushed upon and overpowered them, stripped them of their uniforms and arms, bound them hand and foot, placed them in their boat, and under charge of two of their companions sent them to the American camp at West Point. Having disguised themselves in the habiliments of the enemy, they proceeded to the house of Rugsdale, where, at the appointed time and sign, made known to them by the Indian girl, they opportunely arrived to the relief of Washington, and the confusion of the traitor.

Thus was the Father of his Country, by the interposition of Divine Providence, who, in his own words, "never deserted him," saved from captivity, and but for which America might to this day been pressed by the foot of oppression, and her children have bowed the knee to a foreign power.

In no other blood medicine have the results of scientific inquiry been so steadily utilized as in Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

A VETERAN BENEFACTOR.

His Past Life, Present Plans and what He Has to Say Upon a Subject that Astonished him.

(New York Times.)

Nearly forty years ago a young man, of unusual endowments, began to mould public opinion upon a subject of vital importance. Like all pioneers, his early efforts were unsuccessful, but his ability and the value of his work soon won public confidence, and to-day there is not a village or hamlet in the country that has not been influenced by Dr. Dio Lewis. When, therefore, it was learned yesterday that he contemplated the establishment of a large magazine in this city, the fact was deemed so important that a representative of this paper was commissioned to see him and ascertain the truth of the rumor.

Dr. Dio Lewis is a gentleman of sixty years and two hundred pounds, with snow-white hair and beard, but [illegible] perfect picture of health and vigor.

He is a living exponent of his teachings, and notwithstanding the amount of work he has already done, promises still greater activity for years to come. He received the interviewer most courteously, and in reply to a question said:

"It is true I have come to New York to establish a monthly magazine. I have come here for the same reason that I went to Boston 35 years ago. Then Boston was the best platform in the country from which to speak of education. New York has now become most hospitable to progressive thoughts, and especially so to movements on behalf of physical training.

"I have reason to know the great and abiding interest of the American people in this subject. They have come to realize that the future of our country pivots upon our physical vitality, and especially upon the vigor of our women. My new magazine will bear the title 'Dio Lewis' Monthly,' and be devoted to Sanitary and Social Science. I hope through its pages to inaugurate a new departure in hygiene."

"Have you not written several books on the subject?"

"Yes, nine volumes, and some of them like 'Our Girls,' published by the Harpers, have had an enormous circulation, but the best work of my life I shall give the world in the new magazine. Forty years of skirmishing out to conclude with ten years of organized warfare."

"Doctor, what is the occasion of this new interest in health questions?"

"It has come through suffering, which seems the only road to self knowledge. The stomach, heart, kidneys or liver fall into trouble, happiness is gone, and then people give attention to their health.

"Which of these organs is most frequently the victim of our errors?" asked the reporter.

"Within the last few years diseases of the kidneys have greatly multiplied. When I was engaged in practice, thirty-five and twenty years ago, serious disease of the kidneys was rare; but now distressingly frequent and fatal.

"To what do you attribute this great increase of kidney troubles?"

"To the use of stimulating drinks, adulterated food and irregular habits of life."

"Doctor, have you any confidence in the remedy of which we hear so much nowadays, 'Warner's Safe Cure?'"

"But have you noticed the remarkable testimonials of Warner's remedy?"

"I have and confess that they have puzzled and astonished me. The commendations of proprietary medicines usually come from unknown persons residing in back counties. But I see in our most reputable newspapers the warmest praise of Warner's Safe Cure from college professors, respectable physicians, and other persons of high intelligence and character. To thrust such testimony aside may be professional, but it is unmanly. No physician can forget that valuable additions to our Materia Medica have sprung from just such sources. I was so impressed with this cloud of witnesses that I purchased some bottles of Warner's Safe Cure at a neighboring drug store, and analyzed one of them to see if it contained anything poisonous. Then I took three of the prescribed doses at once, and found there was nothing injurious in it. I do not hesitate to say that if I found my kidneys in serious trouble, I should use this remedy, because of the hopelessness of all ordinary treatment, and because when a hundred intelligent and reputable persons unite in the statement that a certain remedy has cured them of a grave malady, I choose to believe that they speak the truth.

"But as you may know, my great interest in life lies in prevention. For forty years I have labored in this field. One of the phases of my work in New England was the establishment of the ladies' seminary at Lexington, Mass. My aim was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical training of girls during their school life. This institution became before I left it, the largest and most successful seminary for young women owned and managed by one person, in our country. I sat down to dinner every day with a family of two hundred persons. The remarkable results of this muscle training among girls, were given in my paper published in the North American Review of December, 1882.

"Besides, I established the Normal Institute for Physical Training in Boston, and for ten years was its president and manager. Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. Thomas Hoskins, Professor Leonard, and others were among its teachers, and more than four hundred persons took its diploma and went out into all parts of the land to teach the new school of gymnastics. And now the years left to me I propose to devote to my magazine which I have come here to establish. It will be the largest periodical ever devoted to this field of literature, and will present the hundred and one questions of hygiene with the simplicity of a child's talk. To this end all so-called learning will be subordinated. The magazine will be more or less illustrated, and will strive to reach a high place in the confidence and hearts of the people. In a few weeks our first number will appear, and we shall fondly hope for a hearty welcome."

The facts above narrated are indeed most important. It is gratifying to know that the life long experiences of a gentleman who stands without a peer in successfully demonstrating the principles of hygiene, whose heart has always been in sympathy with the afflicted, and whose brain has ever been active in planning for their relief, are to be given to the public through the pages of a magazine. And it is specially significant and proof positive of rare merit that a proprietary medicine, even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have, should be endorsed and recommended by a man so able, so reputable and of such national renown as Dr. Dio Lewis.

Minneapolis Harvester AND Twine Binder.

The only Binder Manufactured having

MR. APPLEBY'S Latest Improvements.

The record this popular binder made last season in Lenawee Co., is abundantly ample evidence to convince any farmer that this is the latest improved, easiest handled and by far the most perfect working Harvester and Binder in the market. Mr. J. F. Appleby, the inventor of the Appleby Binder superintends the construction of the Minneapolis, and with the improvements of 1883, especially the double packer trip, it is thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Michigan farmer, as there is a great variation in the size and condition of our grain the Binder can be moved instantly and easily, also the raising and lowering of the whole machine by the driver in his seat.

The machine has all the valuable points that any other has and many very vital points that no other machine has. Last season we sold 32 of these machines to some of the best farmers in this vicinity and we have a good testimonial from every one of them, besides others that own other binders that have seen the superior working of the Minneapolis acknowledge its superiority over all others. No other Binders ever sold in Lenawee Co. can produce such a record.

Cold Winters.

There seems to be no such winters now as there were seventy or eighty years ago, owing, no doubt, to the cutting down in this country of the native forests, the planting and growth of the towns and cities, and the general development of the land. During the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, there were in the Old World some winters bitterly memorable. In Britain, in 1684, the Thames was frozen to the depth of [illegible] inches, and nearly all the birds in the United Kingdom perished. In 1692 the cold was so intense in Southern Europe, especially in Austria, that wolves were driven by hunger into Vienna, where they attacked beasts of burden and even human beings. Three years later many persons were frozen to death in various parts of Germany. The cold winter, as it was called for distinction, occurred in 1709, when all the rivers and lakes in Europe were completely frozen, and even the sea several miles from shore, and the earth itself from seven to eight feet deep. Birds and beasts fell dead, and thousands of men, women and children perished in their houses. In Southern [illegible] stroyed. The Adriatic was frozen, and much of the Mediterranean in the neighborhood of Genoa and Leghorn, and the lemon and orange groves were blighted in many parts of Italy. During 1716 persons crossed the straights from Copenhagen to the Province Senia (Luden) on the ice, and horses and wagons likewise. Snow lay ten feet deep in Spain and Portugal during '40, the Zeyder Zee was covered with ice thick enough to bear a multitude of people, and four years after snow measured on the level twenty-three feet in Portugal. In 1771 the Elbe was frozen to the bottom, and in 1776 the Danube showed ice below Vienna eight to ten feet thick. The winter of 1779-80 was very severe in this country. The bitter cold began in the middle of November, and lasted until the close of February. The sun's rays were not warm enough to melt the snow, which lay on the ground almost five months, so thick that it was very hard to get from place to place. All ordinary bodies of water were icebound. Domestic fowls and wild turkeys perished by the thousand, so did deer and buffalo, and wolves and panthers, mainly from lack of their natural food buried under the snow. The Northern and Western rivers were fettered by the frost, and the Cumberland was so firmly frozen, as far south as Nashville, that emigrant trains passed securely over the river. The Delaware opposite Philadelphia contained ice of three or four feet, and Long Island Sound and Chesapeake Bay were frozen over. Scientific persons have declared that hot and cold waves often recur every eleven years, as in 1846 and 1857 and 1868.

Take no other or you will be disappointed. Insist on having ALLCOCK'S.

Phila., 308 North Third St., February 1, 1883.

I have been using Allcock's Porous Plasters for a number of years and always with marked benefit. I have been much troubled with muscular rheumatism; have been treated by five of our best physicians without receiving any relief whatever; I then used Allcock's Plaster on the parts affected and I can assure you the pain has almost entirely left me. I can recommend them to every one as the best plaster made. I have tried other kinds but found them worthless.

B. F. Gallagher.

Weak Kidneys Cured.

Contoocook, N. H., March 3, 1880.

I have been greatly troubled with Rheumatism and Weak Kidneys. I was advised to try Allcock's Porous Plasters (had used two other kinds of so-called Porous Plaster, which did me no good), but one of yours has worked like a charm, giving me complete relief, and I have not been troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Complaint since using them, and I consider myself cured.

Edward D. Burnham.

Andrew's Bazar says: "Gathered waists are very much worn." If the men would gather the waists carefully and not squeeze so like the blazes, they would not be worn so much. Some men go to work gathering a waist just as they would go to work washing sheep, or raking and binding. They ought to gather a waist as though it was eggs, done up in a funnel-shaped brown paper at a grocery.—Peck's Sun.

Nearer to Nature.

Nature has made her laws with us, which we must obey or suffer the penalty. This penalty is often lung or throat trouble, which leads on to consumption. Every man believes consumption incurable. People have been educated to this belief which is proven incorrect by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which is nature's great helpmate, and it cures consumption and all throat and lung diseases speedily and permanently. Trial bottles free, of Baker and Hall.

Speaking of farmer horses, the National Live Stock Journal says the kind of animal needed by most farmers is one weighing from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred pounds, and fifteen and a half to sixteen hands high, compact, vigorous, hardy and docile. If, beyond this, it has fine form and style allied to good action, so much the better.

Gentlemen—You[illegible] bers have been of great value to m[illegible] I was laid up with typhoid fever [illegible] for over two months and could get no relief until I tried your Hop Bitters. To those suffering with debility or any one in feeble health, I cordially recommend them. J. C. Stoetzel, 683 Fulton st., Chicago, Ill.

HICKORY-NUT MACAROONS.—Make frosting as for cake; stir in enough pounded hickory-nut meats, with mixed ground spice to taste, to make convenient to handle. Flour the hands and form the mixture into little balls. Place on buttered tins, allowing room to spread, and bake in a quick oven.

The True Test.

If a man is hungry within an hour more or less after a meal he is a dyspeptic, it shows his stomach is not able to dispose of what he has eaten, but to eat again, and thus impose more work, is absurdity. Take Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic which cures dyspepsia, and all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles. It is a perfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, a sure cure for ague and malaria diseases. Price 50 cents, of Baker and Hall.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE AMERICAN WATCH CO., WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed of one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, this case is of the highest importance.

VALDOSTA, Georgia, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

Railway Danger Signals.

Each of the brakemen and conductors employed upon the steam railroads is supplied with a lamp, upon which his name is engraved. It is intended to be his companion and to be carried by him, not only on the train, but also to and from his home. It is mounted upon a shining brass base. All the metal work upon it is carefully rubbed, and not a speck of dust is permitted to be on the glass. Brakemen are supplied with red, or danger, lamps, and conductors with white, or starting, lamps. The value of these lamps is rarely appreciated, or even understood by travelers. Many lives have been saved and many lost through them alone. The number of lives that have been endangered by the mishaps of the lamps cannot be estimated. The loss of a red lamp, a missing wick, a wick that will not burn, causes grave alarm in the locomotive cab. A break in a train, the discovery of a blockade, a sudden stop, call for the instant use of the red lamp. If no red lamp is at hand, a pot of red paint or a piece of red flannel is used to cover a white one. The flannel is more in use, for it is easy to carry and easy used. A bit of fat can be used as well for five minutes. A fast train is easily divided by the breaking of a coupling-pin. The engineer may not be able to run back for the detached cars, and they must therefore, wait for the next train. If the weather is misty, the absence of a red lamp from the rear one of these cars is a terrible menace to life.

Since the centennial exhibition in Philadelphia better railroad lamps are manufactured, and each train is supplied with one, two, three or more, according to its length. Two red lamps are placed on the platform of the last car of the elevated railroad trains from dusk until day-light. No danger may be apprehended in a clear morning or a clear night. Upon a foggy night a collision might be almost expected to follow a break in a train, the red lamps being scarcely perceptible and the trains running closely—if it were not that the distance between the stations is so short, and that the extra precaution is taken of putting a flag man on the rear car. The presence of this flagman is unknown to most passengers. His flag—nothing more than a yard of bright red flannel—is only seen when it is nervously waved in the air as he runs along the track towards an approaching train. And it is a dangerous run in any kind of weather. Engineers and brakemen have many tales of lucky escapes to tell, yet luck is a much smaller factor of safety than in their own remarkable presence of mind. Danger is seen by them and averted in an instant. One moment scores of lives are within the ring of death; the next train is speeding onward with the only disadvantage of being sixty seconds behind the schedule time. One night last summer a Long Island railroad train, approaching Jamaica on its way to Hunter's Point, "broke," and four cars were left behind. The only lamp on the train—a red one—was in charge of a brakeman, who, in his excitement let it fall. Only a small glass remained upon it. A Jamaica train was expected momentarily. The passengers apparently did not understand the cause of the stop, nor were they much interested. The conductor relighted the lamp and nailed it to a pine stick. Holding it aloft with the red glass turned toward the approaching train, he conveyed a warning which prevented a disastrous collision.—N. Y. Times.

Why They Call Him "Old Man."

"Yes, that's sadly so," said Jenkins, "my hair is turning gray and falling out before its time. Use something? I would, but most hair restorers are dangerous." "True," answered his friend, "but Parker's Hair Balsam is as harmless as it is effective. I've tried it, and know. Give the Balsam a show and the boys will soon stop calling you "Old Man Jenkins." It never fails to restore the original color to gray or faded hair. Richly perfumed, an elegant dressing.

'Tis a little thing

"Mother sent me," said a little girl to a neighbor, "to ask you to come and take a cup of tea with her this evening." "Did she say at what time, my dear?" "No ma'am; she only said she would ask you, and then the thing would be off her mind. That was all she said."

"Is your wife a Democrat or a Republican?" asked one Rockland citizen of another, recently. "She's neither," was the prompt response, and then glancing cautiously around and sinking his voice to a hoarse whisper, he explained, "She's a Home Ruler."

THE WORLD RENOWNED

WALTER A. WOOD

NEW IMPROVED BINDER.

M. E. Conklin, Agent.

TECUMSEH, MICH.

1883. FOR THE SEASON OF 1883.

There has been already sold 439,554 of these Machines.

This record, more than anything we can assert or claim for the merits of the WALTER A. WOOD HARVESTING MACHINES, should commend them to the favor of the Farmer.

The evidence of the success of our machines, and of their unrivalled superiority in merit and public favor, does not rest upon any bare assertion of ours, but upon facts, and these facts are uncontrovertible. We have always maintained, and do still maintain, that the best possible test of merit in Harvesting Machines is their long-continued success in practical use, and upon this standard we have ever been and still are content to rest our claims to public favor.

It is a well attested fact by all who use them, that the Wood Machines require far less repair than any other machine in use. No other Binder or Mower is as durable and free from breakages.

The Wood Twine Binder as now made retains those meritorious features which have rendered it UNAPPROACHABLE BY RIVALS in the past, and which are already familiar to the farming public, and also contains such RADICAL IMPROVEMENTS as will certainly place it ANOTHER LONG STEP IN ADVANCE of all competition. In the family war of the different machine manufacturers the Wood has come off victorious and remains master of the field.

The manufacturers have followed up the new binder, during the progress of the harvest of 1882, through grain fields without number, from one end of the United States to the other, from Texas to Dakota, from Virginia to Vermont, and even as far north as Prince Edward Island in the British Dominions—where the latest growing grain crops are to be found—and the results of this close and protracted inspection have fully warranted the representations made, strong though they be.

There has been various improvements of importance in the details of both the Harvester and Binder for 1883. All we ask is for the farmers of this vicinity to examine the Walter A. Wood Machines before placing their order, and we have no fear as to the result, as it is conceded by all that it is the most perfect machine in all its details, manufactured.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months, been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excrutiating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours.

PHILIP MOORE.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 28, 1883.

Samuel J. Tilden's health is again the matter of much anxiety among the politicians.

Both state tickets are now in the field in Ohio, and a red hot campaign is sure to follow.

The two candidates for governor of Ohio reside in the same voting precinct in Cincinnati.

In choosing the Democratic ticket down in Ohio the "kids" got the upper hand in the fight.

We have not heard from Wiggins in some time. Has the poor man been carried away in some western cyclone?

Rumor says that Senator Conkling is soon to write a book. Will there be a chapter in it devoted to Mr. Blaine?

Should Judge Hoadly be elected governor of Ohio next October it will add his name to the list of presidential candidates.

Judging from the tally sheets, one would suppose that some of the professional ball clubs were filled mostly with amateur players.

The Ohio Democratic convention was held on the longest day of the year, and it sat for fifteen and one half hours without an adjournment.

The latest candidate on the Democratic side for president is Judge Jere. S. Black, of Pennsylvania. He would make a president of the Jackson type.

The Boston Post gives a better version of an old saw: "God reigns and justice still lives," says the Washington Chronicle with reference to Dorsey's acquittal. We think a more appropriate expression of piety would be: "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform."

Geo. W. Childs, of the Philadelphia Ledger, has bought the Germantown Telegraph and presented it to the son of the late Henry J. Raymond, founder of the New York Times. Childs was a warm friend of Raymond and he displayed his friendship for the father by assisting the son.

The Chicago Times says: It is discouraging to find that Mr. Tilden will not accept the Presidency. After the present era of dyspepsia, mumps, croup, measles and other things with which Mr. Arthur has been afflicted, it would be pleasant to see a thoroughly robust and vigorous man in the White House.

Ferdinand Schumacher, the Prohibitionist candidate for Governor of Ohio, is the famous Oatmeal King of Akron. He not only refrains from the use of liquor and tobacco himself, but he compels his employees, when about the mills, to do the same. Mr. Schumacher is a Universalist by persuasion and is a liberal-minded, successful business man. He can be depended upon to put some money into the canvass.

The Ohio Democratic platform contains this tariff resolution:

We favor a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of a government economically administered, and so adjusted in its application as to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive interests at home and afford just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies.

This is the best statement of the position of the conservative tariff reformer which we have seen. The tariff should be so adjusted as to have for its primary object revenue and not protection.

It should only yield so much revenue as will meet the necessities of the government when economically administered.

It should be so arranged as to prevent unequal burdens.

It should encourage productive interests at home, not those naturally unproductive interests which can only be sustained by the hot bed stimulation of protection.

It should afford a just compensation to labor and thus do away with the labor strikes which have been so common.

It should neither create nor foster monopolies of any form or kind.

If any one can get up a better tariff platform than this we should like to see it.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 22, 1883.

Anybody who reads the Herald cannot fail to notice the remarkably small number of "personals" now printed as compared with former days, the circumspect manner in which they are composed and the total absence of such interesting items as "Will the young lady who sat in Broadway car and left at such and such a place, grant the favor of an interview to gentleman who sat opposite her." All the personals now left in the counting rooms of the Herald are edited by the managing editor, and if not entirely satisfactory to his sense of morality they are rejected and the money refunded. Since the commencement of the libel suit by Norman L. Munro, the well-known publisher, the people on the paper have grown even more careful, as it is feared that Mr. Munro will recover damages without a doubt. Mr. Munro claims that the publication of certain personals, inserted with malice prepense by an enemy of his, had the effect of driving his wife away from home and breaking up his household. Should he be able to prove this he will recover swinging damages.

The conviction of John Devoy, on the charge of having criminally libelled August Belmont, and his subsequent sentence to sixty days in the Penitentiary will be a warning to editors against making reckless statements. I have known John Devoy for a great many years, and personally he is as mild mannered and soft spoken a man as could be found anywhere. There is no self assertiveness about him, and he would not willingly injure anybody except "the tyrant," for he is as bitter and thoroughgoing an Irish Nationalist as ever breathed vengeance for "Ireland's wrongs." Put a pen in his hand, however, and get him to write about Irish affairs and he becomes absolutely uncontrolable. Mr. Belmont acted very decently towards him. He gave him a number of opportunities to retract, and when he was convicted, expressed through his counsel that sentence be suspended, as all that he wanted was a vindication of his character. Under the circumstances Devoy, if he is sensible, will be very careful about what he does after he leaves prison.

Jay Gould having found that it was impossible for him to gain admission to any of the recognized Yacht Clubs, is now making frantic efforts to push the new American Yacht Club, which is peculiarly his own success. Emissaries of his are hard at work among Wall Street men of yachting proclivities trying to get recruits. I was told by a broker, whose word I have no reason to doubt, that a number of leading yachting men on the streets have been made extraordinary inducements to join the American Club. "It will be worth so many shares a day if you come and join us," was the offer made to one of the leading members of the New York Yacht Club. The member did not join however, "for," said he, "I think that business and sport ought to be kept distinct, and a man like Gould, who has ruined thousands of men out to be made to feel that despit his illgotton millions there are some places for whose doors there is no golden key.

Poor Charley Backus. His infectious fun and rollicking humor has passed away, and the face which was once so mobile now lies settled and marbled in the coffin. Everybody knew Charley and liked him, not only theatrical people, but judges, professional men and merchants. Since yesterday morning when he died, crowds of people called at his residence on Forty-fourth street to pay their last respects to his memory. He was a man of thrifty habits, and an acquaintance tells that his estate will fall but little short of $500,000. What will now come of the San Francisco Minstrels is a question. Birch always seemed to be lost without Backus, as Backus was without Birch. As they used to say one could not be funny without the birch, while the other was sad unless he had backers. Birch may get a new partner but it will be difficult for him to work in with him at his time of life. Besides the fashion in minstrelsy has changed. Birch and Backus are relics of the old time when Dan Bryant, Neise Seymour, Christie and others were veritable black diamonds in their art for it was an art. The new generation of burnt cork performers can do all they can and more besides and thus were gradually getting the best of the veterans. True, they lack the art, the delicacy of humor with which the old timers invented even in their most rollicking farces, but they dazzle by the amount of things they can.

The old House of Detention for witnesses is now a relic of the past, for under the new law, witnesses of crimes can no longer be submitted to what after all was practical incarceration. It has often been a mystery to me how the old sergeant and the two or three aged policemen who were supposed to guard the inmates, prevented escapes, for after all some of the occupants found it greatly to their advantage to disappear. Yet they had few escapes and then they were always recaptured.

It sweetens the breath, and reddens the gums,

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause. The entire judgment of its patrons.
The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.
The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It invigorates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!
I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:
Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.
ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.
I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.
I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.
C. RYND, M.D.
Dr. B. Mincer and part of his family will visit Devils lake, upper landing, June 5th, and remain a few days. Parties desiring his services should remember the date.

Blissfield Advance: Application to the Probate Court of Monroe county is being made for the appointment of a special drain commissioner, to drain Ottawa Lake. Deerfield Record: A grand national holiday ball will be given at Burnham's hall, on Wednesday evening, July 4th. It will be one of the most pleasant affairs of the kind ever held in this village, and a cordial invitation is extended to everybody. Music will be furnished by Prof. Seidles' full string band with piano accompaniment, of Adrian.

There is strong talk of extending the telephone line from Hudson to Addison, via. Rollin, Geneva and Devil's lake landings. One thousand dollars worth of business subscribed by parties at the proposed connecting points would insure the erection of the line. It has also been suggested that a line from Hudson to Morenci, via. Medina and Canandaigua, be built. The cost would be about $1,000. Of course the people interested in these projects have it in their power to see them practically carried out by subscribing the required amount of business.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 28, 1883.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

The wool market opens very slowly.

The click clack of the screen door is again heard.

Prepare to attend the Tecumseh races next week.

Many of our farmers have commenced cutting their hay.

We have a new time card of the Toledo and Ann Arbor R'y in the HERALD this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip DePuy, of Reading, Mich., are visiting friends here for a few days.

The windows of dealers now display quantities of fireworks, in anticipation of the glorious Fourth.

Don P. Cushman has rented the St. James hotel at Coldwater and will take possession this week.

A. Taylor, of Hudson, has just received a lot of cherries and apricots all the way from California.

Mrs. Margaret Powell, of Seneca, died last week at the advanced age of 103 years, 8 months and 17 days.

R. H. Armstrong, of Hudson, has received a patent on a new halter made from a single piece of leather.

Dr. L. H. Goodrich, of Coldwater, spent last Sunday in Tecumseh visiting his sister, Mrs. C. M. Burlingame.

The L. S. & M. S. railroad will sell half-fare tickets between all stations on July 3d and 4th, good to return on the 5th.

It is said that wild mint scattered about a house or barn will drive away rats and mice. This remedy is certainly worth trying.

Hon. E. Willits takes charge of the State Normal School at Ypsilanti, July 1. He will also deliver the oration at Saginaw, July 4.

The weather prophet business is about played, everybody in that line of business having been disgusted with the weather this spring.

Clubs will be trumps with the small boy in about two months as he sneaks into the back part of the farmer's orchard to get some early apples.

Deerfield is the only town in this section that will celebrate the Fourth. Tecumseh will celebrate by holding the races on the 4th, 5th and 6th.

It is said that the Michigan Central is about to issue a circular advising the traveling public to always leave cars by the front door and to enter from the rear.

The Presbyterian church was crowded last Sunday evening to listen to Rev. Mr. Babbitt's address to the graduating class. The discourse was a very fine effort.

The Kalamazoo Light Guards, while out practicing target shooting for the state encampment, shot a farm laborer named Hope through the head, killing him instantly.

The rush for good furniture at Wm. McCowen's establishment still continues and every day additions are made to his already large stock. Remember, low prices and good goods is his motto.

The man who predicted a dry spring because of a hard winter may be seen almost any day wading through the country in rubber boots and an oilcloth suit, muttering threats against the weather bureau.

When a person slaps himself severely on the side of his face, it is not because he is demented and has conceived a notion that he is somebody else that he wishes to punish, but because the festive mosquito has been seeking a supper in that vicinity.

Mrs. Spalding and her assistants have been very busy the past week at her green house in arranging flowers, in different shapes, for the school exercises. Her collection of flowers are large and all in want of any should give her their patronage.

David Jones has opened repairing and renovating rooms in the store just west of Anderson's dry goods store, where he will clean, mend and repair old clothes. An establishment of this kind has long been needed in Tecumseh and we believe it will be well patronized.

These are certainly prosperous times for farmers. Throughout the neigboring country, in all directions, workmen are engaged in building new farm houses, barns, graneries, fences, etc., and a general air of improvement is visible everywhere. Let the good work go on.

The season has come again when the small boy needs reminding that the penalty for killing or robbing the nests of any of our song birds, is five dollars fine or ten days in the county jail. It is well to say also that this class of birds includes all our common sort except blackbirds, bluejays and a few others.

The corporation pound is completed and ready for any animals that may be found running at large.

David T. Phelps returned to his home in this village from Marquette yesterday. He looks as if the air of the upper peninsular agreed with him

The ladies of the M. E. church will hold a Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival on Wednesday evening, July 4th, in the basement rooms of the church. All are invited.

Wolcott, Temple & Co., were added to the list of telephone subscribers yesterday. The instrument was put in their new office and their furniture, etc., will be moved there to-day.

Gus. Smith, who has been for the last few years in business in California, is visiting friends in this his old home this week. Gus has been doing well in his western home and we are glad to see him.

Yesterday was the fourth birthday of Miss Lina Boyd, and twenty-four of her little friends met at the residence of her grandfather, Jerome Cleveland, and celebrated the event in a happy manner.

The little song at the end of the program last evening, by Miss Aggie Woodward was very neatly rendered. The flute and piano accompaniment by Harry and Jennie Root added much, and we cannot but say that the little girl did splendidly.

Cards are out this morning for the marriage of Dr. E. M. Conklin, of Tecumseh, and Miss Kate Burton, of Clinton. We shall be glad to congratulate the happy couple, but still cannot help but think that "One by one the leaves are falling," and soon we shall be alone.

Assistant Engineer Baird and his surveyors have received orders from Toledo to survey a line from Brittons direct to Toledo through Deerfield.—They will commence work to-morrow morning and push it as rapidly as possible. This action indicates that the M. & O. officials have decided to give Dundee the go by, save three miles and control a line of their own to Toledo.

Many amusing scenes occured yesterday and day before, as the four hundred children were marshalled to and from the opera house to rehearsel for their parts last evening. It was the last day of school and Young America was let loose. As they went by our office we watched the face of each and everyone and not one expression save that of happiness and anticipation could be seen. Four hundred happy faces, four hundred light hearts and four hundred boys and girls who gave not a thought for to-morrow. Vacation and plenty of time to go fishing was at hand for the small boy, and each little girl had a new white or pink dress to wear at the opera house in the evening. Once in a while during the march from the east branch up town a little episode would occur caused by a dog fight, a stray paper wad or a little misunderstanding between some of the boys to destroy for a minute the line of march, but one of the "kid" captains would come at once to the rescue and the double file again be promptly formed. Yesterday was a great day for the children, and all we can wish is that they may always be as happy.

ALUMNI REUNION.

The reunion of the High School Alumni will take place to-morrow evening. The arrangements therefor are somewhat different than heretofore. A social will be held early in the evening at the Presbyterian church parlors to be followed by a supper given by the ladies of the church. After refreshments the history and essay will be presented and voluntary toasts given with responses. It is thought that this arrangement will be preferable to the usual one of having the literary exercises at one place and the supper at another. It is hoped that the members of the alumni will be generally present, for they will certainly enjoy a good time.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

THE GRADUATING EXERCISES HELD ON FRIDAY, JUNE 22, 1883.

A Class of Twelve Receive Their Diplomas—A Large Crowd in Attendance, and a Fine Programme Presented.

The annual commencement exercises of the Raisin Valley Seminary were held last Friday. The weather could not have been more auspicious. A cloudless sky and a temperature of a mild June type drew out an unusually large attendance, and when the hour arrived to open the exercises the main hall of the seminary was filled to overflowing. The room had been elaborately decorated with festoons of evergreens arranged about the walls and suspended from the ceiling. The class motto, "He conquers who undares," appeared in evergreen letters upon the east wall, and the faithful old time observer, the sitting window was imbedded in evergreen and bouquets. The graduating class numbered twelve, all of whom reside in Lenawee county, and we venture to say that the Valley school never graduated a better class, and the old hall never contained a larger or more appreciative audience than on Friday last. The school is now in a very flourishing condition under the efficient superintendency of Prof. White and his able assistants, as the graduating exercises plainly showed. The music provided for the occasion was in keeping with the remainder of the program. Mrs. Winship presided at the organ and the vocal quartette was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Alf. Johnson, Mr. Bennett and Miss Mason, of Adrian. The duets were by Mrs. Johnson and Miss Mason. The floral offerings to the graduates were rich in profusion and sweetness, each young lady and gentleman being the recipient of more bouquets than they could well take care of.

At the appointed hour the company was called to order by Prof. White and the exercises were presented as follows:

We noticed that many improvements had been made on the Seminary grounds during the past year. The old road fence has been removed and there is nothing now to mar the beauty of the lawn in front of the buildings which nature has made so beautiful. The buildings themselves have been renovated and repaired considerably, so that the school in external appearance corresponds with its internal management. The formative and experimental period of the Seminary has been passed successfully, and its future is now fully assured. The school is fully equipped for a good year's work during the coming twelve months, with the following corps of teachers:

Principal—William W. White, B. S.
Assist. Principal—Maggie A. Newsom, A. B.
Associate Teachers—J. H. Douglas, Jr., B. S., Celia B. Jones.
Superintendent—Thomas L. Eddy.
Matron—Elizabeth H. Eddy.

"How is your back?" "All O. K., why?" "Well, if your back is all right, couldn't I borrow your liver pad for a few days?" The above conversation occurred in this office one day last week and we wish to express ourselves on the subject in plain words at once. Let all men understand that this is going a little too far. We will lend almost anything we are lucky enough to have in our possession. A man could borrow our tooth-brush, our pocket-knife or our pocket-book if it would do him any good. We would gladly accommodate anyone for a few days with our bible, dictionary or paste pot; our best pants, last summer's hat, or circus ticket are all at the disposal of our friends, and welcome; but when a man deliberately and in cold blood steps into our office and wants to loan our last and only liver pad, an article that cannot be turned on advertising account or traded for waste papers, but has to be obtained with solid, cold, hard-earned cash, we kick, and in a loud voice say, "No, my friend, we will gladly see you on the south side of Adrian before we will pull the bow out of your legs with our liver pad."

When bitten by mosquitoes on the hands and arms rub on a moist cake of soap, and let the lather dry: it is said to be a very effectual remedy.—Simple, and liable to make you clean.

The Morenci Observer man is receiving his strawberry donations very thankfully.

The Deerfield tray factory is way behind on its orders and is running to its full capacity.

The two sons of Croel Eddy, living at Vincent, Iowa, have been visiting at the old home in Franklin township.

The addition and repairs having been completed to the Baptist church Clinton the building was rededicated last Sunday evening.

Blissfield Advance: Water pumped from the well at Fred Cannon's is strongly impregnated with petroleum and when allowed to stand for a time will gather at the top. A match applied will instantly ignite the stuff.

Clinton News: The first occasion we had to use our new tape measure was on one of J. J. White's strawberries, a Windsor Chief, which measured 4½ inches in circumference. Who is the next man with a big strawberry?

Morenci Observer: Charles Perry, Esq., one of the old, solid and reliable men of Medina township, was struck down with paralysis last Saturday, and has been in a helpless and speechless condition ever since. His life's work is probably finished.

The Clinton school board have engaged the following teachers for next year: Principal, Prof. A. G. Smith; assistant in High School, Miss Ida Fullerton; Intermediate department, Miss Laura Haggart; Second Primary, Miss Mary Sinclair; First Primary, Miss Ida McConnell.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Dundee Reporter: Agent Scoville, of the T. & M. railroad is engaged obtaining deeds for right of way from land owners through this township for the new railroad as per contracts recently made. He pays the cash to each party as soon as deed is delivered. He has already paid out several thousand dollars. A new feature in railroad building in this state—settling all claims for right of way before occupying the land.

Battle Creek Republican, 22d: The laying of iron on the T. & M. road was resumed this morning. For the past few days the men have been putting in side tracks at different points and repairing a washout of 60 feet at Spring Brook, Kalamazoo Co. They started laying iron eastward from the paper mill east of the city this morning.

Marshall Statesman, 22d: Ironing on the T. & M was recommenced on Wednesday morning on the arrival of 32 carloads of iron. It is going on rapidly and at last accounts were nearly to Beadle lake, three and one-half miles this side of Battle Creek.

The Toledo Telegram of last Tuesday, says:

The Seney syndicate are moving for an entrance into the city for the Toledo & Milwaukee. The talk now is to build an independent line from Toledo to Allegan, a distance of 130 miles, but of course if any one should step to the front with an offer to bring the cars of the T. & M. into the city at a good deal less than it would cost to build the independent branch from the city to the line some 15 or 20 miles out of Toledo, there is no telling what might happen. Gene Calvin Bruce, Col. Neal, and Chief Engineer Latcha of the Toledo & Milwaukee were in the city last night, in conference with a number of railway officials, or rather, perhaps to see what offers would be made them to come into the city over this or that route, as the case might be. Mr. Latcha stated to a reporter of the Telegram & Commercial last night that the syndicate had ordered two independent surveys made from the present terminus of the line, into the city and unless a pretty tolerable fat thing of it is offered by parties anxious to have the Toledo & Milwaukee come into the city over other routes, one of these two lines now being surveyed will be used. The calculation is to have the road opened up and in full blast by the first of September next. A mile or more of track is being laid daily, 50 miles or more being completed already. The Toledo & Milwaukee is a very important line, tapping as it does a large tract of country not traversed by any other road.

Minor Davidson is building the foundation for a new addition to his barns on the homestead farm. It will connect the north and south barns and be 92 feet in length, running north and south on the west line of the yard. Isaac Hendershot does the carpenter work, and the frame will be ready to raise in a few days.

The wet weather continues and has a very unfavorable effect upon corn. Some of the early planters have been obliged to plant the third time, and yet there are many places in their fields that lack corn, while some of those who were less impatient have very little missing after but a single planting. Wheat is well headed, and if it escapes the rust the yield will be good for the quantity of straw. The oat fields are looking well as also does hay, but both crops could get along nicely with less rain.

Dr. Rush's Medical Association:
Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last evening. I have taken nearly one bottle, and am thoroughly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I had become convinced that I could not be cured. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,
Very respectfully, WM. G. OSGOODBY.

Mr. Weedles and His Girl.

The dress circle was adorned by a dyspeptic-looking girl, with big feet, who had a brown wart on her face and a certain look about her which plainly told that she was fresh from a boarding-school. Beside her sat a long, gawky young man, who was from the country, and evidently smitten with the charms of the young lady by his side, upon whom he would ever and anon bestow the most tender glances. During an intermission in the play he turned to her, and, in a voice as tender as a sirloin steak, said:

She let fall on him a languid, pitying glance, and then replied:

"Oh, yes, there exists a certain degree of coarseness which is deleterious to the comfort of one's physical being, but, my dear Mr. Weedles, you do no doubt perfectly aware of the fact that chemistry teaches us that the exhalation of so many individuals carbonizes the entire atmosphere, vitiating it to a degree which renders it poisonous to the respiratory organs, as well as to the corpuscles in the blood, producing nausea, and in some cases syncope. You is caused by the lack of oxygen."

"Yes, I know 'em, that is, I've read of 'em, but hain't never seen any yet, as I know on; but when Bill Wilkins, at their protracted meetings down on Goose Creek, said that the heart was a part of the stomach, I told him it was the derndest lie he ever spoke."

"O, dear! how absurd it was in him to make such a statement. Why, don't you know that the palpitation of the viscus generates a subtle electrical force which is the most mysterious, wonderful and startling power that propels the anatomy of the genus homo?"

"I—I have—yes, I've heern tell of it afore, but I don't stick myself up as knowing every thing. I ain't that kind of a man. The folks used to say—and was powerful proud of it—that I warn't no sloucher on grammar; but won't you have some peanuts, Miss Mary?" and he wiped the cold perspiration from his brow, and trembled with nervousness.

"None, thank you, Mr. Weedles; peanuts have a strange effect on my gastronomical organs."

"I didn't mean to hurt your feelings, Miss Mary, because you recollect before you went off to school that I used to bring you peanuts, and we used to sit astraddle the garden fence and eat them. Don't you remember how your old mother used to say that new peanuts were awful colicky? Them were happy days, Miss Mary," and the humble lover sighed as low as a note on a bass-fiddle.

"Oh, Mr. Weedles," she said, blushingly, "I want to ask you something. Did you not say on one occasion that I was possessed of a moiety of the divine afflatus, and that you thought I was a being entirely too seraphic and ethereal to exist in this mundane sphere?"

"Miss Mary," said the lover, and his pulsed and breast heaved, "its a mean, unchaind lie. I never said a word agin you as my life, and I'll just be eternally goldurned if I can't just naturally walk the hide of any man who tries to scandalize me behind my back. I always said Miss Mary Jones was the sweetest girl in the country, and—"

But the curtain went up, and the rest of the conversation was lost in the crash of the orchestra.

The Genius of Hawthorne.

The writings of Hawthorne are marked by subtle imagination, curious power of analysis, and exquisite purity of diction. He studied exceptional developments of character, and was fond of exploring secret crypts of emotion. His shorter stories are remarkable for originality and suggestiveness, and his larger ones are as absolute creations as "Hamlet" or "Undine." Lacking the accomplishment of verse, he was in the highest sense a poet. His work is pervaded by a manly personality and by an almost feminine delicacy and gentleness. He inherited the gravity of his Puritan ancestors without their superstition, and learned in his meditations a knowledge of the night side of life which would have filled them with suspicion. A profound anatomist of the heart, he was singularly free from morbidness, and, in his darkest speculations concerning evil, was robustly right-minded. He worshipped conscience with his intellectual as well as his moral nature; it is supreme in all he wrote. Besides these mental traits he possessed the literary quality of style—a grace, a charm, a perfection of language which no other American writer ever possessed in the same degree, and which places him among the great masters of English prose. —R. H. Stoddard.

Boats, Bicycles and Hay Fever.

Nature has resolved that all the people shall not enjoy themselves at once. With the opening of the season of outdoor sports comes the time of trouble for the poor victims of hay fever. For them flowers have no odor, and the summer little or no beauty. To snuff, sneeze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months:—this is their pitable portion. Whether this form of catarrh is called hay-fever, hay-cold, rose cold or rose fever, makes no difference; they suffer just the same. There is no help in sea-voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. Those only lighten the pocket and leave the disease unabated. But there is a positive cure in Ely's Cream Balm. We could cram these columns with grateful letters of the rescued. Try it and join them. If you continue to suffer it is because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant.

An Iowa paper hit the nail on the head when it said that a newspaper may labor for years for the best interests of a town in every conceivable manner, and it is never spoken of by the citizens. It is not even mentioned to the editor—all his efforts being treated as of no consequence, or as a matter of course; but let that same editor insert a four-line paragraph that in the least reflects discredit on the town or its prosperity, then he hears from somebody at once.

It seems impossible that a remedy made of such common, simple plants as Hops, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, &c., should make so many and such great cures as Hop Bitters do; but when old and young, rich and poor, pastor and doctor, lawyer and editor, all testify to having been cured by them, you must believe and try them yourself, and doubt no longer.

SAMARITAN NEVER FAILS. NERVINE

"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Fits, Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, and all kindred complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It is known world wide as

THE GREAT

NERVE CONQUEROR

It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.00. Sold by all Druggists. (14)

SONGS NEVER SUNG.

"How does that verse run? Something like this isn't it?

There are who touch the magic string,
And noisy fame is proud to win them;
Alas! for those who never sing,

"Yes, that's beautiful, pathetic and true," said our representative. The poet alludes to people who are somehow suppressed and never get their full allowance of joy and air. Which reminds me of a letter shown me the other day by Hiscox & Co., of New York, signed by Mr. E. C. Williams, of Chapman, Snyder Co., Pa., a prominent business man of that place. He writes:

"I have suffered with asthma for over forty years, and had a terrible attack in December and January, 1882. I hardly know what prompted me to take PARKER'S TONIC. I did so and the first day I took four doses. The effect astonished me. That night I slept as if nothing was the matter with me, and have ever since. I have had colds since, but no asthma. My breathing is now as perfect as if I had never known that disease. If you know of anyone that has asthma, tell him in my name that PARKER'S TONIC will cure it—even after forty years." There was a man who escaped the fate of those whom the poet laments.

This preparation, which has heretofore been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be advertised and sold under the name of PARKER'S TONIC. Inasmuch as ginger is really an unimportant ingredient, and unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their customers by substituting inferior preparations under the name of ginger, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of HISCOX & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

A CLEAR HEAD.

For many years I was induced to try AYER'S PILLS, as a remedy for Indigestion, Constipation, and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of five Pills, I found their action (as usual) produced prompt relief. In combination with other medicines, a single Pill taken after dinner, has been all the medicine I have required. AYER'S PILLS have kept me regular and my head clear, and I believe do more than all the medicines ever before tried. Every person similarly affected should know their value. 152 State St., Chicago, June 6, 1882.

Laws for Animals.

QUEER THINGS THAT WERE DONE IN ANCIENT TIMES.

At an early period in history animals became the subject of legal cognizance, and in various countries were both protected and punished in like form of law as human beings. Thus, the Levitical law contained elegant provisions for the protection of animals. The ass lying under the burden was to be helped, (Exod. xxiii., 5; Deut., xxii., 4.) Rest on the Sabbath was enjoined for cattle as well as man; and no work on that day was to be done by either, (Exod., xxiii., 12; Deut., v., 14.) The bird was not to be taken with its young (Deut., xxii., 6 and 7.) animals of unequal strength were not to be made to work together (Ibid. 10.) and the ox, when working, was not to be deprived of its proper food. (Deut., xxv., 4.) By the ancient law of Egypt, to kill a beast, willfully, was punished with death; accidentally it was liable. In India, where belief in metempsychosis prevails, the like consideration has been shown [illegible] Animals were prosecuted in courts of justice [illegible] teenth and seventeenth centuries for injuries by them to human beings or private property, and were subjected in due form of law to trial, judgment, and sentenced—the latter often that of death in a cruel manner. This singular practice arose partly from a desire to apply the lex talionis in judicial form to the offending animal, and partly from superstition. Where the animal was capable of physical seizure, it was formally arrested and brought before the court and then imprisoned in the ordinary prison of the place. The public prosecutor prepared a formal accusation. Witnesses were then examined and their depositions taken as to the truth of the charge. The judge thereupon rendered judgment and passed sentence of death, which was executed in public with great formality, the animal being dressed in the clothes of a man. The modes of death were by burning, hanging by the legs, mutilation or maiming, and varied according to the offense committed. Cases of the kind were frequent in France between A. D. 1296 and A. D. 1572. Hogs to the number of seventeen, as appears by the court records, were hung, drawn and quartered for mutilating and devouring infants in their cradles. Bulls were in like manner tried and condemned for goring human beings. In 1499 one was hung until dead "for having furiously killed a young lad of fifteen years." Horses also, in 1389, were condemned to death for having killed men. A case of this kind occurred at Dijon in that year. In Sardinia, in 1395, wild or domestic cattle taken damage feasant could be lawfully killen. Asses were treated with less severity. For the first offense of trespassing on a strange field one ear was cut off; for the second offense the other ear; for the third offense the animal was confiscated to the crown.—Albany Law Journal.

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." There ought to be a thorough course of instruction in our public schools, in the art of shutting doors. The first lesson would inculcate the elemental and simple duty itself. Boys and girls should be kept passing a doorway, each one opening and closing the door for themselves, until not a mother's son or daughter of them could leave a door ajar. Then the finer features of the accomplishment might be introduced. There are people who always slam a door; there are others who hold it open, and close it so slowly that a whole procession of diseases, including colds in the head, catarrh, sore throat, diphtheria, inflammation of the lungs, and the epizootic can march through.

Is Your Blood Pure?

Now this is an important question, for without pure and wholesome blood there can be no perfect health, and without good health life is a mere burden and a waste. For impure blood the best medicine known is Scoville's Sasparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup may be implicitly relied on when everything else fails. Take it in the spring time especially, for the impure secretions of the blood incident to that season of the year; and take it at all times for Cancer, Scrofula; Liver Complaints, Weakness, Boils, Tumors, Swellings, Skin Diseases, Malaria and the thousand ills that come from impure blood.

Talking about the Liver, we presume that ill temper is more often caused by a disordered liver than anything else. To insure a cheerful disposition take Scovill's Blood and Liver Syrup which will remove the prime cause and restore the mind to its natural equilibrium.

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving calling one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, bones ache and fever symptoms. 25c sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

He Gave up his Crutches in Three Weeks.

Butler, N. Y., March 22, 1882.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:—I wish to say to the public, I have had the rheumatism for fifteen years; some of the time had to use crutches to get around and the past winter could not get out of doors for weeks at a time. Have used all remedies I could hear of and doctored with different physicians to no purpose, and could get no relief until I commenced taking your Syrup. I had taken but two bottles before I could see a change. Continuing its use a few weeks find myself walking without crutch or cane. Any one troubled with rheumatism should take Rheumatic Syrup and be cured, for it is a positive cure. J. R. C. Atwell.

South Butler, March 19, 1882.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:—Gentlemen: This is to certify that I have had rheumatism for several years, [illegible] so lame I could not raise my hand to my head, nor get my coat on without help. I commenced taking your Syrup and began to help me. I have taken two bottles and am as well as ever. I think it has no equal as a rheumatic cure. Israel J. Cooper.

Soothing and Healing.

We might with truth add certainly curing in every case. No remedy known equals Coe's Cough Balsam for Coughs, Colds, Croup and Consumption. It is an old and tried friend and always proves true.

A doctor tries Coe's Dyspepsia Cure.

It is so seldom that physicians will admit being benefited by proprietary medicines that it affords us peculiar pleasure to publish the following:

E. Detchon, M. D., Pleasant Hill, Ind., writes: I have used five bottles of Coe's Dyspepsia Cure, and find it of great value. I have had dyspepsia for 22 years, and have found no one remedy so effectual in giving relief as Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. I have, as a physician, used it in my practice and have been satisfied with its effects.

NEURALGIA.—A very simple remedy for neuralgia is to boil a small handful of lobelia in a half-pint of water until the strength is out of the herb, then strain it off and add a teaspoonful of fine salt. Wring cloths out of the liquid as hot as possible, and spread over the affected parts. Change the cloths as soon as cold, till the pain is all gone. This treatment usually acts like a charm.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:

Gentlemen—At your request I have obtained in open market samples of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters and Allcock's Porous Plasters, and have submitted them to chemical analysis to determine their comparative merits as external remedies.

I find in Benson's Capcine Plasters valuable medicinal ingredients, which do not exist in Allcock's Porous Plasters; hence in my opinion they are superior to those of Allcock's.

WOOL PROSPECTS.

Michigan Farmer: The wool markets are generally quoted "about as last reported," and there is no increase in activity in the trade. It is a fact, however, that, while buyers at the East are holding off, and the markets [illegible] ness, many manufacturers have their representatives in the west ready to take all the new clip they can get at present valuation. In fact they will pay about as high prices in this State as some dealers are quoting in Boston and New York. There is a strong effort on the part of dealers, who undoubtedly lost considerable money last year, to manipulate the market so as to recoup their losses this season, and of course with the commercial press and the daily papers taking their cue from them, it is easy to see [illegible] influences they can wield in filling [illegible] to suit their own interests. But if wool-growers will only keep a stiff upper lip, and show no disposition to sacrifice their clips, they will soon change the situation. Wools are now selling below their intrinsic value—below what they can be imported for—and any change in rates must be upwards, not downwards, as many would have us believe.

From the June crop report of the Secretary of State, we get the following estimates in regard to the wool clip. "The first footings of the sheep and wool columns in the township reports received from the supervisors of 972 townships show that there were 2,079,488 sheep sheared in 1882, yield 11,805,576 pounds of wool, and that the number of sheep in the same townships the present year is 2,193,907, which is five per cent more than in 1882. If there has been a corresponding increase in the remaining townships there will be 2,353,343 sheep sheared in this State the present year and the total clip will be about 12,943,800 pounds."

The marriageable young ladies of a certain Ohio town recently held a convention and among the resolutions passed is the following: "That we will marry no young man, if he is not the patron of his neighborhood newspaper, for it is not only a strong evidence of his want of intelligence, but that he will be too stingy to provide for a family, educate his children, or encourage institutions of learning in this community." Girls, stick to it.

A man who was arrested and locked up at East Saginaw for using abusive language, had $850 in bank certificates and $22 in cash on his person.

There personally appeared George Netcher, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is a resident at the Windsor House, Titusville, that he is fifty-eight years of age, and that he has been afflicted awfully severe, more especially in the right shoulder, so as to be unable to lift his arm without the aid of the other. After taking the second dose of Wilson's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, the pain left my arm and I could handle it with ease as if it had not been afflicted. A CORRECTION.

CLINTON, JULY 3d, 1883.

In last week's issue of your paper I looked in vain among the items from your Clinton correspondent for some mention of an interesting meeting held at the Baptist Church the Sunday night previous. The occasion was the dedication of an addition which we had just built on to our meeting-house. This addition consists of three rooms and is so arranged that the largest of the three opens into the main audience room when need calls for an increase of seating capacity. At the invitation of the pastor, the Methodist and the Congregational churches united with us in the services of the evening. The Episcopal friends were invited, but as their minister subsequently informed me, they found upon investigation that their "law and testimony" forbid their coming.

Now while your correspondent is studiedly silent regarding this dedication and the work which occasioned it, he aims his pointless wit at the terminology of a notice which I put in the Clinton News, in which I took occasion to speak of a Rev. Milo Smith as formerly bishop of the Clinton Baptist church. The would-be quill-driver attempts to be facetious over the capital B in the word "Bishop," as it appears in the notice, and suggests that a small b might better have been employed. Now, I ask, how does it effect the fact in the case or enhance the brilliancy of your correspondent's wit, whether the word in question is capitalized or not? It still remains true, as any Baptist who is acquainted with the polity of his church will affirm, that in the new testament sense, the Baptists have a multitude of bishops; and it is also true that Rev. Milo Smith was once Bishop of the Clinton Baptist church.

A Wild Cat Recollection.

A handsome bank note of the denomination of $5 upon "The Farmers' Bank of Sandstone," has been added to the museum of the central school building, district No. 1. The bank from which this note emanated was of the "wildcat" class, and was located in the township of Sandstone, this county. The bill bears date January 8, 1838, and is made payable to "S. Cobb, or bearer on demand." L. D. Smith was president of the bank, and H. N. Baldwin, cashier. An old citizen informs us that not many months after the opening of the institution, the officers learned one afternoon that the State inspector would be on hand next day to see whether they had in their vaults the amount of coin required by law. Thereupon they hurried over to the residence of a farmer who had a lively team, and offered him $100 if he would go to Clinton, in Lenawee Co., and bring from there a certain amount of specie, in order that their reserve fund might show up properly. He went and got his pay in good wild cat cash. This little scheme was in vogue among all these mushroom banks, one or two kegs of specie answering the purpose of all.—Jackson Patriot, 24.

The Parable of the Prodigal Son.

Now there was a certain man who had two sons.

And the younger of them said to his father, "Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me."

And he divided unto him his living, and the younger son purchased leaves, it an old cloth grip sack and got out of that country.

And it came to pass that he journeyed even unto Bickskin and the land that lieth over against Leadville.

And when he was come nigh unto the gates of the city he heard music and dancing.

And he got into that place and when he arose and went his way a hireling at the gates smote upon him with a slungshot of great potency, and the younger son wist not how it was.

And in the second watch of the night he arose and he was alone, and the pieces of gold and silver were gone.

And it was so.

And he arose and sat down and rent his clothes and threw ashes and dust upon himself.

And he went and joined himself unto a citizen of that country, and he sent him down in a prospect shaft to dig.

And he labored before day.

Wherefore when he spat upon his hands and lay hold of the long handled shovel, wherewith they are wont to shovel, he struck his elbow upon the ball of the shaft wherein he stood, and he poured the earth and rocks out against the back of his neck.

And he waxed exceeding wroth.

And he tried even yet again, and behold! the handle of the shovel became tangled between his legs, and filled his ear high full of decomposed slate and the perjury which is in that region round about.

And he wist not why it was so.

Now, after many days the shovelers with their shovels, and the packers with their picks, and the blasters with their blasts, and the hoisters with their hoists, banded themselves together, and each said to his fellow:

Go to! Let us strike. And they strike.

And they that stroke were as the sands of the sea for multitude, and they were as terrible as any army with banners.

And they blew upon the ram's horn and the cornet, and the sackbut, and the alto horn, and the flute, and the bass drum.

Now it come to pass that the younger son joined not with them that did strike, neither went he out to his work, nor on the highway lest at any time they that do strike should fall upon him and flatter him out, and even send him unto his home packed in ice, which is even after the fashion of that people.

And he began to be in want.

And he went out and joined himself unto a citizen of that country; and he sent him into the lunch room to find tourists.

And he would fain have filled himself up with the adamantine cookies and indestructible pie, and the vulcanized sandwiches which the tourists always did eat.

And no man gave unto him.

And when he came to himself he said: How many hired servants hath my father on the farm with bread enough and lots to spare, and I perish with hunger.

And he resigned his position in the lunch business and arose and went unto his father.

But when he was yet a great way off he telegraphed to his father to kill the old cow and make merry, for behold! he had struck it rich, and the old man paid for the telegram.

Now, the older son was in the north field plowing with a pair of balky mules, and when he came and drew nigh to the house he heard music and dancing.

And he took the blood girl by the ear and led her away, and asked her, whomsoever cometh this unseemly hilarity?

And she smote him with the palm of her hand, and said, This thy brother hath come, and was dead, and is alive again, and they began to have a high old time.

And the elder son kicked, even as the Government in the kicketh, and he was hot under the collar, and he gathered up an armful of profanity and flung it in among the guests, and set him up and quoted his.

It is difficult to realize the enormous power of the bright speck, Jupiter, shining so quietly in the sky. A writer has shown that the power which the sun has to put forth to hold Jupiter in his orbit is equal to the combined strength of 170,000,000 bars of solid steel, each one a mile in diameter. Jupiter's pull upon the earth, according to the same authority, is equal to the strength of 23,000,000,000 bars of steel, each of them one foot in diameter. So, if the mere power of gravity were all that was required to make Jupiter's approach dangerous to the earth, evidently he is lacking in the power. But no one believes that the sisterhood of worlds will acknowledge the dominion of the sun to prove equally destructive.

Reading in School.

HOW THEY USED TO DO IT WITH EFFECT.—PROGRESS BACKWARD IN AN IMPORTANT BRANCH OF LEARNING.

"Of all knowledge and mental training, however, reading is in our day the principal means, and reading aloud intelligently the unmistakable if not the only sign. Yet this, which was so common when the present generation of twenty, more or less, boys, is just what our highly and scientifically educational educators seem either most incapable or most neglectful of teaching. And yet the means by which children were made intelligent and intelligible readers 35 or 40 years ago were not so recondite as to be beyond attainment and use by a teacher of moderate abilities and acquirement who set himself earnestly to his work. As I remember it, this was the way in which we were taught to read with profit to ourselves and with at least satisfaction to our hearers. Boys of not more than 7 to 9 years old were exercised in defining words from an abridged dictionary. The word was spelled and the definition given from memory, and then the teachers asked questions which tested the pupil's [illegible] had given, and the members of the class, never more than a dozen or so in number, were encouraged to give in their own language their notion of the word and to distinguish it from so-called synonyms. As to the amount of knowledge that was thus gained it was very little—little, at least, in comparison with the value of this exercise as education, that is, of mental training, which was very great. This same class read aloud every day, and the books that they read were of sufficient interest to tempt boys to read them of themselves. The class was called up before the teacher, ranged in a "dressed," as the soldiers say—in a line. At a signal they all bowed together a prescribed bow, and if this was done awkwardly by the class as a whole, or by any individual, the process was repeated and instruction was given by the teacher, with example. No bobbing of heads was allowed, no awkward position of the arms and hands, or of the legs and feet was passed over unnoticed. A deference now from a boy to his master or his elder was a matter of minor morals. When the reading began all the class were [illegible] to follow the reader, each in his own book; for any pupil was liable to be called upon to take up the recitation, even at an unfinished sentence, and go on with it; and if he hesitated in such a manner as showed that his eye and mind were not with the reader's the effect upon his mark account was the same as if he himself had failed in reading. If the reading of any sentence did not show a just apprehension of its meaning the reader was stopped, and the sentence was passed through the class for a better expression of its sense. Whether this was obtained from the pupils or not, the teacher then explained the sense, or gave some information, the want of which had caused the failure, and by repetition of both reading—the bad and the good—showed by contrast and by comment why the one was bad and why the other good. Words were explained; if they were compound words they were analyzed, the different shades of meaning which words have in different connections were remarked upon, and the subject of the essay, the narration, or the poem which formed the lesson for the day was explained. The delivery of the voice was attended to, not in any pretentious, artificial, elocutionary way, but with such regard for good and pleasant speech as was dictated by common sense and good breeding. The young readers were not allowed to hang their heads either over their bosoms or over their shoulders, but were made to stand up straight, throw back their shoulders, and lift their heads well up, so that if their eyes were taken from their books they would look a man straight in the face. Only in this position can the voice be well delivered. The slightest mispronunciation was, of course, observed and corrected, and not only so, but bad annunciation was checked, and all slovenly mumbling was reprehended, and as far as possible reformed. Yet with all this there was constant caution against a prim, pedantic, and even a conscious mode of reading. The end sought was an intelligent, natural, and simple delivery of every sentence.—Richard Grant White.

Women as Pedestrians.

Walking long distances, even miles, is very common to English women and those in other parts of Europe, but it is almost unknown in America. In Europe large parties are made up to take their summer outings in this way, and it's not only the young people who go, but the husband and wife, parents and children, brothers and sisters, or a group of pleasant acquaintances. They make a pedestrian trip through some chosen bit of their own or some other country, stopping at wayside inns for a longer or shorter time, climbing hills and exploring valleys, mixing with the people through which their paths lie, and gathering at once fresh health, new life, keen perceptions and a knowledge of the names and customs of the country that they could not have possibly have gotten otherwise. Through Germany, France, Italy, England, Ireland and Scotland, one is constantly meeting those jolly and bright people. These parties equip themselves with no little expense and trouble. A stout knapsack is strapped upon each individual's back, whatever the sex, a heavy cane, strong shoes with thick soles, a short flannel costume, broad hat, and a cheerful merry disposition are the essentials; and though in our country a party like this might be looked upon as tramps, the country people would soon grow accustomed to the sight of these pilgrims, and the weak, slight Americans become as sturdy as their English brothers and sisters.

NO HOME EXEMPT.

The Sources of Those Mysterious Troubles That Come to Every Household Explained.

The following article from the Democrat and Chronicle, of Rochester, N. Y., is of so striking a nature and emanates from so reliable a source that it is herewith republished entire. In addition to the valuable matter it contains it will be found exceedingly interesting.

To the Editor of the Democrat and Chronicle:

SIR—My motives for the publication of the most unusual statements which follow are first, gratitude for the fact that I have been saved from a most terrible death, and secondly, a desire to warn others who read the statement against some of the most deceptive influences by which they have ever been surrounded. It is a fact that to-day thousands of people are within a foot of the grave and [illegible] caught away from just this position and to warn others against nearing it, are my objects in this communication.

On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, had weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull and indefinite pains in various parts of the body and do not understand it. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought it was nothing; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noted a heavy, and at times a neuralgic pain in my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid but little attention to it. However my stomach was out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet I had no idea, even as a physician, that these things meant anything serious or that a monstrous disease was becoming fixed upon me. Candidly, I thought I was suffering from malaria and so doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled in the bottom. And yet I did not realize my danger, for indeed, seeing these symptoms continually I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

There is a terrible future for all physical neglect, and impending danger and impending danger always brings a person to his senses, even though it may then be too late. I realized at last my critical condition and aroused myself to overcome it. And, oh! how hard I tried! I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the prominent mineral springs in America and travelled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, nervous prostration; another malaria; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of all of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during all of which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders—the little twigs of pain had grown to oaks of agony. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a torture to myself and friends. I could retain no food upon my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell upon the floor, convulsively clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My urine was filled with tube casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages.

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, rector of St. Paul's church of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation he mentioned a remedy of of which I had heard much, but never had used. Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures which had come under his observation, by means of this remedy, and urged me to try it. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I cherished the prejudice both natural and common with all regular practitioners, and derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being the least beneficial. So solicitous, however was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice and try the remedy he so highly recommended. I began its use on the 1st day of June and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me, but this I thought was a good sign for in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it as the sickening sensation departed and I was able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than for years. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, if I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, where and whenever I had an opportunity. I also determined that I would give a course of lectures in the Corinthian Academy of Music in this city, stating in full the symptoms and almost hopelessness of my disease and the remarkable means by which I have been saved. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 20 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition to Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state deliberatively and as a physician, that I believe more than one half the deaths which occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may seem like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive symptoms of its own, indeed it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys of their vicinity but has the symptoms of nearly every other kidney complaint. Hundreds of [illegible] whose certificates are authorized by a physician's certificate of "Heart Disease," "Appoplexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common diseases, when in reality it was Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians and fewer people realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence by the commonest symptoms, and fastens itself upon the constition before the victim is aware. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power which was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, and as such is usually supposed to be heart disease. As one who has suffered, and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore every one who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. Certain agony and possible death will be the sure result of such neglect, and no one can afford to hazard such changes.

I am aware that such an unqualified statement as this, coming from one known as I am, throughout the entire land as a practitioner and lecturer, will arouse the surprise and possible animosity of the medical profession and astonish all with whom I am acquainted, but I make the foregoing statements, based upon facts which I am prepared to produce, and truths which I can substantiate to the letter. The welfare of those who may possibly be sufferers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

J. B. HEXTON, M.D.

Source of Personal Beauty.

A beautiful person is the natural form of a beautiful soul. The mind builds its own house. The soul takes precedence of the body, and shapes the body to its own likeness. A vacant mind takes all the meaning out of the fairest face. A sensual disposition deforms the handsomest features. A cold, selfish heart shrivels and distorts the best looks. A mean groveling spirit takes all the dignity out of the figure and all the character out of the countenance. A cherished hatred transforms the most beautiful lineaments into an image of ugliness. It is as impossible to preserve good looks with a brood of bad passions feeding on the blood, a set of low loves tramping through the heart, and a selfish, disdainful spirit enthroned in the will, as to preserve the beauty of an elegant mansion with a litter of swine in the basement, a tribe of gypsies in the parlor and owls and vultures in the upper part. Badness and beauty will no more keep company a great while, than poison will consort with health, or an elegant carving survive the furnace fire. The experiment of putting them together has been tried for thousands of years, but with the unvarying result. There is no sculptor like the mind. There is nothing that so refines, polishes and ennobles face and mien as the constant presence of great thoughts. The man who lives in the region of ideas, moonbeams though they be, becomes idealized. There are no arts, no gymnastics, no cosmetics, which can contribute a tithe so much of dignity, the strength, the ennobling of a man's looks, as a great purpose, a high determination, a noble principle, an unquenchable enthusiasm. But more powerful still than any of these as a beautifier of the person, is the over-mastering purpose and pervading disposition of kindness in the heart. Affection is the organizing force in the human constitution. Woman is fairer than man because she has more affection than man. Loveliness is the outside of love. Kindness, sweetness, goodwill, a prevailing desire to make others happy, make the body a temple of the Holy Ghost. The soul that is full of pure, generous affections fashions the features into its own angelic likeness, as the rose by inherent impulse grows in grace and blossoms into loveliness which no art can equal. There is nothing on earth which so quickly transfigures a personality, refines, exalts, irradiates with heaven's own impulse of loveliness, as a pervading, prevailing kindness of heart. The angels are beautiful because they are good, and God is beautiful because he is.

According to the best authorities, the quantity of salt contained in the sea amounts to 400,000,000,000 cubic feet, which if placed in a pile, would form a mass 140 miles long, as many broad, and as many high; or, otherwise disposed, would cover the whole of Europe—islands, seas and all—to the height of the summit of Mont Blanc, which is about 16,000 feet high.

The Age of Gluttony.

With the Empire began that epoch of splendid gluttony which has no parallel. The history of the Cæsars, with some exceptions, is the narrative of a continual orgie. Take the notorious group at random—Commodus, Caligula, Tiberius, Verus, Vitellius, Nero, Heliogabalus, Domitian. These men spent their lives in a round of monstrous debaucheries. The day and the night, we are assured, were not long enough for their revels. Verus, the first to increase the number of guests from nine to twelve, prolonged his suppers throughout the night. Nero sat at a table from midday to midnight. Tiberius spent two days and a night at the festive board. They had huge appetites—not only the gigantic Maximinian who devoured forty pounds of fresh meat and drank five gallons of wine at a meal, but frigid dandies like Commodus, who ate even in the bath; Vitellius, who ceased eating only while he slept; Domitian, who ate "out of his hand" to stay his stomach in regular intervals of regular repast. Heliogabalus was perhaps the most elaborate, Vitellius the most extravagant, in his daily fare. The latter squandered in seven months £7,000,000 sterling, chiefly on his table. The total staggers belief; but let us examine the figures on the other side. The Roman epicure is reported to have paid $300 or so for a mullet; a brace of pigeons cost $8. At an entertainment given to Vitellius by his brother, 2,000 of the rarest fish and 7,000 of the most curious birds were served up. One individual spent $25,000 on a single dish made of tongues of the costliest singing birds. The Roman bon vivant, supping on the brains of peacocks and pheasants, the tongues of nightingales and the roes of the most delicate fishes, swallowed thousands of pounds at a meal; and we need only multiply the individual expense by the number of guests to form a notion of the cost of a high class dinner in the days of the Cæsars. A supper in the Appollo meant $10,000 thrown to the purveyors. But the emperors were certainly the most reckless in the profligacies of the table. Seneca and Tacitus are among the authorities who tell us that Heliogabalus spent $160,000 on one supper; that Nero, master of "the house of gold," ate a dish which cost over $150,000 and drank a bumper still more precious. It is asserted further that the Emperor Verus treated twelve friends to a feast which cost $230,000, and Seneca is responsible for the statement that Caligula spent $100,000 on a supper. The magnificence of the Emperors was imitated, if not equaled, by citizens like the Apicii, like Æsop, the actor, and his son Clodius; like Vedius Pollio, who fattened his lampreys on the flesh of murdered slaves. These, we know, were brave days for the players; but Æsop, the comedian, must have had a solid private fortune, for the Garrick of his age, the great Roscius, made but $250,000 a year of his profession, an income which would hardly clear half a dozen barely decent suppers to illustrious patrons.

A Fashonable Woman's Prayer.

Strengthen my husband, and may his faith and his money hold out to the end.

Draw the lamb's wool of unsuspicious twilight over his eyes, that flirtation may look to him like victories, and that my bills may strengthen his pride in me.

Bless, oh future! my crimps, rats and frizzes, and let thy glory shine on my paint and powder.

Enable the poor to shift for themselves, and save me from all missionary beggars.

Shed the light of thy countenance on my camel's hair shawl, my lavender silk, my point lace and my necklace of diamonds, and keep the moth out of my sables, I beseech thee, oh fortune!

When I walk out before the gaze of vulgar men, regulate my wiggle and add new grace to my gait.

When I bow myself to worship, grant that I may do it with ravishing elegance, and preserve until the last the lily white of my flesh and the taper of my fingers.

Destroy mine enemies with the gall of jealousy, and eat up with the teeth of envy all those who gaze at my style.

Save me from wrinkles, and foster my plumpers.

Fill both my eyes, oh fortune! with the plaintive poison of infatuation, that I may lay out my victims—the men—as numb as images graven.

Let the lily and the rose strive together on my cheek, and may my neck swim like a goose on the bosom of crystal water.

Enable me, oh fortune! to wear shoes still a little smaller, and save me from corns and bunions.

Bless Fanny, my lap dog, and rain down hailstones of destruction on those who shall hurt a hair of Hector, my kitten.

Smile, oh fortune! most sweetly upon Dick, my canary, and watch with the fondness of a spirit over my two lilywhite mice with red eyes.

Grave Robbers.

Of all classes of people the professional grave robbers are the most despised. He robs us of our dear friends for a few dollars. How different is this new grave robber, Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which robs graves of thousands of consumptives. This unequalled remedy for coughs, colds and consumption, whooping cough, croup and all throat and lung diseases, subdues and conquers these troubles speedily, safely and thoroughly. Trial bottles free, of Baker & Hall.

If it be true that Nature at certain moments seems charged with a presentiment of one individul lot, must it not also be true that she seems unbaindful, unconscious of another? For there is no hour that has not its births of gladness and despair, no morning brightness that does not bring new sickness to desolation as well as new forces to genius and love. There are so many of us, and our lots are so different: wait wonder that Nature's mood is often in harsh contrast with the great crisis of our lives? We are children of a large family, and must learn, as such children do, not to expect that our hurts will be made much of—to be content with little nature and caressing, and help each other the more.—[George Eliot.

"We are selling at the rate of three doz. bottles of Baker's Japanese Liniment a week." Pegg & Wilson, Druggists, Morenci, Mich.

There is no influence in the world so refining as that of nature, and none at such little cost.

A good Baptist Clergyman of Bergen, N. Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was told that Hop Bitters would cure, because he was afraid of, and prejudiced against "Bitters." Since his cure he says nonesteed fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual gap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, these qualities are of the utmost importance.

VALDOSTA, Georgia, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

"I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

Why They Often Fail.

Young men often fail to get on in the world because they neglect small opportunities. Not being faithful in little things, they are not promoted to the charge of greater things. A young man who gets a subordinate situation sometimes thinks it not necessary for him to give it much attention. He will wait till he gets a place of responsibility, and then he will show people what he can do. This is a very great mistake. Whatever his situation may be, he should master it in all its details, and perform all its duties faithfully. The habit of doing his work thoroughly and conscientiously is what is most likely to enable a young man to make his way. With this habit, a person of only ordinary abilities would outstrip one of greater talents who is in the habit of slighting subordinate matter. But, after all, the adoption by a young man of this great, essential rule of success shows sign to be possessed of superior abilities.

"A Blessing in Disguise."

484 Adelphi St., Brooklyn, N. Y., March 29, 1881.

No family should be without Allcock's Porous Plasters. These healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with Brandreth's universal life-giving and life healing pills, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good and sound health. Mrs. E. Tompkins.

One Trial.

If you have been using other Plasters, one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their wonderful superiority. Take no other so-called porous plasters that claim to be better, they are all frauds gotten up to sell on the world wide reputation of the genuine article.

TO PROTECT SILVER WARE.—Mr Strollberger, a silversmith of Munich, tried various unsuccessful ways of protecting his wares from discoloration in the show window. At last he hit upon the expedient of covering his silver with a thin coating of collodion, which he found to answer perfectly. The article is first warmed, and then painted over carefully with collodion, diluted with alcohol, using a wide, soft brush for the purpose. Silver goods thus protected, he states, have been exposed in the window for over a year without growing dim, while other pieces not protected became black in a few months' time. We have have never tried it, and therefore give it for what it is worth.—[Rur. New Yorker.

A man in Wyoming Territory says he saw a crow and rattlesnake fight not long since. He noticed the crow jumping back and forth in an excited manner, and kept watch of him. The snake, which was a large one, would repeatedly strike, but the crow evaded him every time, and finally flew away, when the gentleman, on making an investigation, found that the head of the snake was picked to shreds.

—That was a crocus, and he was entitled to a chromo.

The horse will have a good appetite and be considerably improved within twelve hours." The remedy is worth trying.

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood disorders, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50c a bottle, of Baker & Hall.

1883. FOR THE SEASON OF 1883.

There has been already sold 439,554 of these Machines.

This record, more than anything we can assert or claim for the merits of the WALTER A. WOOD HARVESTING MACHINES, should commend them to the favor of the Farmer.

The evidence of the success of our machines, and of their unrivalled superiority in merit and public favor, does not rest upon any bare assertion of ours, but upon facts, and these facts are uncontrovertible. We have always maintained, and do still maintain, that the best possible test of merit in Harvesting Machines is their long-continued success in practical use, and upon this standard we have ever been and still are content to rest our claims to public favor.

It is a well attested fact by all who use them, that the Wood Machines require far less repair than any other machine in use. No other Binder or Mower is as durable and free from breakages.

The Wood Twine Binder as now made retains those meritorious features which have rendered it UNAPPROACHABLE BY RIVALS in the past, and which are already familiar to the farming public, and also contains such RADICAL IMPROVEMENTS as will certainly place it ANOTHER LONG STEP IN ADVANCE of all competition. In the family war of the different machine manufacturers the Wood has come off victorious and remains master of the field.

The manufacturers have followed up the new binder, during the progress of the harvest of 1882, through grain fields without number, from one end of the United States to the other, from Texas to Dakota, from Virginia to Vermont, and even as far north as Prince Edward Island in the British Dominions—where the latest growing grain crops are to be found—and the results of this close and protracted inspection have fully warranted the representations made, strong though they be.

There has been various improvements of importance in the details of both the Harvester and Binder for 1883. All we ask is for the farmers of this vicinity to examine the Walter A. Wood Machines before placing their order, and we have no fear as to the result, as it is conceded by all that it is the most perfect machine in all its details, manufactured.

Rheumatic SYRUP.
The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am, gratefully yours,

PHILIP MOORE.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 5, 1888.

Young man, Michigan is one of the Union, and if you are comfortably fixed here you will have to hunt a good while before finding a good excuse for pulling up stakes. Listen to your kind old uncle and be sensible. Stay right here in the old Wolverine State, marry a Michigan girl, invest your earnings in Michigan property, and if anybody tells you of a fairer clime than this, where wealth is gained with little or no labor, toss him a salute from the hem of your ear, play him a tune from your nose, a la flute and bid him begone before you pin him to a tree with a pitchfork. There now sonny, run down to the depot and meet the boys on their way back from Dakota.—Lowell Journal.

N. Y. Herald: In the far west they have a way of arguing which is thoroughly convincing. When a gentleman remarked, "Them hosses is a fine pair," a grammarian corrected him, telling him that a more correct way of speaking would be to say, "Them hosses are a fine pair." The first speaker quietly pulled out a huge navy revolver, cocked it, and then said, "Mister, it is perfectly correct to say, 'Them hosses is a fine pair.' Just you think the matter over and I'll give you two minutes or thereabouts to agree with me." Then the second speaker recalled the time when he kept a "deestrict" school and boarded round, and long before the two minutes were up he said: "My friend, my deliberate opinion is that I was laboring under temporary insanity when I contradicted you. There ain't no finer specimen of pure English language than the expression 'Them hosses is a fine pair.'" The gentleman with the revolver put up his weapon and blandly remarked: "I knowed you'd come to your senses when you took in all the circumstances."

WOOL PROSPECTS.

Wool comes in very slowly and continues to sell at from 28 to 31c. The Boston Commercial Bulletin says:

"The dull condition of affairs continues, and the reported closing down of a large number of woolen mills cannot but have some effect upon the market. Goods are moving off very slowly and the manufacturers state that they are forced to take this step. With this fact in view, wool buyers will be still less inclined to pay the prices demanded by the farmers, and many buyers expect lower prices. In Ohio the market is quiet, as the farmers are asking from 32 to 35c and buyers will not pay higher than 30c.

The N. Y. Bulletin says:

"The few who talk and write as though all hope must be abandoned, draw upon a somewhat limited imagination in the effort to entertain the small circle cognizant of their utterances. In fact, while several hundred sets of machinery have been reported as stopped, there are many still running, and manufacturers can be found picking around occasionally for supplies, with a noticeable supplement to all purchasers in the orders for prompt shipment, indicating that supplies at the mills are low. Of course, the stand-off, on the part of the manufacturers, is likely to continue until goods improve, but when wants do increase there is little doubt they will be full and anxious."

The editor of the Michigan Farmer is in receipt of a letter from the wool editor of the U. S. Economist from which the following quotation is made:

"Your farmers will have a hard time I fear, selling their wool this year, and no matter how they may growl about it they will be obliged to accept much lower prices unless by a united action they with one accord withdraw the clip entirely and store it, which of course they will not do. If the farmers accept from 27½ to 32½ cents, they possibly may be able to market the clip now, but if they hold above these figures they will be obliged to carry the clip themselves, as 1,060 sets of cards will be shut down before the Ides, or as we learn before the 1st proximo."

There is one thing certain, any rush on the part of farmers to market their wool will only tend to further demoralize the market, and enable buyers to obtain a still greater advantage. From the east the reports are unfavorable, as they are likely to be until after the wool has passed into the hands of the dealers, when we will be apt to hear a very different song from them. A number of mills have closed down owing to the dullness in woolen goods, and this of course must effect values. * * * At the London wool sales fine are firm and steady, coarse wools are dull and weaker. The demand for the fine wools of Australia keeps up well, and it is said a number of American manufacturers have been quite large purchasers. If so, they will not have made anything by their investment taking the present price of such wools in this country into account.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York, June 29, 1888.

Unless the weather should change decidedly and a prolonged spell of heat with sultry evenings make its appearance the hotel proprietors at the seaside resorts will have a hard time of it. Coney Island has thus far been quite a sufferer from the pleasant days and cool nights. At the Manhattan Beach hotel, Mr. Breslip, who is the lessee this year says: "We are doing splendidly," but one of his lieutenants told me in confidence the other evening that the hotel was losing money. "But," added he, "we are not the only ones, all the other hotels are just as badly off." The result is that a goodly number of waiters have been discharged. The natural consequence of this is that, when you do sit down to table you have to wait a long time before you are waited upon, and then you are hurriedly served. I have eaten three or four times at the Manhattan Beech Hotel, and the simple fare of soup, a roast, some vegetables and a small cup of coffee never occupied me less than an hour and a half. This is too long.

You feel inclined to indulge in strong language, but when you see the flushed, perspiring face of the poor waiter, and listen to his breathless apologies for the long waits you say nothing, but make up your mind that in the future you will eat somewhere else.—The hotel in consequence is steadily and fast running down. The bathing facilities, and the provisions against accidents are likewise poor. The only thing that maintains itself is the music under the indefatigable Gilmore's care. They may tell as they will that Gilmore is a charlatan as far as music is concerned. As a caterer of musical entertainment at the sea shore he has not his equal. The railroad facilities to the beach are likewise very bad, and on account of the quarrel between the Long Island railroad company and Mr. Starin who owns the boat line between Bay Ridge and New York, passengers by that route are subjected to the most vexatious delays. The entire trip from New York to Bay Ridge and thence by rail to the beach can be made in 40 minutes. On race days and other occasions when there is a great mass of people to cross, the railway people somehow manage to spend an hour and a half in making the trip. They want to wean people from that route. The Long Island railroad people wanted to beat Starin, and establish a boat line of their own. They were unable to get a suitable pier however. In the eleventh hour they had to appeal to Starin, and he seeing his opportunity put the screws on. An excursion ticket to and from Manhattan Beach costs fifty cents. I am told Starin gets about forty cents of that. The ordinary trip to Bay Ridge costs ten cents.

Mrs. Langtry will spend the early part of July at Long Branch, where Mr. Gebhard has leased Lester Wallack's cottage for her. The reason why she does not go to Newport is because Mr. Gebhard does not care to go. His horses will take part in the race meeting at Monmouth Park, and for that reason he wants to stay at the seashore. It is quite amusing to see Freddie and the Lily, walking together. They walk beside each other as demurely and as silent as if they had been pulling the matrimonial cart for twenty years.

The fight against the Trade Dollar has broken out again, and wholesale dealers are determined to force it out of circulation. Grocers and other retail dealers will be the heaviest sufferers from this at first, because the middle and lower classes with whom they deal as a rule pay with trade dollars. Factories and other large concerns which employ great numbers of men as a rule pay with trade dollars which they frequently buy at a discount and thus make money. Now however working men are growing alive to their interests and declare that they will not in future accept trade dollars in payment for their wages. The hands of two leading cigar making firms notified their employers on Thursday of this intention, and at other large places the men will follow suit before the end of the week.

Francis Murphy, the temperance preacher goes to Europe in September for rest. He has already engaged a stateroom on the steamer City of Rome.

A private letter to Theodore Thomas states that he will in future give up handling large choruses on account of the fact that so many dead-head tickets have to be issued to the escorts of the singers. This is the reason why the concerts of the Chorus and Oratoria Societies in this city seldom paid though always well attended.

The exodus of ministers to Europe has begun. Every steamer that sails has from ten to twenty on board.—The devil will have a practical walk over in this country this summer if this rushing across the Atlantic does not soon cease.

Bar-rooms having exhausted every other device to attract trade have hit upon a new one. In addition to the free lunch and a fancy card they now give you a button hole bouquet, for which you have to pay five cents on the street.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 2d, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the Sarsaparilla in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 75 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882.

Yours gratefully,
Hiram Phillips."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

Dr. B. Mincer and part of his family will visit Devils lake, upper landing, June 5th, and remain a few days. Parties desiring his services should remember the date.

James S. Hunt began to fix up this morning after breakfast to take the train and could not find his vest. He searched high and low, from cellar to garret, under the evergreens in the front yard and among the early peas in the garden, but all to no purpose. He cannot remember where he last wore the vest or where he took it off, but he knows there were three dollars in money and a $125 watch in the pockets when the jacket last came under his observation. There were no signs of burglars about the house and there was no disturbance last night. He is not disturbed about the jacket but feels a little uneasy in mind in regard to the whereabouts of the watch.

BASE BALL AT CLINTON.

Quite a game and many Tallies for the Tecumseh Boys.

Last Friday a picked nine of this place took a trip to Clinton to play one of the Clinton nines a game of Base Ball. The weather was good, everybody seemed to have a good time, and our boys came away with a great many tallies. At 3:30 o'clock the game was called with Tecumseh to bat. Bostwick was put out on first, Baird made a good hit and then the fun commenced. Chapman, Root, McKinney, and all the rest to bat till 14 men had earned 12 tallies and all in so short a space that mist came into our reporter's eyes, the Clinton News man's score-sheet looked like a liver pad, our scorer was wild and called for time to put down runs, while about a cord of valuable fence timber was used up by private scorers who were using their "jack-knives." The last half of the first innings resulted in a goose-egg for Clinton and our boys went to bat again. It would be useless to give the figures of the game all through as we could not spare the space and no one would read it. Errors were made on both sides, our boys were green, this being their first game this season. Heinrick our catcher never stood behind the bat before but did splendidly, having only three pass balls. After the first innings the Clinton boys played a pretty fair game, but they need practice, and do very ordinary field work.

The Clinton News man sat on the same plank we did, and was shaded by the same tree, but he seemed to feel uneasy and almost as nervous as our scorer. He was absent minded and wanted to go home any time, he seemed to have lost all interest in Base Ball on general principles and thought the whole thing foolishness. 'Tis funny how the same thing looks to different people.

At the close of the game the score stood, Clinton 8, Tecumseh 26.

Evening News: Homer came nearer being a temperance town last week than ever before in 25 years. The rain drove the T. & M. R. R. laborers into the village, and they drained the saloons and almost created a panic among the regular customers, who looked on aghast and saw the budge supply run low.

Last week Mamie Duncan and Emma Sanger, two young girls of St. Joseph, each took a large dose of arsenic, evidently with the idea of improving their complexion. Mamie Duncan died from the effects of the poison, but the other girl was saved. Mamie was 16 years old and Emma 14. Both belonged to very respectable families.

S. C. Stacy closed a bargain on Tuesday last with J. B. Swan for the purchase of the HERALD building and adjoining property. The lot is 22 feet front by 11 rods deep, together with the joint use of the ten foot alley between the building and the Opera House. We now have—what we have never had the privilege of enjoying before—a business home of our own.

We count it in place to utter a note of warning to parents against the dangerous and now illegal toy pistol. We have not the recently enacted law before us, and can only report our recollections of the fact that its sale and use are prohibited. The experience last year fully warrants the law. A citizen has just handed in some alarming statistics of last year's fatalities. Cincinnati, New York, St. Louis, and Chicago had each ten to forty deaths; Rochester six; Dayton 2; Baltimore 13. These boys were not shot dead, but the injury given to the nervous system through the abrasion of the skin by a spark of fulminating powder brought on that fearful disease, tetanus, or lockjaw, issuing in one of the most terrible forms of death. Not only forbid this fatal pistol to your children, but forbid them playing with boys who have toy pistols. A watchful firmness will save great grief.

BASE BALL.

Hudson vs. Tecumseh—A Fair Game and Our Boys Defeated by Three Tallies.

At promptly half past ten yesterday morning the game was called on Bills' diamond, the Hudson boys going to bat. Randall was put out at first, Temple followed in the same way. King took first on called balls; Crocker was also given first, while King made second. Gainer made a small hit and was third man out, giving Hudson the first goose egg. Bostwick was out on a fly, Freeman struck out, Chapman made a good one bagger and came home by errors and bad throwing all around the diamond. Baird struck out and wound up the innings with one tally by Chapman.

Second innings—Dacon out at first, Wagner out by catcher, Cone struck out. Another 0 for Hudson. McKinney out on 3 strikes, Heinrich a good one base hit, but Root and Anderson struck out making first goose egg for Tecumseh, winding up second innings.

Third innings.—Knapp out on fly, Randall was given first base on balls, and then by bad throwing and catching Randall scored the first run for Hudson. Temple struck out, Crocker given first on balls, passed ball by Heinrich gave Temple a score. Gainer to bat, and made first, and by error of Root, Crocker scored the third run for Hudson. Dacon batted a fly which was nicely taken in by Root. Snell struck out, Bostwick made a one bagger, Freeman out on fly, Chapman a good first base hit, which with bad fielding let Bostwick and Chapman home. Baird out at 1st. Score 3 and 3 at the end of the third.

Fourth innings.—Wagner out at 1st, Cone to first on balls, Knapp one base hit, Cone second, Randall out at first, Temple got to 1st and Knapp scored; King out at 1st. McKinney out on fly, Heinrich 1 base hit, Root out at 1st. Anderson to 1st while Heinrich stole a run. Score at end of 4th, Hudson 5, Tecumseh 4.

Fifth innings.—Crocker to 1st on balls, Gainer out on fly, Crocker scored. Dacon to 1st, Wagner out on 1st, Cone out at 1st, leaving Dacon dead on 3d. Snell to 1st, Bostwick out at 1st, Freeman to first on balls, Chapman and Baird struck out leaving Snell and Freeman on 3d and 2d.

Sixth innings.—Knapp struck out, Randall to first on balls, Temple to 1st, passed ball by Heinrich, and Randall in, King out on fly caught by Baird, Crocker struck out, McKinney to 1st, Heinrich out at 1st, Root to 1st, McKinney out at 3d, Anderson out at 1st.

Seventh innings.—Gainer strikes out, Dacon out on foul, Wagner one base hit, Cone to 1st, Knapp two base hit, Wagner scored, Randall struck out leaving Knapp, dd. on 2d, and Cone dd. on 3d. Snell a good hit, Bostwick to 1st, passed ball by King, and Snell scored, Freeman to 1st, Chapman to 1st. Baird out on fly, Freeman, Chapman, and Bostwick second, McKinney struck out, Heinrich to 1st, Root out on fly, Heinrich dd. on 2d. Score 8 to 8.

Eighth innings.—Temple out on fly; King to 1st, Crocker to base on balls, Gainer to 1st, Kings and Crocker scored, Dacon out on fly, Wagner to 1st, score for Gainer. Cone to 1st, Knapp out on foul, leaving Cone dd. on 1st and Wagner on 2d. Three tallies for Hudson. Anderson out at 1st, Snell out on foul, Bostwick out at 1st.

Ninth innings.—Randall to 1st, Temple out at first, when Baird, Bostwick, and Freeman made a fine double play, dropping Randall on 2d. King struck out. Freeman struck out, Chapman and Baird out at first. Score 11 to 8 in favor of Hudson.

Our boys did better work in the field than Hudson, but they did not seem to bat Dacon in very good shape, McKinney's arm was lame and he let too many men to bases on balls. Chapman pitched very well. Heinrich did splendid work behind the bat and will make a rattling good catcher. The Hudson boys seemed to be well pleased with the game. The Hudson scorer seemed to know very little about base ball and good manners and several times got so excited that it was impossible for him to keep track of the score, but we hope as he grows older that he may improve, so lay no nothing against him.

THE ALUMNI REUNION.

The regular annual reunion of the High School Alumni Society was held last Friday evening at the Presbyterian church parlors. Although the attendance was not as large as on some former occasions, still a very enjoyable evening was passed by those who were present. After an hour spent in social converse, the company repaired to the tables and partook of refreshments suitable to the season. The strawberries and ice cream having been properly passed upon, the literary part of the entertainment was introduced. In the absence of the president, the first vice, Chas. Waldron, officiated in that capacity, who announced this program.

THE GRADUATING EXERCISES.

A Class of Three Receive Their Diplomas and Launch Their Bark on Life's Voyage.

The High School graduating class was small this year, only three in number, all of them young ladies, but they were none the less ambitious, and the program of graduation was carried out in a manner which reflected credit upon Prof. Hammond and the class. The exercises were held at the Opera House as usual. The class motto, "Learn to labor and to wait," was displayed in large gilt letters upon the rear scene, and the stage was neatly set with flowers, house plants, etc. The exercises began shortly after eight o'clock and the following program was presented:

Music, Overture—High School Orchestra.
Prayer—Rev. C. E. Conley.
Music, Overture—High School Orchestra.
Essay, The True and the False—Mary L. Wood.
Music, "Come where the lillies bloom"—Mrs. Bidwell, and Mrs. Morley, Messrs. Strong and Conkling.
Essay, One Evening—Ida M. Taylor.
Music, "The way through the wood"—Mrs. Bidwell.
Essay, Dew Drops—Adah Waldron.
Music, The Mascotte,—High School Orchestra.
Address in behalf of the class—S. C. Stacy.
Address to class and presentation of diplomas—E. B. Wood.
Music, Inst. Duet—Misses Wood and Taylor.
Benediction—Rev. C. E. Conley.

The music was unusually fine, the High School orchestra giving some fine selections, and the vocal music was good of course. The closing duet was a fitting finale to the program. In the matter of floral gifts this class certainly carried off the palm over any of their predecessors, each young lady receiving two or three dozen bouquets and a number of elegant and elaborate floral pieces. As our space will not permit the publication of the essays in full we give a brief synopsis of them which will indicate their character.

The True and the False.

BY MARY L. WOOD.

There is a standard by which everything in this world must be tested.—Trace the history of a tree. From the beginning unperceived influences are at work. The seed, the soil, the climate, the after culture, the breeze that blows, the sun's rays, the falling rain all have an influence upon its growth. Can we not trace the development of human character with like changes from the cradle to the grave. The home forms the most lasting impression on the youthful mind and hence a child brought up under the guidance of proper home influences gives promise of a better and nobler future than one reared in a home of poverty—and yet it sometime happens that all early influences seem to have no effect. To what are these unlooked for results due? Evil companionship will often counteract the effects of a good home. Every child must learn for himself to decide between the right and the wrong, to test the true and the false. The boy who learns to resist temptation himself, notwithstanding his surroundings is the one who succeeds. This test, "The true and the false," can be applied to nations as well as to individuals. That nation will advance most rapidly in civilization and progress which observes the "True" in government. Let us so strive to shape our actions in this life that we may not be weighed in the balance and found wanting.

One Evening.

BY IDA M. TAYLOR.

A few evenings ago as I was gazing blankly from the window and trying to think of the most agreeable way to dispose of a disagreeable duty, I heard some one say inquiringly, "A lunatic," and then another voice reply: "Hush, its only one of the graduates waiting for an inspiration." I willingly acknowledge the truth of the last that I was waiting for an inspiration and had been during most of the last school year. It had been raining during the afternoon, one of those sudden showers which mar a perfect day, but make the sunshine that follows the brighter. It was a delight to walk.—The essayist here gave an account of her walk, the air castles built, and the mental reflections enjoyed. The essay was imaginative, but displayed much thought and was finely written. In conclusion she said: "If I did not find that for which I sought, I found something much better, a realization that even genius is after all as some one has said, only a great capacity to work, and inspiration or any real good does not come to those who seek for it aimlessly, but to those who learn to labor and to wait."

Dewdrops.

BY ADA WALDRON.

Miss Waldron began with a quotation of three verses from Gray's Elegy, and then proceeded.

Let us continue this picture. Dew drops may be likened to those imperishable thoughts commonly known as quotations. Age, education, character, thought and genius combine to produce them. To those by whom they were written, they may have been nothing more than the tiny drop of water to the cloud of mist. Our whole store of literature is made brilliant and beautiful by these literary dew drops. Our best authors have written from various motives. Shakespeare, Dryden, Johnson and Goldsmith wrote for a livelihood. Scott and Hood to pay off business debts. Milton, Pope and Byron for renown. Spencer and Burns for enjoyment. Bacon, Locke, Addison and Words worth for the good of their fellow men. We cannot tell when quotations were first used, but they were found in the earliest English literary works. Wit or humor in a quotation makes it more prominent, but not more beautiful. The choicest quotations are sometimes taken from unknown authors, although our favorite poets are more largely drawn upon than others for this purpose.—Again the habit of cultivating a love for the choicest thoughts of others will enable us to think deeply ourselves. What our thoughts are our writings must be. May we never say with Thomas Paine, "I would give worlds, had I them at command, if what I had written had not been published." May we rather say with Wordsworth "Nothing I have written contains a line I would wish to blot out."

My investigation of Allcock's Porous Plaster shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plaster. These ingredients are so proportioned that the Allcock's Porous Plaster will not cause blisters or excessive irritation, and I find it superior to and more efficient than any other plaster.

The Eider Duck.

In a country so poor as Iceland the down of the eider-duck is an appreciable source of wealth, and the bird has been practically domesticated. Close to every little Handel-stad, or trading station, if there is a convenient island, there is sure to be a colony of eider-ducks, and the birds are to be seen by hundreds, swimming and fluttering about their island home, or squatted upon its shores in conscious security from the foxes, which infest the mainland. The eider ducks are protected all the year round under heavy penalties, being the only birds enjoying legal protection in Iceland, and they prefer the neighborhood of human habitations for their breeding places. From the largest of these "duckeries" as much as £300 is cleared annually, the down being worth a sovereign per pound on an average; but we were surprised to hear that this value was a little depressed in 1878, owing to the war in Turkey. The ducks make their nests among the rough hummocks, characteristic of all grass land in Iceland, laying their large olive-green eggs upon neat little beds of down, so soft and brown they are perfectly tame, allowing themplaced, with only a few querulous notes of remonstrance, or they will flop slowly and heavily away for a few yards on the approach of the intruder, waddling hastily back as soon as he retires. The duck is of a mottled gray and brown color, and is hardly to be distinguished at a short distance when squatted upon her nest; it is she who furnishes the precious down. The drake, on the contrary, has a showy back and white plumage, and is a remarkably conspicuous bird. He is not so tame as his mate, and has an easy time of it, while she is attending to her domestic duties. When the nest, however, has been repeatedly robbed of the down, and the poor duck finds difficulty in replacing it, the drake comes to the rescue and recognizes his paternal responsibility by furnishing a supply of down from his own breast.

Guns of the Brazilian Indians.

While visiting Brazil, I saw for the first time the blow gun of the Indians of the country, called by the Spaniards cerbatana, by the Portuguese guaratana, and by the Indians pecuna. It is made of any long, straight piece of wood of which bows, clubs and spears are usually made. The poll or staff is about eight feet in length and two inches in diameter near the mouth, and tapering down to half an inch at the extremity; it is divided longitudinally; a canal is hollowed out along the centre of each part, which is well smoothed and polished by rubbing with fine sand and wood. The two parts are then brought together, nicely molded with a resin of the forest to make it hard. A couple of boar's teeth are fitted to each side of the mouth end, and one of the curved teeth of a small animal—resembling a cross between a squirrel and a hare—is placed on the top for a sight. The arrow is made of any kind of light wood, mostly of the wild cane, or the middle fibre of a species of palm leaf, which is about a foot in length, and the thickness of a match. The end of the arrow, which is placed next the mouth, is wrapped with a very light kind of cotton, which grows in a pod upon quite a large tree, and is called by the natives huimba; and the other end, very sharply pointed, is dipped in a vegitable poison prepared from the juice of a beautiful creeper called bejuco de ambihuasca, mixed with aji, or a strong red pepper, or whatever substance the Indians know to be deleterious.

The marksman, when using his pecuna, instead of stretching out the left hand along the body of the tube, places it to his mouth, by grasping it with both hands together close to the mouth-piece, in such a manner that it requires great strength of the arms to hold it out at all, much more to hold it steadily. If a professional marksman, he will kill a bird at thirty or forty paces.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—I feel it my duty to let you know how much I have been benefitted by the use of Rheumatic Syrup within the last three weeks. I have been a great sufferer for the last six years—much of the time my limbs and hands were so swollen that I was unable to help myself or move without help. I have used many external applications and liniments, which were warranted to cure, and some of which did afford temporary relief, but the pain soon returned, more acute and aggravating than before. I am fully convinced that, to effect a permanent and lasting cure for rheumatism, the liver and kidneys must be regulated. This, the Rheumatic Syrup has done for me, and now I am as well as ever, and am indebted to you for this invaluable remedy, which is sure to have the largest sale of any medicine in the market, as soon as its merits are known. I am truly yours,

Petrified While Alive.

"One of the most heart-rending cases that ever came under my notice," said a well-known physician, "was that of a man whose death could not affect his relations, because he had none; but the manner of his dying was so awful that it was a call upon common humanity for sorrow. He was a young fellow who, at the breaking out of the war, when he was twenty years old, enlisted and fought with courage under Confederate banners. His gallantry was so marked that he was promoted from the ranks and became a captain, with the prospect of further advancement as the war progressed. In the terrible warfare about Nashville in the winter of 186– he was exposed to the rains and colds, and contracted inflammatory rheumatism, from which he never recovered, and which caused his resignation. He returned to his home a miserable cripple, and never was able afterward to work. For three long years he was dying as slowly and surely, and with as much torture, as the most refined cruelties of human invention might have produced.

Do you know what inflammatory rheumatism is? No? Well, imagine that you were lying perfectly still, with not a muscle in play, and the most excruciating pains shooting like barbed hooks through every limb and joint. You try in the delirium of agony to assume another position.

The mere movement of a joint is such an awful cruelty that the rack is an infant horror by the side of it. The inflammation seems to have turned every nerve and muscle to the most delicate pitch of sensibility, and if each nerve in the body were bared and torn simultaneously, the pain could not be greater. Moments become hours, and hours become ages of suffering. Imagine these tortures prolonged through fifteen years of time, every year dragging out like a century, and you can picture to yourself what his life was. Opiates? Of course opiates were administered but what of the moments, when the influence had waned, and when, rushing upon him like wolves of torture made ravenous by hunger, the pains broke through the veil of insensibility and tugged at his frame with teeth of cruelty? The very immunity which opium gave added another horror when it was withdrawn. He was kept under its influence as much as possible. In nine years he had lost every power of muscular effort, and set in his chair a living corpse, only to be moved to his bed, where he became a mummy with the spark of life still glowing

The time shortly came when he no longer lay in his bed, but, sitting in his invalid chair, became the enthroned embodiment of a soul too miserable for life, too sacred to be freed by other hands. If there were in the Sphinx of Egypt an immortal soul and a human intelligence, can you fancy its torture? Day after day looking upon the same hot waste for centuries; day after day with a fixed gazing upon a molten horror of sun, and not blind; year after pitiless year smothered in an awful silence which makes every pain so exquisite that it almost becomes audible to a living persecutor. So he sat, year after year with his muscles fixed in iron, his eyes looking upon a world as dreary as misery could paint it; his voice sinking in his throat, only to be expelled by hunted nature in wild and piteous cries when the pain racked into hopeless cowardice the strong heart that had led his men up to the dreadful caverns of cannons' mouths without a flinch. But there came a time when the restless days and nights of active torture became to him as a delightful reminiscence. The time came slowly and like eternity. If you were to confine a man and let one drop of water fall on his head every five minutes, it would kill. But, before death, would come years of suspense that would move like the change of fixed stars. There would come that awful suspense of time when the pitiless drop would fall like the crash of a universe upon the doomed head.

The time when the very life stood still, and the soul was imprisoned in a mausoleum. Fixed and rigid, the poor boy was a sphynx, endowed with life and deprived of movement. Every joint in his body became ossified by the chalky deposits, and not even a movement that provoked deathless agony became possible. Even the joints of his neck became rigid, the fingers stiff and the limbs petrified. He was a stone frame, with a covering of flesh and the soul of a living man. The muscles of the eye even failed, and the lids, falling upon the weary balls, shut in forever the darkness that hung about him like the gloom of the grave. Then, came, with the same steps of measured eternity, the ossification of the joints of the jaw, and he was fed between the rigid teeth. How slowly death moved cannot be described, but when the inflammation had seized his heart in that last prolonged spasm, nature could no longer give warning of its agony. What tortures took place under the drawn curtain of that human mystery can no more be told than the secrets of those horrors in the lowest dungeons of the Inquisition. Death came, but it was like the fading of the mist-line into the clouds, and as we stood about that chair no one dared to utter his thought—no one could tell whether the soul still lurked in its prison, or whether death was life, or life was death.

A Cure of Pneumonia.

Mr. D. H. Barnaby, of Owego, N.Y., says that his daughter was taken with a violent cold which terminated with pneumonia, and all the best physicians gave the case up and said she could not live but a few hours at most. She was in this condition when a friend recommended Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs and advised her to try it. She accepted it as a last resort, and was surprised to find that it produced a marked change for the better, and by persevering in its use a permanent cure was effected.

ORANGES AND FLORIDA.

Better than Breezes and Blossoms—Under a New Flag.

Even the balmy air and orange groves of Florida fail to keep its people full of happiness and comfort. Art must help nature everywhere—in the tropics as among the pines of the North. "And chief among the blessings which are adapted to all zones," writes Dr. J. G. Wallace, of Fort Dade, Fla., "is Parker's Tonic. It seems to have the world for a field, and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seems to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved me personally of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purifier and invigorator."

Messrs. Hiscox & Co., call especial attention to the fact that after April 16, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply Parker's Tonic. The word "Ginger" is dropped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations, under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic, we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

The Tarantula Spider.

This name is given to a large spider, observed at first in the neighborhood of Tarentum, in Italy, and for the bite of which, considered poisonous, music and dancing were said to be the only remedy. Certain songs and airs were solemnly used for the occasion, and the tarantula itself danced to the air of the "tarantella." The truth is that the bite produced disorders of the nervous system, with strong convulsive movements, which was exaggerated into dancing. This disorder seems to have occurred frequently in the kingdom of Naples during the sixteenth century, to have been nearly similar in its character to the disease which was originally called "St. Vitus' Dance," and to that which has occasionally prevailed in parts of Scotland, and has been called the "leaping ague."

The patients, nearly all of whom were women, soon after being bitten, as it was supposed, used to fall into a stupor, from which nothing revived them but the sound of such music as pleased them, on hearing which they had an irresistible desire to [illegible] the music continued, and was in tune and sufficiently lively, they would go on jumping and dancing till they fell exhausted, and all the time some used to shriek, some to laugh and sing, some to weep. When, after a short rest, they had recovered from their fatigue, they would again begin to dance with as much vigor as before, unless the music were played slowly or confusedly, when they would stop and grow anxious or melancholy; or even, if the music were not soon made agreeable to them, would fall into a dangerous state of stupor. The disease used to last about four days, and seemed to be cured by the profuse perspiration brought on by the active exercise; but it often returned at the same time in the following year, or even for a succession of years, and on every occasion required the same treatment. The nervous affection was called the Tarantismus. Since it has been found that the bite of the tarantula can produce no such strange effects as these, many have suspected that the disease ascribed to it never really existed, but was feigned for the purpose of exciting pity, or for the pleasure of dancing. There is good reason to believe that in most instances it was merely counterfeited; but there can be no doubt that such a disease has occurred, and has given occasion to the practice of the fraud.

The habits of the tarantula are very curious. Its jaws and feet are large and strong; its legs and feet are furnished with long stiff spurs, with which the animal seizes its prey; and its foremost two pair of feet are furnished with a down, like a brush, which the tarantula employs in making its toilette, and in crawling on smooth surfaces; the feet are terminated by two strong nails. When full grown, it inhabits its underground passages, forming a burrow sunk to the depth of a foot beneath the surface; and this burrow not only protects the animal from the pursuits of its enemies, but serves it as an observatory, whence it may dart on its prey. At first the hole sinks perpendicularly, then bends and forms an almost horizontal elbow, after which it resumes its direction downwards. At this elbow the tarantula stands sentry, never losing sight of the door of its dwelling; and here the creature's eyes glitter like diamonds, rendered bright like those of a cat, by darkness. Externally, the opening of the tarantula's burrow is surmounted by a funnel, constructed of pieces of dry wood, united by clay, and lined with a web spun by the spider, which is continued through the whole interior of the burrow. This prevents the fall of earth, and enables the tarantula by its claws quickly to ascend or scale its fortress.

M. Leon Dufour has described the mode of hunting the tarantula, mostly in May and June, at Valencia, in Spain. The Apuhan peasants imitate at the month of the hole the humming of an insect by means of an oaten stalk, and so lure the tarantula to the mouth of the burrow, and capture him. It is easily tamed. M. Dufour put two full-grown and very vigorous male tarantulas together in a glass vase, and then witnessed a combat fought with wonderful strategy, until the ferocious vanquisher mortally wounded his enemy in the head, and then devoured him.

Hay Fever.

I was severely afflicted for eleven years with hay fever. After trying almost everything without avail, I gave up all hopes of being cured, when I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. To my surprise, after a few applications, I was entirely relieved. Ira Watson Harris, Letter Carrier, Newark, N. J.

I recommend to those suffering, as I have, with hay fever, Ely's Cream Balm. I had tried nearly all the remedies, and gave this a decided preference over them all. It has given me immediate relief. C. T. Stephens, hardware merchant, Ithica, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

As when She was Young.

"I have used Parker's Hair Balsam and like it better than any similar preparation I know of," writes Mrs. Ellen Perry, of Cobbrook Springs, Mass. My hair was almost entirely gray, but a dollar bottle of the Balsam has restored the softness, and the brown color it had when I was young—not a single gray hair left. Since I began applying the Balsam my hair has stopped falling out, and I find that it is a perfectly harmless and agreeable dressing."

Preserving Autumn Leaves.

In Appleton's "Summer Book" we find some directions for preserving autumn leaves, written by a lady whose success in the preservation of such leaves has given her quite a local reputation. "From her own observation," she says, "I think it is a mistaken idea that frosts are needed to brighten and deepen the tints of autumn leaves. 'Leaves have their time to fall' is as certain as any of Nature's marvels, and they do it much more gracefully in the mellowing sunshine, ripening day by day, every day showing new tints and beauties, until they fall, their mission accomplished. To preserve their coloring, they should be gathered from the trees before frosts (getting all the shades and tints possible, of course,) sought, and in sprays suitably for pressing, and in once place between the leaves (not too near together) of books or newspapers, and several pounds weight laid upon them. They should be kept, while pressing, in a cool place, and as often as every other day (every day is better during the first week) changed into new books. This is important, because the paper absorbs dampness from the leaves, and they soon get discolored if allowed to remain.

They should be kept in press until thoroughly dry—between two and three weeks; otherwise they shrivel. They are then ready for a coating of oil or varnish. I find a mixture of three ounces of spirits of turpentine, two ounces of boiled linseed oil, and half an ounce of white varnish preferable to either alone. Get a perfectly smooth board, large enough to lay a spray upon, with no reaching of the leaves beyond the outer edges, or in an unlucky moment comes the wail: 'How could I be so careless as to break off the very loveliest leaf!' I have done it more than once, and have thereby learned that autumn leaves are brittle things and require tender handling. Take a piece of soft cloth to apply the dressing. A brush does not do it as evenly and there must be no streaks left. They are a blemish when dry.

After the application, the leaves must be laid carefully on boards or papers (not over-lapping each other) until dry, and then disposed of as taste suggests, avoiding as much as possible a stiff, unnatural arrangement. They charm me most in sprays and groups on curtains and walls with or without ferns; but they can be arranged very artistically on the panels of doors, using starch for holding them in place. I have seen them used with evergreens in winter decorations with great effect. The stem can be broken off, and a fine wire attached in its place, which makes them a little more yielding to handle. There is beauty for some in a wreath, so called, of autumn leaves; but I have always failed to see it, more especially if under glass. They have such a helpless, imprisoned look—the beauty all flattened out of them.

Not long since I read the maledictions of an individual on a newspaper. He had read in it: 'To preserve autumn leaves, put a little white wax on the surface and pass a warm iron over them.' He said he sat up till after midnight ruining a bushel of the loveliest leaves he ever saw. 'It left them the color of an old felt hat.' I have had some experience in the ironing process, and can truthfully say it spoils both leaves and temper. The leaves of sumach and the Virginia creeper, or five-fingered ivy, will retain their beauty for a time if pressed, and can be used to advantage with other leaves; but after drying they have not much substance, and soon 'the grace of the fashion of them perisheth,' as do so many other beautiful things."

Human and Animal Bones.

It is remarkable how frequently the bones of horses, cows dogs, and sheep are mistaken for those of human beings. "In an antiquarian collection of relics obtained from a neighboring Roman castrum, I saw (says Dr Alfred Taylor) the tibia of a dog carefully labelled and religiously preserved as the bones of an ancient Roman. The same collection contained fragments of bones of various animals—carnivorous and herbivorous—all marked as human relics. This collection belonged to an antiquary who preferred adopting his own view of the nature of the relics to taking the opinion of any one acquainted with anatomy. Even well-informed men may be easily mistaken on such subjects. Belzoni, the celebrated traveler, brought from Egypt, with his sarcophagi, a number of bones taken from the interior of the Pyramids, which he pronounced to be the bones of King Cephrenes, and of some of the Shepherd Kings. The late Mr. Clift, of the Royal College of Surgeons, by the request of a friend, went down to examine them after they had been submitted to public exhibition, and he found that they were nothing more than the bones of oxen. The osseous relics of saints, as they are collected and preserved in glass and crystal cases in Roman Catholic countries, often present anomalies which would surprise an anatomist. Supernumerary ribs and vertebræ are not uncommon, and intermixed with them I have seen bones which certainly never appertained to a human being.

These facts show the importance of entrusting the examination of bones, in all judicial inquiries, to well-educated medical men. The lamentable effects of popular ignorance were displayed in a case that occurred at Damascus in 1840, which at the time excited great public notice. A Roman Catholic priest and a boy suddenly disappeared in the early part of that year, and a strong suspicion arose that they had been murdered. Certain Jews were charged with having murdered them. The sewer in the quarter of the town in which they lived was examined, and some bones were found. These were pronounced by the persons who discovered them to be human bones, and the discovery was considered sufficient to confirm the suspicion of murder which had arisen. Some persons who inspected the bones pronounced that they must have been lying in the sewer for a great length of time, and that they were those of an animal. A proposition was then made that the bones should be packed in a box and forwarded to the Parisian Academy of Medicine for their decision. I believe it was subsequently clearly proven that they were animal remains."

UNABLE TO LIFT HIS ARM.

CRAWFORD CO., PA., CITY OF TITUSVILLE.

There personally appeared George Netcher, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is a resident of the Windsor House, Titusville, that he is fifty-eight years of age, and that he has been afflicted painfully severe, more especially in the right shoulder, so as to be unable to lift my arm without the aid of the other. After taking the second dose of Wilson's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, the pain left my arm and I could hand it with ease as if it had not been affected. Now I am relieved entirely after taking seventeen doses. GEO. NETCHER.

RAILROAD NOTES.

We learn from Ass't Engineer Baird that two new lines are being surveyed by the M. & O road from Britton. One runs from Britton in almost an air line to Alexis above Toledo, crossing the Lake Shore at Deerfield. The other [illegible] Britton direct to Fedeciman, the T. & A. A. crossing with the Monroe branch and then parallel with the T. & A. A. to Toledo. From all the information we can now gather, it is more than probable that one of these two lines will be adopted.

Deerfield Record: A surveyor of the new Toledo & Milwaukee railway appeared in town on Wednesday and yesterday with a gang of men, began surveying a new line for that road. The start was made from Corbus, and the line will run in a southeasterly direction with the intention of striking [illegible] near Toledo, where it is said [illegible] have probably failed in their arrangements with the Toledo & Ann Arbor road, and will build an independent line of their own into Toledo. And as the line by way of Dundee would be several miles out of the way, the company propose to run the road in a direct line from Britton on the Wabash through this village to Toledo. Perhaps after all the talk indulged in by Petersburg and Dundee, Deerfield will get the Toledo & Milwaukee road.

The Wonderful Efficacy of

DR. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and brings on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in time like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

SECRET.

THE DAILY DISCOMFORT OF THE PERSONAL PRESENCE OF URIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLIGA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.

It has been conceded by medical scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments and soothing lotions will not eradicate these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLIGA is a vegetable compound and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 96 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLIGA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

Gentlemen—At your request I have obtained in open market samples of Benson's Capsicum Porous Plasters and Allcock's Porous Plasters, and have submitted them to chemical analysis to determine their comparative merits as external remedies. I find in Benson's Capsicum Plasters valuable medicinal properties which do not exist in Allcock's Porous Plasters, hence in my opinion they are the superior article.

Rush's Medical Association:

Dear Doctors—The three bottles of Dr. Rush's Regulator I ordered were received by express last [illegible]. I have taken nearly one bottle and am [illegible] pleasantly satisfied with the result. For over two years I have been troubled with sharp pain at my heart. My physician, upon examination, pronounced it enlargement of the heart, and was unable to give me any relief. The trouble grew worse, and I became convinced that I could not live. While in New York City, last week, I called on one of the most prominent physicians there, who charged me $25 for an examination and then recommended your "Regulator." Knowing you to be a regular Medical Association, and not a patent medicine scheme, I ordered the three bottles. I have not been troubled since I commenced taking it, but shall continue and take the entire three bottles so as to obtain a permanent cure. You have my sincere thanks. I am, gentlemen,

Very respectfully,
WM. G. OSGOODBY.

Minneapolis Harvester AND Twine Binder.

The only Binder Manufactured having

MR. APPLEBY'S Latest Improvements.

The record this popular binder made last season in Lenawee Co., is abundantly ample evidence to convince any farmer that this is the latest improved, easiest handled and by far the most perfect working Harvester and Binder in the market. Mr. J. F. Appleby, the inventor of the Appleby Binder superintends the construction of the Minneapolis, and with the improvements of 1883, especially the double packer trip, it is thoroughly adapted to the wants of the Michigan farmer, as there is a great variation in the size and condition of our grain the Binder can be moved instantly and easily, also the raising and lowering of the whole machine by the driver in his seat.

The machine has all the valuable points that any other has and many very vital points that no other machine has. Last season we sold 32 of these machines to some of the best farmers in this vicinity and we have a good testimonial from every one of them, besides others that own other binders that have seen the superior working of the Minneapolis acknowledge its superiority over all others. No other Binders ever sold in Lenawee Co. can produce such a record.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MACON MUSIC.

Miss Ellie Thomas, who has been spending the last three months in Grand Rapids arrived home last Saturday.

The Misses Estelle Miller and Frank Richart are visiting their relatives at Tiffin.

Next Sunday evening there will be a Sunday school concert at the Methodist church.

Owing to the heavy fall of rain last Wednesday, the pleasure seekers were obliged to leave the picnic grove and take shelter in the church, where the exercises were held and all present enjoyed a very substantial supper. The exercises consisted of music, recitations, essays and an address by the Rev. C. E. Conley. Great preparations had been made to have everything pass off pleasantly, and if the weather had only permitted, everyone would have been well pleased.

The sound of the mower is making "iron music" on the farm and the "perfume of the new mown hay" is wafted to us by the passing breeze. These poetic allusions are not appreciated by the farm boy, who wearily leaning on his fork, listens attentively to catch the welcome sound of the dinner bell.

A DISSOLUTION.

The Salvation Army of Adrian has been mustered out of service, that is, the old firm have dissolved partnership and the concern will be reorganized. The Record gives these interesting details.

The co-partnership heretofore existing between General Walter S. Bailey and Major Cole, under the firm name of The Grand Salvation Army of America, Bailey & Cole, proprietors and commanders, (copyright secured) was last evening dissolved by mutual consent. All accounts due the above firm will be collected, and all debts charged to the firm will be paid by the said Bailey who will continue the business under the old name with all the rights, titles and appurtenances thereunto. Several of the outlaying strongholds of the devil, including Toledo and Jackson will be stormed, and forts will be established therein.

Major Cole will still continue his work among the Phillistines, although he does not contemplate the organization of an army. Captain Shorter and Sister Carr are still fighting the good fight, and last evening they skirmished on the "hill."

Let the good (?) work go on!

A few more "split ups" and the army will be a thing of the past. Not content with fighting the "World, the Flesh and the Devil," they must needs, for the want of something to do, fight among themselves. Verily, what a wonderful thing is grace, where it moveth itself.

FATAL ACCIDENT.

A team driven by a Rollin man, Henry Hord, who was accompanied by Lon Fitts, of the same place, were frightened by the escaping steam from the locomotive. The team was being driven into the village, on Railroad street and went down that street at a terrific pace. Near the Lane street crossing stood the horse and buggy of Dr. Chapman, the proprietor of the Zaube Wasser sanitarium. In the buggy sat Wesley Goty, who was in the employ of Dr. Chapman. The vehicle attached to the runaway team collided with the buggy of Dr. Chapman, throwing Goty to the pavement with great force, and killing him instantly.

The buggy of Dr. Chapman was badly smashed, and the Rollin vehicle was considerably demoralized.

Brooklyn Exponent: Mrs. Joseph Wright, over sixty years of age, met with a painful accident a few days ago. She had been sitting up the first half of the night with Mrs. Wm. H. Ambler and was relieved about midnight when she started as she supposed, to go up-stairs, but entered the cellar way by mistake and fell to the bottom of the stairs, sustaining severe bruises and internal injuries.—She is at present improving so that she is able to sit up.

Detroit News: Dr. Rynd, of Adrian, went to Pinckney on the Fourth to make an oration. He began and the seats fell down. He continued and the platform on which he was standing went down. He closed, and lightning tore the inwards out of the telegraph office. He started home, and a cyclone came up and the rain soaked up what was left of the celebration.—The doctor has a terribly strong voice.

George Osins, George Wahr and Chas. H. Ludlow have bought the stock of books and wall paper of Jno. Moore, an old established dealer at Ann Arbor. The firm name will be George Osins & Co.

WOOL PROSPECTS.

The last Michigan Farmer has this to say about the present wool prospects:

The wool market in this State has now been open for about three weeks, and we cannot as yet see that there has been any appreciation in values such as usually takes place after the season has fairly opened. There is no doubt but there is a firmer feeling among holders, and that the top price is more readily obtained by sellers than two weeks ago, but that is all that can be said. There is also more disposition apparent among manufacturers to lay in stocks at prevailing low rates than was apparent some weeks ago, they having arrived at the conclusion that a stock of wool laid in at present prices cannot, in the nature of things, prove a poor investment. Washed wool is selling in the interior at a range of 28a32c per lb., with 30c the average price. Now in Boston Michigan X is selling at 35c. per lb. As the cost of laying down wool in Boston is from 3a3½c per lb., even if Michigan fleeces were all to grade X wool, there would be a fair margin of profit for the dealers. But here is where the point comes in. A good fleece of wool, such as is produced on our best grade flocks, contains a certain amount of delaine wool which sells at 40 a 42 c per lb., and a certain amount of what is denominated No. 1 clothing wool, worth 39a41c. and the balance is classed as X. The stapler sorts these grades out, and they are sold to the manufacturer for just what they are, while the price received for the X grade is the ruling one in governing the price paid to the wool-grower. The fact is the grower should have his wool graded and sold in the market for just what it is. The more of the high priced grades it contained the more money he would receive, while the ill-conditioned fleeces of the careless wool-grower would only bring what they are worth. If a farmer is enterprising enough to grade up his sheep to a high standard, and grow a fine quality of wool, he should have the benefit of it. At present his wool only goes to help the general average of the purchases made by the wool-buyer. A proper method of buying wool on its merits would benefit the wool-grower and the manufacturer, and encourage farmers to grow a better quality of wool.

At a meeting of the Methodist ministers held in Chicago recently, Dr. Adam Miller read a paper on "The Prayer and Faith Cure." Referring to the case of Garfield, he said the doctors cut an artificial canal through the poor sufferer in trying to make out the course of the bullet—a hole that was a gold mine to them; the most expensive hole for its size any Government ever paid for; a horrible bore in a wrong direction; but the doctors worked it night and day, and finally made $20,000 out of this scientific blunder. Speaking of the prayer cure, he said the Apostle Paul could not remove his "thorn in the flesh" or bodily affliction, although he tried the prayer cure three times, and had finally to content himself with grace sufficient to bear his affliction. There was no objection to faithful and earnest prayer, and no one dared say that such was without effect, but the speaker questioned that it had any direct influence on the cure of disease.

The business of this office has largely increased since the opening of the direct telephone line between Adrian and Toledo.

The Flint & Pere Marquette railroad company is being importuned to extend their Ottar Lake branch from Fostoria via Mayville to Caro and thence on through Ellington, Elmwood, Cass City, Elkhart, North Burns and other points in Tuscola county to Bad Axe in Huron county, and from that point to Huron City on the shore of Lake Huron.

A mortgage on the Manistee Democrat was foreclosed last week, and the concern was bid in by Representative R. R. Blacker, for the mortgagees. A stock company is to be formed, new material purchased, and A. B. Carrier, of the Frankfort Express, has been engaged to manage the paper at a salary of $1,500 a year. There is no reason why the Democrat should not succeed.

For generations past it has been the custom of boys of Monroe to invade the railroad cars at that station with fruit for sale, and such fruit. Great ripe luscious grapes, noble apples, unapproachable peaches and pears that would melt in your mouth. The fruit boys have made Monroe's fruit famous, and the weary traveler always looked forward to the halt at Monroe with visions of a heap of good fruit for a small amount of money. But the monopoly that now controls the vending nuisance on the cars wanted protection, the free trade in fruit between the travelers and the Monroe boys has been throttled, the boys are no longer allowed to board the cars, and Monroe station is no longer more interesting to them than any other railroad station.—Evening News.

THAT AMATEUR FLUTE.

Hear the flutter with his flute—
silver flute!
Oh, what a world of wailing is awakened by his lute!
How it drums and quavers
On the maddened ear of night!
To escape the sound of sight
Of the flute, flute, flute,
With its mouth, mouth, mouth—
With repeating to the stings of a suspended lute,
The long protracted tootlings of the flying lute,
Of the flute, flute, flute, etc.
Flute, flute, flute.
[illegible]
[illegible]
Hear the people call the performer a fool
As he plays on the flute
All the day!
How he blows on his wry mouth
With the pucker!
And the people do the pouting
That this blowing is the source
But that a Christian person
[illegible]
Is bewildering years, years, years,
In the service of vagrs,
And he thinks we ought to listen,
And express us to be mute,
While we would rather have the earache
Than the troubled in the flutes—
Of the flute, flute, flute.
And the tootings of the lute—
While fools will seem to be tooted to such silly tunes,
Of the flute, flute, flute,
Flute, flute, flute!
And the tootings [illegible]

KINDNESS TO ANIMALS.

[illegible]

MR. CHALKER'S RISE.

BY FRANK H. TAYLOR.

Every country boy in New England knows that the village school house is generally located at the top of the bleakest hill in the neighborhood, and is the sport of every eddying gust of wind that drives near, heaping the great drifts across the road and about the door for the children to break through, and then shake themselves free of the clinging snow like so many Newfoundlands.

And where by any chance, was there ever a school house containing a stove that didn't roast the scholars seated near it, and leave the others to freeze?

All wide-awake boys who know the pleasures of skating will agree with me that however cold and stormy it is upon the hill-tops, the mill-pond and what does a village amount to without a mill pond, indeed? is always down in the cosiest nook between the hills, where the wind can't come with more force than is needed to blow the falling flakes across its smooth surface, piling them in great heaps among the bordering willows, and leaving the ice in tempting order for "shinny."

In fact, upon this, the coldest morning of the winter the school house upon the hill-top is not to be mentioned or thought of in comparison with mill-ponds for comfort or attractiveness, and it is hardly surprising that Mr. Chalker, the school-master, walked to and fro in solitary state, surveying with vexed air an array of vacant desks.

He was not altogether alone, however, for three boys had fought bravely through the drifts, and now sat huddled by the red-hot stove, trying to look as though they, at least, didn't think the weather a good excuse for staying at home to hunt hens' nests in the depths of the hay mow.

Now schoolmaster Chalker was a shrewd observer, and loved a good joke as well as any one. He had adopted many original plans of instruction. He could see one end of the mill-pond, half a mile away from his window, and as he gazed out upon the bleak waste of snow-clad fields he saw a couple of small black figures gliding over its surface, and a trace of a smile those among his wrinkles as an idea seemed to strike him.

Perhaps he had recalled the time, ever so many years ago, when he too was a lad and the "wildest cub in the town," as his father often declared. Turning to one of the boys, he said, "Ben, it seems to me that the pond's a much nicer place for us to-day than the school house. Let's go fishing. I can't skate, but perhaps I can show you how we used to catch pickerel down there fifty years ago."

Ben and his two companions looked at Mr. Chalker with eyes widely opened, but they soon found that he was in earnest, and they agreed to the proposition joyfully.

"Now, said Mr. Chalker, "two of you get out the bob-sled, and heap on plenty of sticks from the wood pile. Be sure and get some big ones; and you, Benton, go down to Mampson, the miller, with this note: 'He will let you have some lines, and a few minnows for bait.'"

When the school house had been properly locked up and they had started, dragging the sled after them, it occurred to Ben to suggest a slide. So all three got upon the sled and slid away merrily toward the pond. The road was straight but steep, though near the bottom there was a sharp curve, where the wind had blown away the snow, leaving a crust of smooth ice. Over this they sped at a lively pace, Ben steering. Poor Ben couldn't turn the corner, and in another second the sled, schoolmaster, and all, plunged into the depths of a big drift. Nothing was to be seen of Mr Chalker for a moment but his heels, but he shortly emerged, puffing and laughing heartily, much to the boys' relief who had begun to think the fun was all over. But Mr. Chalker shook himself, and declared he enjoyed it, and was ready to try it over; in fact, he didn't act a bit like a schoolmaster, but just a boy let loose—a very old boy, to be sure, but a very hearty one for all that.

It only required a few minutes to cut a couple of round holes in the ice, and to build a roaring fire upon a platform of heavy sticks and flat stones—a fire that flung its forked tongues into the keen air in utter defiance of the Frost King and all his assaults.

The half-dozen boys already on the pond viewed their preparations with considerable wonder, but gathering courage, hastily skated up and warmed their fingers at the fire.

[illegible] more than a dozen other boys looked out from the windows of the [illegible] scattered along the hill-side, and said something like this. "Mother, I guess there isn't any school today. I don't see any smoke comin' out of the chimney. Can I go down to the pond?"

And an equal number of mothers replied, "Why, of course, not. It's much too cold for you to go out. You can't see yourself and besides, you don't feel well."

[illegible] of the boys, the good mothers, on the strength of their [illegible] feel so badly after all, "I don't care, mother, you know I think you might let—"

Upon which, all the mothers said in order, "Well, do go along, but mind you don't get into any air holes."

These, before an hour had passed, nearly [illegible] over the pond, as scattered in the group watching Mr Chalker and his fishing party.

Meanwhile the schoolmaster and Ben had enjoyed remarkable luck. Four or five [illegible] lay on the ice, and a fifth, much the biggest ever seen in the pond, of course, had just been hauled in by Ben to put the others up.

Now it occurred to Mr. Chalker that it would be much more of everybody had sport, so he suggested to the boys that they should bring some hook rods and set down a [illegible] beside him. This was done with a merry good-will, and Mr Chalker showed them with [illegible] patience how to bait hooks and how to fish [illegible] in this way.

"Now, said he, I see that this old pond is to hold a school, and I'm in that unfortunate situation of being in such weather suited, and so I propose to [illegible] these waters we meet here on the pond [illegible] I think we [illegible]

[illegible] by the fire, and though [illegible] his last to carry [illegible] boys, none of them dared to [illegible] for Mr Chalker [illegible] a very [illegible] and dignified pedagogue indeed, and Ben would scarcely [illegible] that he had seen him turn head over heels [illegible] first out a couple of hours before.

Without further ado the teacher pulled [illegible] of spellers from his several pockets and said: "The first class in spelling will take stations on this side."

There was a sudden dispersion of the boys, for they had been fairly tripped, and they hearily chorked with inward laughter as they went through with spelling, arithmetic and reading, taking turns at keeping [illegible]

When he thought that the real lesson of the day had been well impressed upon the scholars, Mr Chalker dismissed his school, and as he landed the last fish, and strung him through the gills with the others on a willow twig, he chuckled to himself, "I don't know who's has had the most fun to-day, the boys or the master, but I'll venture to say they'll be on hand, cold or no cold, after this.—Harpers Young People.

The Dismal Swamp.

The Dismal Swamp, says an exchange, is not a vast bog sunk low in the ground, into which the drainage of the surrounding country flows. On the contrary, it is above the level ground some, fifteen or twenty feet, as was demonstrated by actual surveys. Instead of being a receptacle into which rivers and streams enter and flow, it is in reality, an immense reservoir that, in its spongelike bulk, gathers the waters that fall from the heavens and pours them into five different rivers, which flow onward to the sea. Any one could imagine that the "Dismal" was a veritable charnel-house that spread its miasma throughout the country. On the contrary it is the healthiest place upon the American continent. The swamp is formed entirely of green timber. There is actually no decomposed wood; one sees large trees lying all around in the forests and swamps. The two principal woods that grow in the place are juniper and cypress, which never rot. They fall prone to the ground like other trees, but instead of the wood decomposing it turns into peat, and lies indissoluble by air and water for ages—perfectly sound. There is nothing in the swamp to create miasma; no rising of the tides and decomposition of rank vegetables; no marshes exposed to the burning rays of the sun. All is fresh and sweet, and the air is laden with as sweet odors as the fragrant woods in May, when the sweet odors of the flowers mingle with the pungent scent of the pine and logwood. In the antebellum days all the planters were anxious to hire their slaves to shingle-makers in the swamps on account of its health. Mr Reddick, a well-known contractor, says he worked a gang of fifty hands fifteen years in the Dismal getting shingles, and in all that time there was not a single case of fever and ague. I have seen numerous affidavits of overseers and contractors who have lived in the swamp their lifetime, and they have never known of a death caused by miasma, or a solitary instance of ague and fever. The air is pure and sweet, and the water, tinged to a faint white hue by the juniperas as potent a medical drink as are the famous watering places of the Virginia mountain passes. It is often used by naval vessels [illegible] on account of its healthful properties, and also because it keeps fresh and clear for years. It is strong and invigorating tonic with a very pleasant taste.

Lighting Stables.

Very little thought is usually given to the proper position of windows in horse stables, and yet a strong light which shines directly into the faces of horses has a tendency to weaken their sight. A common point for a window is, in front of horses and considerably higher than their heads. Numerous instances can be had of the injurious effects of such windows, among which is that of an officer in the British army, who had purchased a horse from a gentleman whose stable received all its light from windows situated at the rear of the stalls. The horse was sound, and the officer was perfectly satisfied with his bargain; but at the end of three months the animal became suddenly "ground shy." An examination of her eyes showed that they were directed upward, an explanation of which was had by the fact that the windows of her new owner's stable were above the head of the stall. A removal to a stable which admitted light on all sides, removed this difficulty.

Another proof of our assertion is given in the case of a farmer, who had some fine horses which he kept in a stable lighted only by a small window in one side. The stable was so imperfectly lighted by this window that the door was kept open nearly all the time, when work was being done. The consequence was that nearly all of his horses had eyes of unequal strength; and two of them became blind on the side which was toward the window.—American Stockman.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Chocolate Caramels.—Take of grated chocolate, milk, molasses, and sugar, one cup each, piece of butter the size of an egg; boil until it will harden when dropped in cold water; add vanilla; put in a buttered pan, and before it cools mark off in square [illegible] pounds of light-brown sugar, two gills of cream, four ounces of butter, vanilla.

Preserved Grapes.—The fruit should be allspice, but not soft or broken. Our mamas Catawba, make a good preserve; seed and stem the grapes, pick carefully, rejecting the bad ones. To every pound of grapes take one-half pound of white sugar and six waters; put sugar first into a pan then a layer of sugar, then a layer of grapes, cook slowly on a slow fire; skim occasionally and when it begins to serve when they are of a light brown.

Tomato Pickles.—Peel your ripe tomatoes and take out the meat and salting it. Grate two ounces of bread crumbs and mix with them two hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Add a little to six ounces of the fish meat, make moist and rich with cream, clean the shells, fill them with the mixture, put some bread crumbs over the top and brown in hot oven.

Cocoa and Cream.—Heat a quart of milk until it is lukewarm. Put half a teaspoonful of sugar into a wine glass of brandy or sherry and stir till the sugar is dissolved; add this to the milk, put all into the dish in which it is to be served and stir in a tablespoonful of the prepared rennet. It will be firm in three or four hours. Serve with sugar and rich cream, and fresh pounded cinnamon.

Boiled Chocolate Custard.—Grate a quarter of a pound of chocolate, extract one pint and a half of milk, put the water on the stove to moderate, and let it not boil, but regulate occasional strength; beat up four eggs, yolks and whites together, with half a pound of pulverized sugar, and pour over it a quart of boiled milk; then stir the chocolate, strain the whole through a fine sieve, put back on the fire, and stir continually with a wooden spoon till it thickens, which it will do in about three to five minutes; when cool enough put in the bowl it is to be served in, and keep on ice till you are ready to use it.

Educational.

In Hungary it is said fully [illegible] children of school age do not go to school at all, while those who do go to school only stay only three or four years. In 1[illegible] there were 1[illegible] large parishes, each having a population exceeding 5,000 wholly without elementary schools. At least 3,000 new schools are needed. Worse than all, one-third, of the teachers in the existing schools are not qualified for their office.

That the public schools don't teach properly even the simplest branches is a fact which is constantly being proved and reproved to popular dissatisfaction. The Lansing Republican mentions that of the twenty-one applicants for the vacant cadetship at West Point, examined in that city, less than one-third were good penmen, a much less number good spellers, and scarcely a single applicant would have been called a proficient reader. In all the written examinations errors of punctuation and capitalization might be found, and it was by no means uncommon to find the most ordinary words misspelled. In one, "enny" was made to stand for "any," while in another the name of the martyred President was spelled "Linken."

A member of the Cleveland Board of Education said some reasonable and judicious things at a teacher's institute in that city. "Though the teacher," he said, "may be thoroughly equipped with reference to scholarship, although she may know all that is in the text-books, and although she may have an honest desire to teach, those things fall far short of the real necessities of the case. You are not teaching as you used to teach, one or two things as in Persia, two or three things as in Greece, and but one thing as in Sparta, which was a grand thing—obedience. Those things are well in their places, but you must go beyond them. To teach your pupils to repeat, as the parrot repeats, all that the text-books contain and which, you know, that is doing only what has been the curse of China for 2,000 years. The minds of pupils need to be led to self-development and self-culture; they need to be inspired with the ideas at the basis of facts; they need to be filled with that inspiration which creates a love for knowledge and independence of thought."

The Diet Fiend.

There is a man who has made up his mind to keep his health good by eating the right sort of food in proper quantities and with the right kind of mastication. Resolution sits upon his brow, his eyes turn scornfully upon his fellow men, and he deliberately and with malice afore thought sits with superbly folded arms in the restaurant, painfully working his mouth, as if he were a type of Samson's celebrated jawbone engaged in the duty of slaying a bit of brown bread. He becomes a nuisance to his landlady, or his wife; he buys fish, which he eats for his brains, and struggles in the morning with harsh oatmeal and sour baked apples, chewing, chewing, chewing, while casting contemptuous glances around upon the disgusted people who are not so good and are not going to be so healthy as he is to be. He even turns his toes out, abhors butter, and walks on the side of the street which is the healthiest. His children receive no candy, and his wife only receives a scolding because she does not live up to the laws of health. He becomes pale, fretful and morose, and says of a healthful man, "He lives for his stomach," while he is dying for his.—New York Herald.

Remedy for Lockjaw.

Dr. J. G. Hatch, an old physician of over forty years' practice, recommends the following treatment for lockjaw, having tried it successfully both on himself and others: If any person is threatened or taken with lockjaw, from injuries in the hands, feet, arms or legs, do not wait for a doctor, but put the part injured into the following preparation: Put hot wood ashes into water as warm as can be borne; if the injured part cannot be put into the water, then wet thick folded cloths in the water, and apply them to the part as soon as possible, and at the same time bathe the back bone from the neck down, with some powerful laxative stimulant, say cayenne pepper and water, or mustard and water, (good vinegar is better than water.) It should be as hot as the patient can bear it. Don't hesitate; go at work and do it, and don't stop until the jaws will come open. No person need die of lockjaw if these directions are followed.

Farm Notes.

The practice of feeding stock on the ground is not economical. If you feed outdoors, provide racks to hold the feed. The actual loss to the farmer, oftentimes in a single season, exceeds the cost of the necessary racks for effectually saving this waste. Any farmer with a little lumber, a saw, hammer, nails, and an axe and chisel can make one.

We know of a wealthy farmer, says a correspondent, who, up in a few years ago, failed to get good crops, though manure was liberally piled upon the land regardless of expense. Lime was suggested, and used to large quantities, and the best crops ever known in that farm have since been raised. The more manure the more lime, and the reverse is equally true.

Joshua King, of Otis county, Kansas, has sown thirteen barrels of salt on twenty acres seeded to wheat, and left strips in the middle of the field without salt. The ground on which he sowed the salt produced over eighteen bushels of wheat to the acre, while that where there was no salt was hardly worth cutting—the wheat being badly shrunken, injured by rust, chinch bugs, etc.

Cotton seed and linseed oil cakes are too much neglected as food for stock. When these are mixed with equal parts of corn, the food is perfectly adapted to the sustenance of animals, because there is a proper proportion of flesh and fat forming substances. Feed that is deficient in either of these elements is neither healthful nor profitable.

Fattening beef animals pays; but trying to fatten inferior animals is a waste of energy, time and labor. The animals should be selected with special reference to the capacity with which they will fatten, to the quality of the beef, fineness of bone, compactness of body, and the small amount of offal which the carcass will yield.

Speaking of what are called the "fancy prices" paid for stock the National Live Stock Journal says that to a man who is breeding pure-bred stock, of any kind it is impossible to measure the value of a single animal introduced into the herd. A single mistake may cost him thousands of dollars, and carry him back to such an extent that years cannot regain the lost ground. On the other hand, a fortunate selection—a lucky hit—may add enormously to the value of all the produce for many generations. The writer concludes, therefore, that it sometimes pays to give even a "fancy" price for a really valuable animal.

Household Notes.

To make corn starch cake, take 3 eggs, 1 cup of sugar, ½ cup of sweet milk, 1 cup of butter, ½ cup of flour, 1 cup of corn starch, 1 teaspoonful of baking-powder.

Tan may be removed from the face by mixing magnesia in soft water to the consistency of paste, which should then be spread on the face and allowed to remain a minute or two. Then wash off with castile soap suds, and rinse with soft water.

For sponge cake take 4 eggs, 2 cups of sugar; beat eggs and sugar well together; 2 coffee cups of flour, 1 heaping teaspoonful of baking-powder; stir in all the flour that the eggs and sugar will take up; then add ½ cup boiling water; bake in a quick oven.

To make fruit cake, 2 eggs (save the white of one for frosting,) ½ cup of brown sugar; fill the cup with molasses; ½ cup of butter, ½ cup sour milk, 2 cups flour, 1 tablespoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, ½ nutmeg, 1 teaspoon soda, as many currants and raisins as you can afford.

A self-holder for a spoon, when temporarily filled with any liquid, or for dropping medicine may be made in the simplest manner possible, thrusting the handle between the leaves of a shut book lying on the table. If not high enough one book may be piled upon another. Both hands may then be used in dropping from a bottle, or for making any desired mixture.

For apple short-cake make a soft dough as of biscuit; roll out this and put a layer in a jelly-pan; over this spread a layer of stewed apples; sprinkle over sugar and spice; dot with small lumps of butter; then put on a layer of dough, another of apple sauce, a very thin layer of dough, and bake in a very quick oven. This is a most delicious dessert dish, and may be served with or without sauce.

Twelve eggs, the yolks and whites beaten well and separately, one pound of pounded and sifted loaf sugar, the grated peel of a large lemon, half a pound of sifted and dried flour, the same weight of sifted and dried ground rice, four ounces of sweet and one of bitter almonds, pounded in a mortar together, with a tablespoonful of orange-flower water. Mix all these ingredients gradually, and beat them well. Paper the pan, and bake the cake for one hour.

President Harrison's Death.

President Harrison, who was an early riser, used to go to market, and he invariably refused to wear an overcoat, although the spring was cold and stormy. One morning, having gone to the market thus thinly attired, he was overtaken by a slight shower, and got wet, but refused to change his clothes. The following day he felt symptoms of indisposition, which were followed by pneumonia. At his Ohio home he had lived plainly and enjoyed sleep, but at Washington he had, while rising early, rarely retired before one o'clock in the morning, and his physical powers, enfeebled by age, had been overtaxed.

At the same time the President's mental powers had undergone a severe strain, as was evident when he became somewhat delirious. Sometimes he would say, "My dear madam, I did not direct that your husband should be turned out. I did not know it. I tried to prevent it." On other occasions he would say in broken sentences, "It is wrong—I won't consent—'tis unjust." "These applications—will they never cease?" The last time that he spoke was about three hours before his death, when his physicians and attendants were standing over him, having just administered to his comfort. Clearing his throat, as if desiring to speak audibly, and as though he fancied himself addressing his successor, or some official associate in the government, he said: "Sir! I wish you to understand the true principles of the government. I wish them carried out. I ask nothing more."

General Harrison was removed from the conflict which had already become inevitable, before the storms had time to gather—before envy and destraction and sectional fury had begun to muster their stores of vengeance to pour without mercy upon his head. The opposition of the leaders of his own party had scarcely begun to make itself manifest before that venerable head, silvered with the frosts of age and of long and arduous devotion to his country's service, was gently laid on pillow of death.—Atlantic.

The pride of the farmer should be in his fields. In their beauty, in their order, in their product, he should place the gratification of his humble and honorable ambition, says a contemporary. This is all very well as far as it goes, but we would add, the pride of the farmer should be in his wife and children—in their health and culture, mental and social. A farmer with a family of seven, eight or ten children, well bred and trained up, has something to be proud of, and what should gratify an laudable ambition.

Some people think that justice applies exclusively or almost exclusively to money transactions and dealings in business. But that is a very restricted and imperfect view of what constitutes justice. It lies quite as much in the habit and manner of speech as in the making and fulfillment of contracts.

To keep machinery from rusting. Take one-half ounce of camphor, dissolve it in one pound of melted lard, take off the scum and mix in as much fine black lead as will give it an iron color. Clean the machinery and smear with the mixture. After twenty-four hours rub clean with a soft cloth. It will keep bright for months under ordinary circumstances.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—Having been afflicted with the Rheumatism over eight months in my left hip, at times so I could not get a night's rest, or even lie on that side on account of such pains running through my hip and down my limb, the Rheumatic Syrup was recommended. After taking one bottle the pain left me; and I could lie on that side as well as ever. I have felt no symptoms of Rheumatism since. I think as a Rheumatic cure it has no equal.

Gentlemen—I think it my duty to recommend your wonderful medicine—Rheumatic Syrup. I have been troubled with kidney difficulty for many years; have been treated by different physicians, but could get only temporary relief until I commenced taking your Syrup. Says the Index-Appeal, of Petersburg, Va.: "Miles Darden, probably the largest man on record, born in North Carolina in 1798, died in Henderson county, Tenn., January 23d, 1857. First Rate Evidence.

"Often unable to attend to business, being subject to serious disorder of the kidneys. After a long seige of sickness tried Burdock Blood Bitters and was relieved by half a bottle." Mr. E. Turner, of Rochester, N. Y., takes the pains to write:

We can all do something for each other in this world if we only try. Do not let us forget what Wordsworth taught us so long ago, "the primal duties shine aloft like stars," while "the charities that soothe and heal and bless are scattered at the feet of man like flowers."

Depend Upon It.

Mother Shipton's prophesies and Louisiana elections are very uncertain things, but Thomas' Eclectric Oil can be depended upon always. It cures aches and pains of every description.

An Illinois paper asserted that there was one jackass in the state legislature, and before noon of the day on which the item was published the editor received a note from every member of the house, including the speaker, telling him to retract or look out for a libel suit, each member recording it as a personal hit.

Do Not Move Blindly.

Go carefully in purchasing medicine. Many advertised remedies can work great injury—are worse than none—Burdock Blood Bitters are purely a vegetable preparation; the smallest child can take them. They kill disease and cure the patient in a safe and kindly way.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch, the qualities are of the utmost importance.

VALDOSTA, Georgia, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some sawlogs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men.

B. W. BENTLEY."

CLINTON, Iowa, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair-spring.

C. S. RAYMOND."

The above were very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust-Proof Stem Winding Watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

When privately asked what his object was in representing Gehenna in this way, he said, "I don't dare tell dem people nuffin else. Why, if I was to say hell was warm, some ob dem old rheumatic niggahs would be wanting to start down dar, de berry fust frost."

A Nevada paper wanted to describe the fury of the wind in a recent tordado, so it expressed itself as follows: "Yesterday, during the gale, while boulders as big as pumpkins were flying through the air, and water pipes were being ripped out of the ground, an old Chinaman, with spectacles on his nose, was observed in the gastern part of town seated on a knoll, calmly flying his kite—an iron shutter, with a log-chain for a tail."

Probably the worst telegraphic blunder ever made was one that occured in the case of a St. Louis merchant, who while in New York received a telegram informing him that his wife was ill. He sent a message to his family doctor, asking the nature of the sickness and if there was and danger, and received promptly the answer: "No danger. Your wife has had a child. If we can keep her from having another to-night, she will do well." The mystification of the agitated husband was not removed until a second inquiry revealed the fact that his indisposed lady had had a "chill."—Ex.

GLASS BEADS.—Among the most curious examples of persistence in art are the well-known Agatry beads, which occur everywhere in Africa and in many parts of Asia. Similar beads are still made for the purpose of barter by glass-makers in England and Italy, yet they appear among the oldest remains in many widely-separated places. Mr. Nesbitt considers them Phenician, and suppose they were made for the purposes of barter with uncivilized nations, such as the ancient Britons. Glass beads of extreme hardness have been found in British graves, and on analysis were found to be composed and colored in the same manner as those of undoubted Egyptian origin. The usual type is large—not round, but spindle-shaped, and marked with alternate indented bands of red and blue, the colors being separated by a narrow white line. These beads are found in England, on the Gold Coast, in India and Germany, in Italy and Egypt. They are particularly common in the cities along the coast of the Rhine. The oldest specimens must be Egyptian, but in all probability the pattern was continued in many distinct manufactories at many different periods.

How He Shocked His Dear Old Grandmother in Reading a Recipe.

Old Mrs. Jones borrowed Mrs. Brown's recipe for making watermelon pickle the other day, and, being hard of hearing, as she couldn't see to read very well, she got her grandson Jakie to read it for her. Jakie took the paper like a dutiful child, and, holding it upside down, commenced:

"Take a green watermelon—"

"Why, Jakie ain't you mistaken? I thought the melon must be ripe."

"Oh, what's the matter wid yew! Gew ever see a watermelon that wusn't green?"

"Cut the watermelon into four halves—"

"But there ain't only two halves to anything. I don't believe you are reading that, Jakie."

"Well, I don't have to anyhow that's what the resept says. Then soak it in a pint cup—"

"Oh, dear me! How in the world can you put a watermelon in a pint cup?"

"Well, I ain't here to tell the whereases and the howfores. I'm just reading the facts and you can put in the filosofee to suit your taste. After soakin' the melon, put in a skillet and fry it fur five days."

"I wonder if Mrs. Brown sent me such a recipe as that?" said the old lady; but Jakie kept on:

"Then put the watermelon in a quart bowl and pour over it a gallon of vinegar, taking care to not spill the vinegar—"

"I'd just like to how you can pour a gallon into a quart bowl without spilling my of it;" but Jakie continued:

"Then sift a peck of red pepper through a milk strainer over the melon, and to one cup of butter and the white and yolks and shells of three eggs, and throw in the old hen that laid them, and four sticks of cinnamon drops and two tablespoonfuls of quinine and run it through a coffee-mill and let it stand till it ferments, and then put it in a tin can and tie the can to a dog's tail—this will stir it up to the right consistency—and then you can turn it off in crocks and have it ready for use. Serve it cold and spread it on mince pie and it makes a capital dessert," and Jakie slid out of doors and left the old lady looking like a wrinkle on a monument.—Free Press.

Power of Example.

Example is power. It is alike so in the circles of wealth and and refinement and in the haunts of poverty and ignorance. It tells everywhere, and makes its mark for good or evil all over the world of men and thought. All history is but a reiteration of the power of example—power to bless and refine, or to blight and ruin humanity. Unless its teachings impress us with the truth, we are indeed poor students of human history. One has well said that "History is philosophy teaching by example."

Example is power of good. Every man has influence, more or less, in his sphere of life, and that influence, in the very nature of the case, must tell on his fellows. If he be a good man, his example must and will do good. It cannot be otherwise. A pure and virtuous life, like the sun in the heavens, must shine and bless, brighten and warm in the moral world. So it has ever been, and so it ever will be. Truth and purity, like so many gems in the life and example of the good man, cannot but shame and condemn error and vice in others.

A fault doth never with remorse
On mind so deeply move
As when another's guileless life
Our error doth reprove.

Example is also a power for evil. There is no estimating the extent of a bad man's influence in the world; its moral reach is indeed fearful. "One sinner destroyeth much good," is the testimony of the wise man, as well as the practical teaching of all experience. An instrument of incalculable harm in any community is the man who arrays his life and example against virtue and religion, and yet thousands of our fellow beings seem only to live that they may blight humanity with the influence of their wicked lives and evil example. Their work in the world is that of destruction, for they literally "destroy much good."

Cicero gave his followers the best of counsel when he said to them: "Be a pattern to others, then all will go well; for as a whole city is infected by the licentious passions and vices of men, so is it likewise reformed by their moderation."

For the Curious.

The Spanish Armada numbered 130 ships, to which the English could oppose but eighty vessels, and these so small that four of them only equaled in tonnage the smallest of the galleons. The Armada carried 8,000 seamen and 20,000 soldiers. The English fleet was manned by 8,000 sailors.

Nutmegs grow upon a tree from twenty-five to thirty feet high, which bears a fruit resembling in form and size the seckle pear. When ripe the outer shell of this fruit breaks, revealing an inner case of bright red, known to commerce as mace. This in its turn is removed, and the nutmeg is found inclosed in a third shell, harder than either of the others.

The Parsees of India are fire-worshippers, and reverence the sun, moon and stars. Upon the altars of their temples the priests keep fire continually burning, and declare that it has never been extinguished. When engaged in their duties these devotees wear masks over the lower part of their faces, lest their breath should pollute the sacred flame.

In one of his letters, Oliver Cromwell, speaking of the cost to him, personally, of his famous Ironsides, says: "The business hath had of me in money between £1,100 and £1,200, therefore my private estate can do little to help the public." The grim commander took much pride in the efficiency and discipline of his psalm-singing followers, calling them "a lovely company," and declaring that "not a man swears but he pays his 12 pence."

The system of conducting the British Government by a ministry chosen from the strongest party in the House of Commons dates from the time of William III. in 1689. Previous to that all the Ministers had been independent of each other and responsible to the sovereign alone, who might dismiss one great officer of State and retain the rest. The idea of homogeneous Ministry was first carried out by Robert, Earl of Sunderland, who successively held office under Charles II., James II. and William of Orange.

I would bid you stand up to your work whatever it may be, and not be afraid of it; not in sorrow or contradiction to yield but pushing on towards the goal. And don't suppose that people are hostile to you in the world. You will rarely find anybody designedly doing you ill. You may often feel as if the world is obstructing you, more or less; but you will find that to be because the world is traveling in a different way from you, and rushing on its own path. Each man has only an extremely good will to himself—and is moving on towards his object.—Thomas Carlyle.

Telling the Boys.

When you get two or three old fellows of sixty together, they are fond of telling stories about the pranks they played in their youthful days and laughing proudly over their misdeeds. But this is not always a safe thing to do. Old Judge Bees indulged in this recreation the other night, in the presence of his son, aged fourteen. The old man told a quantity of tricks he had played upon his father and chuckled gleefully over them. It roused young Bees' ambition; and the next night, when the judge went home, he had an awful time of it. There was a pail of water suspended over the front door that tipped as he opened the door and deluged him. He was both surprised and annoyed at that, and walked into the entry with oaths upon his lips, and immediately his feet caught a cord tied across the hall from the banisters to the hat-rack, and it tripped him up and pulled the hat-rack over on top of him. He was skinned in several places, and by the time he disentangled himself was awful mad. He started up stairs and part way up, a cord stretched at the right height caught him suddenly under the chin and threw him backwards down the stairs. Then he started to crawl up stairs and part way up discovered a rope lying on the stairs and coming from the top. He pulled it and hauled a barrel down upon himself that bounced him down stairs again. He was nearly delirious with rage as he rose to his feet that time, and utterly unable to understand the cause of all these contrivances being in his way. Once more he assayed to go up, and that time succeeded. On reaching the head of the stairs, he thought he heard a snicker, and investigation showed his son peeping from his chamber and laughing. On being taxed by the judge with fixing the traps, the boy owned up. "What in the name of Heaven have I done that made you do it?" yelled the judge aghast at the boy's wickedness and coolness. "Why, I heard you say you played these pranks on your father." "Yes, and he licked me like blazes for it, just as I'll lick you," roared the infuriated judge. "You didn't say anything about being licked when you told the stories," cried the now frightened boy. This was a strong argument, but the judge wasn't in a frame of mind to appreciate it. The boy's yells were heard in the next ward, and he has resolved, as soon as his raw spots get well, to run away to some place where they'll tell him the whole facts of a case. And the judge thinks he has learned to be careful what he says before that boy.

Testimony From the Press.

A CAT STORY.—A man now living in Kingston emigrated to the West many years ago, and bought a house which had stood unoccupied for considerable time. The first night he heard sounds that convinced him that there were rats in the cellar and on investigating he found that hundreds of the creatures were disporting themselves there. Having eaten a quarter of beef down to the bone, they were playing tag among the shelves. He offered to introduce the family cat, but she declined to be presented. The next day she was missing, until the family thought they had lost her; but on the fourth day a familiar "meow" was heard, and there was tabby at the head of a column of three dozen cats in light marching order, their backs up and their tails rampart. The front door was opened and the detachment moved down the cellar stairs in good order. The next morning a flour barrel full of dead rats was buried behind the house, and the cats returned to their homes.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have a vast meaning when fully comprehended. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier; it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents of Baker and Hall.

AN EXPERIMENT IN CHEMISTRY.—When the kind-hearted Isaac Hopper, a member of the society of friends, met a boy with a dirty face and dirty hands he would stop him and inquire if he ever studied chemistry. The boy, with a wondering stare, would answer no. "Well, then," said Isaac Hopper, "I will teach thee how to perform a curious chemical experiment. Go home, take a piece of soap, put it in water—rub it briskly upon thy hands and thy face. Thou hast no idea what a beautiful froth it will make, and how much whiter thy skin will be. That's a chemical experiment; I advise thee to go home and make it."

A good Baptist Clergyman of Bergen, N. Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was told that Hop Bitters would cure, because he was afraid of, and prejudiced against "Bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

Boiling water should be poured all over and inside of a goose or duck before preparing it for cooking, to take away the strong, oily taste. If a lemon that has been carefully pared without breaking the inner white skin, be placed inside a wild duck, and kept there forty-eight hours before cooking, it will remove all traces of fishy flavor.

A PAPER FOR THE TIMES.

It was founded Dec. 29, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 3 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e. presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,937 copies; in 1878, 38,314 copies; in 1879, 43,194 copies; in 1880, 54,801 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,010 copies, or a daily average of 18,846 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON, and EVENING ISSUES, known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers so that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North. Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic failities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months, been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a 'cripple' all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell my and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours,

PHILIP MOORE.

ALL THE WAY FROM ENGLAND.

A Member of the English Farmers' Alliance in Tecumseh—An Interview With Him.

Mr. Albert Bath, of Colgate Farm, Sevenoaks, Kent, England, who is the guest for a few days of his uncle, Henry Haines, paid his respects at the HERALD office Tuesday, and we had the pleasure of a short interview with him. Mr. Bath is an extensive fruit and hop grower in Kent, and Honorary Secretary of an important branch in that county of the Farmers' Alliance, an organization similar to that of the Grange in this country. Mr. Bath, and his brother, who are partners, in addition to growing in an extensive way strawberries, currants, apples and plums, have 170 acres of raspberries, of the variety called Carter's Prolific. The greater part of the raspberries and strawberries, of which there are many thousand acres grown in Kent county, are made into jams by the well known firm of Cross & Blackwell, of London, and other large preservers, and sent to Covent Garden and other London markets. Mr. Bath is now making a protracted tour of the United States. After a brief visit with Mr. Haines he will proceed to Chicago and then through the western states and will take in San Francisco before his return to England.

We are permitted to take a few extracts from an interview with Mr. B. which appeared in a Toronto paper, giving an insight into the character and purposes of the Farmers' Alliance.

"The present position of the British tenant farmer," said Mr. Bath, "is neither conducive to his own self-respect, material welfare or the general prosperity of the nation, whose interests are largely bound up with the success of the farmers. The Alliance is the outgrowth of felt necessities, the pressure of which has of late years been especially felt through the succession of bad harvests. It has not yet fully accomplished any of the reforms that it has set itself to attain, though progress is being rapidly made in the directions where hopes are entertained of speedily obtaining some of the concessions demanded.

Mr. Bath then detailed some of the demands of the Alliance. As in Canada, and in the United States, the question of railway rates is an important one to the farmers.—Rates are charged for short distances out of all proportion to the rates for larger distances, and great anomalies exist in this respect. These discriminating rates, which made the long tariff pay exorbitant rates for the benefit of the long carriage, were unjust, and the Alliance had been successful in obtaining the appointment of a Parliamentary Commission, which it was hoped would secure remedial action.

The Alliance also urges readjustment of the ordinary tithes, and the abolition of the extraordinary. While the average rent of land is about $5 per acre, the ordinary tithes amount to about $1.50 per acre, and the extraordinary to from $2.50 in some parishes to $7.50 in others. The latter at least should be abolished, and both press unfairly upon farmers. The extraordinary tithe is a survival of the old times, and most prejudicial to the interests of the community. When a man, for instance, converts land used for grain growing into a hop yard or orchard, the extraordinary tithe is levied as a sort of reward for the farmer's industry. Tithes, poor rates, and other rates are collected from the tenant. It may be said that it amounts to the same thing whether he or the landowner pays it, but it is found in practical experience that a tenant could make better terms for rent if the tax-levying bodies had only the landlord to deal with, and the farmer could himself deal with the taxes as one lump sum.

Mr Bath does not take a despondent view of the prospects of the British farmer. He looks upon the succession of unfavorable years as an incident of the weather which may not be repeated to the same extent for a long time. Foreign competition he does not dread. The importation of foreign cattle he says, is not generally looked upon as an evil, but more stringent regulations are required to prevent the introduction of infected animals. Under the present land laws the condition of the farmer will go from bad to worse in the face of foreign competition. "But," says he, "if proper legislation is provided which will attract capital to the farm, and encourage increased production per acre, we can hold our own against all foreign competition. Staples may change, but farming will continue profitable. British farmers generally do their own business directly, and besides are near the markets. In the absence of middlemen and the neighborhood of markets, they have advantages which under improved land tenure, will offset the advantages foreign countries possess. The land of Britain is not by any means producing as much as it can produce; it only wants proper land laws to make it reach the highest production possible."

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 7, 1883.

Dueling, it seems, is becoming quite the fashion again. We have failed to revive the good old fashion of wearing knee breeches, but the custom of letting daylight thro' a man because he has offended you, or being prepared yourself to be shot at, dealt with, will soon be in vogue again. It is an agreeable mode of proceedure, and providing the business is done strictly according to the provisions of the code, no harm can come of it. In fact it will be of considerable advantage as it will bring about a more careful use of the English language. The latest occurrence in this city, however, is nothing but a farce. I allude to the rumored meeting between Col. Amory Knox, of Texas Siftings, and Sheahan the sculptor. Knox introduced in several issues of his paper in the interest of his papers, and as birds of a feather flock together, he fell in with some of the most experienced rounders at the Press Club, and in their company he had some "high old times." Among the shining lights of that ilk is Sheahan. I don't know anything about his work, having never been able to see any of it. I daresay he is like the greater portion of the Sun's editorial writers. Very little of their work ever reaches the dignity of printer's ink, but as John Swinton said, they write, Sheahan "sculpts" in his leisure moments when his friends are not with him. They had a dinner at Moritti's the other evening which lasted until ten o'clock, and of course they drank more than a single bottle each. Then they went to the Prospect Garden, a dash resort, and guzzled bier. The result may be easily imagined. While in this state they quarrelled about some silly billy business, the lie was given and a challenge issued. Then they told the whole story to the newspaper reporters, and strutted about like heroes, and on Thursday morning disappeared mysteriously. In the evening Sheahan reappeared on Union Square, drank his usual quantity of beer and dropped dark hints of a "meeting" at Rockaway, at which somebody was hurt, etc. The truth of the matter is that these two fools, under the combined influence of heat and beer, expected to make this an advertising scheme. Knox expected to get his little sheet talked about, and Sheahan expected to sell some things, which it is currently believed he sculpts. The scheme was a failure however, and about Union Square, where newspaper men, artists and actors congregate, both men are derisively laughed at.

Anything for style. At the Manhattan Beach hotel they have a little room which is known to the initiated as the Gold Room. It is provided with a magnificent buffet, tables and chairs, and here men may sit and worship at the shrine of Bacchus with more comfort and less publicity than at the public bar, besides having the satisfaction of paying twenty cents for the same whiskey which is dealt out at the bar for fifteen cents. The amount of business done in this Gold Room is incredible, and it is currently believed that it exceeds that done at the regular bar. It was so named because dutiful husbands who didn't care to let their wives see them at the bar, quietly slipped off to look at the stock exchange ticker placed in here. The discussions were generally treated for the faces of the aforesaid dutiful husbands were as a rule exceedingly flushed when they returned to the piazza.

A great many good and charitable people devote their time and money to praiseworthy efforts to reclaim fallen women. Now and then however, instances occur which would lead one to think that their labors after all were fruitless. A case of this kind came to my notice the other day. Some months ago the son of a well-to-do livery stable keeper, a young man twenty-five years old became infatuated with a woman of more than questionable reputation, and on her promise to turn over a new leaf married her. All went well for a couple of weeks. Then she grew tired of the humdrum of respectable life and pined for the excitement of her former career. One evening she went out, ostensibly for a walk and did not return that night. There was a scene. The escapade was repeated and finally her husband left her. She went back to her old companions and resumed her old habits. In a few weeks she had the effrontery to write to her husband and asked him to visit her. Of course he refused. Then she swore vengeance. Last Thursday afternoon while he was driving home in a light wagon she approached him with two male companions. They held the horse by the head while she jumped into the wagon and stabbed her husband in the face. She tried to escape but a policeman finally captured her, and after a desperate struggle made her a prisoner. She was arraigned in the Tombs Police Court yesterday morning and committed for trial. As she was led off she was heard to say that she would get even with him yet.

There is a rush in progress for the northern Michigan summer resorts.

EDUCATIONAL ITEMS.

The exercises of commencement week at Tecumseh passed off pleasantly. A new departure was introduced by Prof. Hammond in the public promotion exercises, which was quite a success. A pleasant program was carried out in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience, and the result will, no doubt, be seen in an increased interest in the schools. We are pleased to note that Supt. Hammond will remain in Tecumseh next year.

The school in district No. 1, Palmyra, closed on Friday, June 29. Mr. Dunbar is to be congratulated on completing a successful term.

Prof. A. M. Smith will remain at Clinton another year.

Prof. Wendell, of Hudson, is visiting in Chicago.

Miss Florence Shepard who has been employed in the Tecumseh schools the past year, has accepted a position in the public schools of Grand Haven, at an increased salary.

Prof. Edgcumbe, of Deerfield, has arranged to go to Benton Harbor next year.

There has been a large demand for the new edition of Prof. W. J. Cocker's Civil Government of Michigan, notwithstanding the fact that it was not ready at the opening of the spring term. It may not be out of place to say that Prof. Cocker has in preparation a text book on the civil government of the United States, and judging from what we know of the plan of work it will occupy a high place among the works of its class.

The New Route to Chicago.

The interest seems to be general in the opening of the new route to Chicago over the Wabash and the Baltimore & Ohio. Some of the interior newspapers — particularly those on the line of the Wabash—express much satisfaction at the opening of the route. Mention of it has only been made, as yet, as a passenger line. It will also be opened for freight, and the New York Central, the Erie and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western freight lines will be dispatched over it to Chicago. The new route will virtually make Chicago a terminal point on the Wabash, and it is the intention of the managers of that road to convey all their freight between Chicago and the seaboard cities over the line to Detroit and the Great Western Division of the Grand Trunk. It opens, of course, a new competing line for Detroit shippers.—Detroit Free Press.

Texas is suffering from a drouth.—Vennor should import some of the Texas weather into this state.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

Restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich color,—any deep black, as may be desired. Its use night or not long may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and while nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled. It contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BURGHAM writes from Kirby, Ill., Aug. 8, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that further use of your preparation I shall have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the Mt. Auburn Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1882: "Ever since my hair began to give way to decay of the change which heating from gaslight I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of no little consequence to ministers, public singers, and in fact every one who relies on the sympathies of the public."

MRS. O. A. BAKER, writing from Mt. Pleasant, Mich., April 11, 1882, says: "I am now sixty years of age. For a dozen years I had worn a false front, the hair of which I purchased of a traveling agent. It became so thin that it was useless. I was advised to try AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. I did so, and the result was that in about a month my hair came in thick and strong, and I now need no false hair. It is now as dark and abundant as ever, and I do not look my age by ten years. I have recommended your Vigor to many persons, and shall do so while I live."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials of the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It is compounded to satisfy the most exacting demand for a first-class article.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination. V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses. DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. LYND, M.D.

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this Popular Beverage Two Men Express their Minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. "That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves, added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headache, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about them. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

STOCKHOLDERS' MEETING. Notice is hereby given to the stockholders of the Toledo & Milwaukee Railway company that a meeting of said stockholders will be held in the city of Marshall, Michigan, on Sept. 11th, 1883, at 10 o'clock A.M. for the purpose of considering and acting upon the agreement of the directors of each company to consolidate the Toledo & Milwaukee Railway Company and the Toledo & Michigan Railway Company, and to give said stockholders an opportunity to vote thereon.
July 9th, 1883.
JAMES E. NEAL,
Secretary Toledo & Milwaukee Railway Co.
JAMES E. NEAL,
Secretary Toledo & Michigan Railway Co.

Miss Gertrude Bigelow returned to her home at Birmingham this morning.

Alf. James, Jules Veneir and Asa Stevens are spending their vacation in Tecumseh.

And still they come. Messrs. Anthony & Boyd and Drs. S. & H. W. Catlin were added to the list of telephone subscribers on Monday of this week. We expect to add several more subscribers during this month. The state line connections are now more complete. We have a direct line to Toledo and are doing a large amount of business each day with that place, and it is only a matter of short time when all our business places will be connected by telephone.

HECK BROS.' NEW ROLLER MILL,

One of the Most Complete in Michigan—Abundance of Water Power—New Machinery.

For some time workmen have been busy over at Heck Bros', mill. The mill has been shut down and we were aware that something was going on, but had no idea of the magnitude of operations until last Friday, Mr. Jno. Heck told us the mill was started and we went over to see what had been done. The mill has been overhauled from top to bottom, and in the place of milling stones and old machinery, have been placed

12 new reels,
2 certrifugal reels,
1 double purifier,
2 single purifiers,
2 brown dusters,
1 grain aspirator.

All this has been done at an expense of about $15,000. The roller process is complete, doing away entirely with the use of the old milling stones.

The work has been done from plans and specifications made by N. W. Holt, superintending millwright for the John T. Noyes Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y. The work has been executed by A. E. Wentworth, assisted by Joe Van Hatten, E. G. Scott, better known as "Scotty;" Jas. A. Lawrie, Henry Emmett, and Jake Muster, all of Buffalo, N. Y. The machinery has been well put in and the expert says he never started a mill of this size in so short a time. A. Gessl, the expert miller arrived Wednesday, and on Friday the mill was running full blast, and is now turning out flour hand over fist. Mr. Gessl informed us that the mill has a capacity of 250 barrels of flour per day, and that the rolls are of the latest and most improved pattern. The water power is sufficient to drive twice the amount of machinery now in use, and no pains or expense has been spared to make the mill a perfect one. Such improvements are not only a benefit to the property owners but to our town also. We have now the most complete mills in Tecumseh of any town near its size in the state. Our mills hold the town together, and brings farmers from all parts of the country. We congratulate Heck Bros. upon the success of their enterprise and are assured their new mill will turn out as fine quality of flour as any mill in the country.

Chief Engineer Boch, of the M. & O. road, arrived in town last Monday from Marshall, and started west on an inspection of the line between here and Addison.

A telephone line will be constructed soon between Manchester and Clinton which will be a convenience to those towns as well as Tecumseh, and which will shorten the distance from here to Jackson.

It is said that Brezee is to soon start a new evening daily in Detroit. A second evening daily cannot succeed in Detroit without plenty of ability, brass and hard cash. Can Brezee command all these three?

When a Lapeer man simply forgets himself to the extent of reversing the "Hello" shouted into the telephone, the cruel proprietors call it swearing, and deprive him of the use of the instrument.—Lapeer Democrat.

Robert Stretch was in town yesterday. He has a good position as inspector for the Hartford Steam Boiler Insurance Co. His headquarters are at 115 Monroe St., Chicago, although he is on the road most of the time.

The council proceedings this week are lengthy; they are interesting; they are peculiar; they are worth reading; they deserve candid consideration; they mean business; they show that the council understand their rights and propose to maintain them.

Vennor predicts a continuance of wet weather, with strong warm winds and thunder and hail-storms, continuing until the latter part of July. It's a comfort to know that the month will also terminate with rains in nearly every quarter and cool weather.

Last Friday week Abner Wilson had a pleasant family gathering at his house. About forty of his relatives were present including his sisters, cousins and aunts. The tables were spread under the old apple trees on the lawn, and the company enjoyed a delightful afternoon.

E. J. Smith has sold his interest in the Adrian Record to his partner, R. I. Bonner. Mr. Smith will give his principal attention hereafter to the duties of his oil inspectorship. He will not throw his plumbago away, but will occasionally write for the Record.

The annual school meeting was held at Adrian last Monday evening, and two ladies were elected trustees, Mrs. H. A. Colvin and Mrs. Charlotte Carey. An effort was made to lower the standard of the High School by abolishing a portion of the High School course, which resulted in a signal failure.

Pearl Diamond, in the last Clinton News, criticises our last Alumni Reunion exercises. To a certain extent the criticism is deserved. They were not what they should have been, but those who assumed the management were obliged to take hold at the eleventh hour, as the regular officers of the association were nearly all of them absent.

Harvesting has begun in Raisin township.

Dr. L. M. Jones, of Brooklyn, was in town yesterday.

A very pleasant parlor concert at Miss Jennie Root's last evening.

Miss Libbie Satterthwaite has accepted a clerkship with A. B. Cotton.

We regret to learn that L. A. Chapman is sick and confined to his house. We hope to see him outagain in a few days.

Miss Lena Knapp, of Jackson, and Miss Eva Payne, of Ann Arbor, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Orr this week.

Misses Florence and Mary Shepard started yesterday on a trip to western New York. They expect to remain about five weeks.

A movement is on foot to change the Tecumseh and Cambridge mail route from a tri-weekly to a daily.—This change ought to be made.

Hereafter every school teacher in Michigan receiving a certificate must pay a fee for the benefit of the State Institute fund. Ladies 50 cents, gentlemen one dollar.

We understand that arrangements are being made to have a game of base ball here each week, and that the club are now trying to complete arrangements with the Hillsdale club for a game next week Friday.

A Flint bookkeeper blew on the fuse of a mammoth firecracker to see if the fire had gone out. It hadn't, and when he gets out again he will not be so good looking as before, but will know better than to again blow on a firecracker fuse.

The base ball game between the Clinton and Tecumseh clubs Tuesday P.M., resulted in a score of 16 to 12 in favor of Tecumseh. The game all through was a poor one, errors without number on both sides, consequently we give no detailed report of the game.

Brooklyn ought to be connected with the rest of the world by telephone. What do you say?—Exponent. The business man should say yes, that is so, and we will have it too. A line could be built from Manchester to Brooklyn and be a paying investment for every subscriber.—Manchester Enterprise.

Arrangements have been made, and material is now being delivered, for the extension of the telephone line from Hudson to Hillsdale. When this link is completed, we shall have communication with Coldwater and all intervening towns, as the line between Hillsdale and Coldwater has been for some time in operation.

At the last regular meeting of Macon Grange it was resolved to adjourn until Friday, Aug. 17th, at which time the following program will be carried out: Address by Hon. Dr. Howell.—Subject—The tariff as it relates to the interest of farmers. Also a discussion on wheat and its culture, led by Cyrus Mead, besides other literary exercises.

An exchange says that it is becoming quite generally known that the common fertilizer phospate is a very dangerous article to handle by any one suffering from chapped or sore hands. It is partially composed of blood and bones of dead animals, which may have come to their death by disease, and if it accidentally comes in contact with a fresh wound may result in a severe case of blood poisoning.

The following resolution passed by the Common Council March 14, 1882, tells its own story:

Resolved, That this Council deems it to be its duty to hold the incumbents of the offices of Village Marshal and his deputies, and the Street Commissioner, accountable as well for lack of thorough acquaintance with their respective official duties as for neglect of prompt, faithful and impartial discharge thereof. That neglect of such duties will be considered valid cause for removal from such office.

Last Thursday evening our friend Dr. E. M. Conklin was united in marriage with Miss Kate Burton, at the residence of the bride's father in Clinton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. St. John, in the presence of a large company of friends, many of whom were from abroad. We congratulate the new couple upon the wisdom of their choice. The groom is one of our most promising young men, and the bride is one of Clinton's most accomplished daughters. May their future life be as happy and bright as their present prospects are is the desire of their numerous friends.

Deerfield Record: The second surveyor's corps, which surveyed the line of the Toledo & Milwaukee railroad from Britton to Corbus, arrived in town Sunday afternoon. From present appearances the line will run through the eastern part of the village, and about forty rods east of the Lake Shore depot. By taking this route the road will cross the river in the best place for building a bridge to be found in the whole length of the stream, and no piling will be necessary, as high bluffs on both banks nearly meet and but very little filling will be needed.

EXTRACTS FROM THE "BAPTIST ITEMS."

Our delegation to the Dundee council consisted of the pastor and Drs. Steinhoff and North.

The pastor has a cousin who is pastor of the Baptist church in Joliet, Ill. His name is John Wesley Conley.

All are glad to welcome Mr. J. Cook and family back to town again. Their seat in church is never empty on Sunday.

Our delegation to Kalamazoo college are all home again. It seems like old times to see Alva and the Clem's again.

Bro. Emory Doke has left the railroad and accepted a position in Brewer's Iron works. Glad that he can be at home again.

Miss Sarah Swartout has been appointed church agent for the K. L. H. A., in the place of Miss Henderson, resigned.

Hudson Baptist: Sister Heck, of Tecumseh, read an admirable paper before the Woman's Mission Society at the Association.

Bro. Albert Lovett is in Adrian selling agricultural implements. We hope he avails himself of the privileges of the Baptist church there.

The "Hudson Baptist" is the name of the church paper of the Baptist church in that place. It is an interesting sheet and ably edited.

The work of the K. L. H. A. is progressing finely. About $4000 are already subscribed. About $1100 have been actually paid in.

Hereafter the nominating committee in the Association is to consist of one delegate from each church. A very sensible arrangement.

At the last covenant meeting Dr. B. F. Steinhoff was elected a member of the pastoral committee, in the place of A. P. Coddington, resigned.

Our delegation to the association at Flat Rock was the pastor, Dea. Margeson and wife, Bro. Bramble and wife, Oscar Heck and Mrs. J. Heck.

The thanks of all are due to those who decorate the church with flowers each Lord's day. There is no more appropriate place for flowers than the Lord's house.

Sister Jennie Chase is at home again from Cairo, to spend her vacation.—She enjoys teaching in the South so well that she thinks some of going still farther South in the fall.

Sister I. S. Hamilton is still in feeble health, being confined to her bed most of the time. The doctor is far from being well, although he attends to the duties of his profession every day.

The S. S. picnic was so successful and pleasant last summer that everybody will probably want another this summer. It is hoped that arrangements will be made for it to occur in August.

Bro. C. Quick, of Fairfield, is moderator of the Lenawee Association this year. He has been bereaved recently in the death of his son. He has the sincere sympathy of all the churches in the Association.

The members of our choir are almost always in their places. This is a blessing indeed. They deserve our thanks. But few, if any, members of the church spend so much gratuitous time in its service as they.

One want supplied generally makes another want felt. The new church windows let in so much light that all the spots and blemishes upon the walls and ceiling are visible. It will be necessary to refresco soon.

Sister Marian Chase, instructor in history in Kalamazoo college, expects to spend some six weeks in Ann Arbor during the summer vacation, in order to avail herself of the University library. She is doing good work in the college.

Superintendent L. G. North thinks we are blessed with an unusually faithful corps of teachers. He is correct. The teachers think they are fortunate in having a superintendent who is scarcely ever absent from the school. They are correct too.

At the last meeting of the Board of Directors of the Ladies' Kalamazoo Hall Association, held at Kalamazoo, June 20th, they promoted their agent in this church, Miss May Henderson, to the office of State Secretary, in the place of Mrs. J. W. Ford, of Bay City, who was obliged to resign on account of failing health.

The sympathy of all will be extended to Sister Freeman Hicks, when they know of her deep sorrow. Her husband is dead. He died at Clifton, Kansas, on the 27th of May. As many will remember he had been in feeble health for more than a year. The severe climate of Minnesota, where he spent last winter, told heavily upon him. Early in the spring he went to Kansas in the hope of deriving benefit from its milder air. But his disease, consumption, always so deceptive, had become too deeply seated, and soon terminated fatally. Although our expression of sympathy to our sister is but feeble comfort in this dark hour, yet we wish to assure her that it is heartfelt and genuine. We sincerely wish that she might be in our midst; but in any event we commend her and her orphaned children to the God of all grace, who will never leave nor forsake them.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

Capt. Case, of Cambridge, shears four hundred sheep this season.

Prof. Estabrook has been spending a few days at his old home in Clinton.

The next regular examination of teachers will be held at Adrian on the 18th of August.

During the celebration at Deerfield the grand stand broke down, injuring three women, but none of them seriously.

Detroit News: A church society sold beer freely at Adrian on the Fourth, but the ungodly saloonists had to shut up shop, and they feel bad about it.

Clinton News: The wool market opens up dull in this place. The Woolen Mill Co. are taking in a few clips. Some of the farmers are drawing to Tecumseh and Adrian, but comparatively little wool has yet been sold.

Blissfield Advance: As a matter of fact, we record that for three consecutive years, Rosie Rodgers, a pupil of the west side school, has not been absent or tardy in a single instance.—Truly, a remarkable record of attendance.

The christian people of Adrian congregated on the bluffs overlooking Lawrence Park on the days of the races and thus saved the twenty-five cents gate fee. This was too much for the Salvation Army; they closed their livery shop the next day and went into liquidation.

Clinton News: Fifty-one years ago Wednesday occurred the first Fourth of July celebration in Clinton, at which time a man named Reed lost both arms by the premature discharge of a cannon. But six persons who witnessed that celebration live in Clinton to-day.

Morenci Observer: Some one locked up the room in which the "Old Men's Christian Association" are wont to hold their daily sessions; but the veterans were not thus to be prevented from having their usual "worship." So they severally climbed up a ladder, got in through a window, and "service" was at once begun.

Hudson Gazette: To the Hudson Chaffs it was a glorious Fourth, indeed, for they went over and beat the Tecumseh big nine 11 to 8; and the Hudson boys were short 2 or 3 of their regular players at that. But Deacon (pitcher) and King (catcher) were in the best of trim and equal to any emergency. Bully for our boys.—Now, if we could only catch up with old Tecumseh town in the matter of railroad enterprise and sich!

THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1883.

EDITOR HERALD:—We all regard the present season as unusually wet. Thinking some of your readers might wish to know just how wet, as compared with other years, I have compared the observations taken at this meteorological station with others taken at Lansing by Prof. R. C. Kedzie for 17 years, from 1864 to 1880 inclusive. As regards temperature I only compared the two months of May and June of the year 1883 with the same months of the 17 years mentioned.

	Average Temp. 1883.	Average Temp. for 17 years.
May,	54.72° F.	58.56° F.
June,	67.38° F.	68.23° F.

From the above it will be seen that our spring has not been "so remarkably" cold as some have supposed. The month of May had an unusual storm, viz: the snow storm of the 22d.

In the matter of rain fall the first six months of the year have been remarkable, the months of May and June being especially noticeable. The following is the comparison with the averages for the 17 years above mentioned.

May,	6.49 in.	2.99 in.
June,	5.06 in.	3.88 in.
Total,	12.00 in.	6.87 in.

Thus we have nearly twice the usual amount of rain fall for the months of May and June. There was rain in May on 19 days, in June on 15 days. In the two months of 61 days, 24 were not clear of rainfall. This record is too much for the oldest inhabitant. The first six months of the year are also very noticeable for heavy rain fall as will be feen from the following:

Average annual rain fall, 17 years,	31.02 in.

THE ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT.

The encampment of the first brigade will be held this year on the same grounds as last year at Island Lake. The following general orders have been issued by Capt. Lawrence, which will give all needed particulars of interest to Co. C:

HEADQUARTERS CO. C,
1st Reg. M. S. T.
Tecumseh, July 10, 1883.

General Order, No. 5.

The encampment of the First Brigade State Troops will be held at Island Lake, commencing Thursday, Aug. 9th. Every member of this company will report at the armory in uniform with knapsacks packed for five days' encampment on Wednesday, Aug. 8th, at six o'clock A. M. Transportation papers will then be made out, and to save time and avoid mistakes, men are requested to remain in the armory until the train moves.—The sergeants and corporals must be well posted in all their duties. Special care must be taken by the buglers [illegible] Lieut. J. B. Wood will instruct the company in guard duty and military courtesy. Sergeant A. E. Kennedy will have charge of the setting-up exercise. From this date regular company drills will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings of each week, and all members are expected to be present. Every member must hereafter keep his uniform and equipments in the armory. Your number and key can be had of the Orderly, A. E. Kennedy.

BAPTIST ITEMS.

The Baptist Items is the name of a neat four page sheet published by the Baptist Church of this village. It will be published monthly at a subscription price of twenty-five cents per year. The July number has just been issued from the HERALD job rooms. The idea is a good one, and we have no doubt the Baptist church will receive substantial benefit as the result of their enterprise. The first number is a little late in going to press, owing to the extra work involved in "making-up" an entire new sheet, but hereafter the "Items" will appear promptly on the first of each month. J. O. Heck is subscription agent for the paper, and to whom all subscriptions will be paid. This new venture will doubtless meet with the success it deserves.

AYER'S Ague Cure

IS WARRANTED

To cure the worst cases of Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent Fever, Bilious Fever, and all other fevers and febrile diseases caused by the malarious poison of marshes, prairies, etc.

It is not known that any case has ever been found in which this medicine has not cured the disease, if a fair trial has been given according to the printed directions. In view of the fact that we have been in the habit for many years of offering to refund the money if our Cherry Pectoral, Cathartic Pills, Sarsaparilla, Ague Cure, or any other medicine of our manufacture should not produce the effect claimed, we now make the same offer to those who may prefer to make the test with any of these preparations. Our Ague Cure is a concentrated vegetable preparation, and we have the testimony of many who have used it in their own families and among their neighbors, that it never fails to cure the ague, however long or severe the attack may be, if the patient will follow the plain directions. It is not a cathartic, but a tonic, and does not interfere with the action of any medicine taken for other ailments. It does not stimulate, but leaves the system in a healthy condition, and there is no danger of a return of the disease when once cured. It contains no mercury, nor any other mineral substance, and is in every respect harmless. Ague Cure is a powerful remedy, and should be used by persons who are exposed to the influence of malarious poison, as a preventive. It will prevent the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of the poison, and will cure those who are already suffering from the effects of the poison. Ague Cure is a specific for Intermittent Fever, Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Bilious Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Ague in the Face, Ague in the Bowels, Ague in the Chest, Ague in the Limbs, Ague in the Joints, Ague in the Back, Ague in the Head, Ague in the Ear, Ague in the Eye, Ague in the Nose, Ague in the Tongue, Ague in the Throat, Ague in the Teeth, Ague in the Hands, Ague in the Feet, Ague in the Stomach, Ague in the Side, Ague in the Bowels, Ague in the Bladder, Ague in the Kidneys

ORANGES AND FLORIDA.

Better than Breezes and Blossoms—Under a New Flag.

Even the balmy air and orange groves of Florida fail to keep its people full of happiness and comfort. Art must help nature everywhere—in the tropics as among the pines of the North. "And chief among the blessings which are adapted to all zones," writes Dr. J. G. Wallace, of Fort Dade, Fla., "is Parker's Tonic. It seems to have the world for a field, and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seems to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved me personally of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purifier and invigorator.

Messrs. Hiscox & Co., call especial attention to the fact that after April 16, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply Parker's Tonic. The word "Ginger" is dropped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic, we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine in the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

Men Who Dig Their Graves With Their Teeth.

A glutton is in many regards a monster, and, if possible, more repulsive than a drunkard. The glutton develops in his habits more of the animal than the man who drinks excessively, and may be said to dig his grave with his teeth. A glutton is as devoid of reason as animals of the lower order. In sight of food he disregards all laws relating to health; his voracity obscures his judgment, and he falls a victim to his inordinate and unrestrained appetite.

It is said that "a horse finding himself loose in his stable at night will seek out the meal barrel or bin—provided he belongs to an owner of the shiftless order, who leaves such things accessible—and gorge himself to death, and this will occur, without reference to the quality of the animal, whether he be aristocratic 'blood' or the meanest scrub. A herd of fine stock, being driven to pasture when the surfaces are covered with the earliest grass in its season, must be cared for by the watchful herdsman and guarded from [illegible] before it is finished to their satisfaction, or a few hours of time will witness the death agonies of the flower of the family, resulting from nothing but gluttony pure and simple.

Intelligent physicians say, and have always said, that the greater number of cases of midnight attacks of sickness, as well as the sudden deaths occurring between 'sun and sun,' and which seem so mysterious, are the result solely of imprudence and folly in eating and drinking during the hours of the day." Dr. Tanner's fast has shown men that by the exercise of the will total abstinence from food is possible for many days, and it teaches all that it is well for men not to live by "bread alone." In discussing abstemiousness as a cure-all, Dr. Berry, of Boston, is of the opinion that if a person would find out just what his system craves, and what his digestive organs can deal with profitably and successfully, and take that food never in excess of these conditions, the medical fraternity would find a great part of their occupation gone, and declares that nine-tenths of all the pains and aches, the disorders, uneasiness, cardiac affections, melancholies, irregularities—call them or classify them as one may—result from overloaded, overtaxed digestive organs.

A 200 pound man, doing a hard day's work, mental and physical, every day will find that, with a bit of steak the size of his two fingers, a single slice of toast, and one cup of coffee or tea at a meal, 'day in and day out'—reference is now made to quantity and not to kinds or qualities—he can do more work, keep up to the maximum his strength and general health, and actually increase constantly in buoyancy of spirits and freedom of bodily powers. The testimony is universal and absolutely uniform wherever this experiment is tried. Of course there must be a remedy for defective health, a foundation of soundness upon which to build the new structure of daily life; but these will be more readily attained in conjunction with the practice of abstemiousness, and the reform itself largely contains the condition of its own success.—Indianapolis Sunday Sentinel.

How Ghosts Are Made.

SOME STAGE ILLUSIONS WHICH ARE SHOWN TO BE VERY SIMPLE, AFTER ALL.

A reporter for the New York Star has investigated, in the workshop of Mr. Desmond, the maker, the method adopted to produce the illusion known as "The Ghost Show," which is to be seen in the various museums in that city. In this illusion the spectator sees on the stage a human figure which talks and moves, but which can appear and disappear with startling rapidity. The deception is accomplished by the following means:

The stage is set in the ordinary manner, with the exception of a large plate of glass, which is placed near the front at an angle of forty-five degrees, the top toward the audience. Of course the glass is invisible to the spectator. In front of the glass is a trap cut in the stage, just the length of the plate, and this trap is always open during the performance. At the top of the glass, two large square iron lanterns [illegible] ed so as to throw the light on the surface of the plate. Beneath the stage is a small square room, resembling a large dry goods box, about four feet high, whose entire interior is covered with black velvet. Raised about four inches from the bottom is a small stage, around which are arranged gas-lights about three feet above it. These lights are all under the control of one person, who stands at the prompter's box. When the illusion or "ghost" is wanted, a single movement turns down the head-light, thus giving the lights below the stage a chance to be thrown upon the performer, whose image is reflected on the surface of the plate glass. To make the "ghost" disappear he has simply to turn a thumb stopcock and the light from above falls over the glass and effaces the image.

The performer or "ghost" enters the apartment under the stage, and reclines at full length upon the raised stage in the center with his head toward the audience and slightly raised. When it is necessary to produce the illusion the operator simply turns the stop cock, thus reducing the volume of light at the top, and the figure appears to stand upon the stage, in plain sight of the audience, but is in reality only the image reflected on the plate glass.

"Two things," said Mr. Desmond, "are absolutely necessary to make the illusion successful; the man who works the lights must catch the "cue" at the proper time, and the performer must be well up in his part."

"Have you made many of the 'shows?'"

"Yes, quite a number. I made the one in Bunnell's Museum, on Broadway, and also for his Brooklyn show. Joe Barry, an Old Bowery actor, is running one of these illusions in Bridgeport. Would you like to see the show?"

The reporter confessed to a desire for such an exposition, and accompanied Mr. Desmond to a museum where one of the "ghost shows" is given seven times a day.

"I am the inventor of this illusion," said Prof. McGlennon, "and I have here a patent and a caveat."

"What suggested this illusion business to your mind, Professor?"

"Some years ago I was out West, and one day I saw a reflection in a locomotive lantern. That gave me the idea, and I never rested until I had solved the problem."

Following the Professor, the reporter found himself in a hall from which all light, save a small jet of gas, was excluded. Seated with the Professor on one side and the armless man on the other, the Star reporter waited to see the ghost. Presently the bell rang and the curtain went up on the drama of "Wild Bill, the Avenger; or The Wild Rose of the West." The first act consisted in the wholesale murder of a tribe of Indians by a bad white man, and the resolve of Wild Bill to avenge the wrong. During the act the figure of a young girl, with a very abbreviated skirt, kneeling over one of the Indians, appeared, having every semblance of being real. She appeared twice, and disappeared in the twinkling of an eye. The remaining acts, in which an Indian with a strong Milesian brogue took a prominent character, the same young lady appeared, both in a spiritelle and realistic character. At one period when her rival lovers were slashing away at each other with bowie knives, she suddenly appeared between the two, who regardless of her apparent presence, stabbed through her at each other. Of course it is needless to say it was merely the reflection which the audience saw, but so true was it to nature that several ladies screamed involuntarily.

The Cause of Diphtheria.

Dr. Emil Querner, of Philadelphia, who has made investigations into the cause of diphtheria, reaches the following conclusions:

"After a laborious and scrutinizing investigation into the cause of a large number of cases of diphtheria that have come under my care during several years past, I have almost arrived at the conclusion that the primary infection of an individual comes from the fungi which are found as spots of different colors on the exterior of fruits, particularly apples. As far as the power of my microscope has shown, these fungi seem identical with the fungi from a diphtheritic ulcer, and last autumn I traced a number of cases, at one time five together in one family, back to the eating of apples picked from the ground in orchards without previously cleaning the fruit by rubbing or washing. The prevalence of this dreadful disease in the last three decades may be well accounted for by the fact that the appearance and flourishing of lower animal and vegetable organisms is periodical, of which we have examples in the potato disease, the disease of the grape vine, and cholera, which latter has been ascribed to a fungus growing on the eaves of rice in East India and carried in the human body as a contagion."

A correspondent of the Calcutta Pioneer contributes to that paper some "Reminiscences of the War in Afghanistan." Referring to the fighting qualities of the Afghan soldiery, he says: "An Afghan never thinks of asking for quarter, but fights with the ferocity of a tiger and clings to life until his eyes glaze and his hands refuse to pull a pistol-trigger or use a knife in a dying effort to maim or kill his enemy. The stern realities of war were more pronounced on the battle-fields in Afghanistan than perhaps they have ever been in India, if we except the retributive days of the mutiny. To spare a wounded man for a minute was probably to cause the death of the next soldier, who unsuspiciously walked past him. One thing our men certainly learned in Afghanistan, and that was to keep their wits about them when pursuing an enemy or passing over a hard-won field. There might be danger lurking in each seemingly inanimate form studding the ground, and under any condition were exercised the wounded Afghan would sleep his soul in bliss by killing a Kafir just when life was at its last ebb. This stubborn love of fighting in extremis is prompted doubtless by fanaticism, and we saw so much of it that our men at close quarters always drove their bayonets well home, so that there should be no mistake as to the deadliness of the wound. The physical courage which distinguished the untrained mobs who fought so resolutely against us was worthy of all admiration; the tenacity with which men, badly armed and lacking skilled leaders, clung to their positions was remarkable, to say nothing of the sullen doggedness they often showed when retiring. But when the tide of the fight set in fully against them and they saw that further resistance would involve them more deeply, there was so sudden a change always apparent that one could scarcely believe the fugitives hurrying over the hills were the same men who had resisted so desperately but a few minutes before. They acted wisely; they knew their powers in scaling steep hills, or in making their escape by fleetness of foot; and the host generally dissolved with a rapidity which no one but an eye-witness can appreciate. If cavalry overtook them, they turned like wolves and fought with desperation, selling their lives as dearly as men ever sold them; but there was no rally in the true sense of the word, and but faint attempts at aiding each other. Their regular troops were but little amenable to discipline by reason of deficient training, and they resorted to the tactics they had pursued as tribesmen, when once they were forced to retire."

A Perfect Remedy in 50 Diseases.

Ashfield, Mass.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to Brandreth's Pills which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three years of my life is owing solely to their use. Your Pills saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with Brandreth's Pills, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough.

In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhoea; even dropsy, paralysis, and apoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of Brandreth's Pills. In fact I have found them the Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease, and labor.

The premium list of the Morenci Fair is in the hands of the printer. By the way, where is the premium list of the Tecumseh Fair?

Morenci Observer: "Misfortunes come not singly." While lying in a very critical condition himself, a telegram was received on Tuesday for our townsman, J. Capp, conveying the sorrowful intelligence of the death of his father in Loraine county, O.

Record: A little son of Leander Emerson, of Blissfield, recently accomplished the exploit of swallowing a tin whistle, and the poor little lad nearly whistled himself to death before Dr. Parker shoved the whistle, tune and all down into his stomach.

Morenci Observer: We notice brisk times on the fair ground trotting course every morning, as Prof. Faling, of Tecumseh, is training four trotting horses there and Ernest Baker as many more. Horsemen say we have by far the best track in the county.

Adrian Times: The question now is: How deep do we dig to find the Adrian base ball club? They were beaten by the Blissfield club, the score standing 28 to 1, and yesterday the Blissfields were beaten by the Hudson Chaffs, with a score of 16 to 8.

Deerfield Record: J. M. Robertson, of Blissfield, has been appointed special drain commissioner to construct a water course for the purpose of draining Ottawa lake. The drain will commence on section 36, township of Riga and run south-east through the lake and empty into Ten-Mile creek.

Adrian Press: A Hudson youth who went to the lake the 4th, got very hungry, and snooping around found a well filled lunch basket which he proceeded to investigate. The owner came up before the investigation closed, and a horsewhip was made to do tolerably fair service in aiding digestion.

Morenci Observer: A correspondent writes us from Lyons that a young man in that vicinity addicted to his cups and who wanted to reform, was promptly rejected on making application to the Good Templars of that place for admission into the order. How is that, brethren? A little explanation might be in order.

Deerfield Record: On Wednesday, while cutting hay with a mowing machine, the team of John Clark, two miles west of the village, became frightened at a turkey flying over their heads, and started to run away. John was thrown out and in front of the knives, but clung to the team finally stopping them, and luckily escaped with only a few scratches, altho' his boot was torn from his foot and nearly cut in pieces by the knives.

Clinton News: C. F. Field hied himself to the hay field last Monday in search of a few hours' exercise. He got it—in installments. He also got warm, caught cold, took active part in a chill, wound up with a little fever and was confined to the house for a few days, during which period he had ample time to ruminate on the question of writing a treatise on scientific farming. We believe he has decided not to publish it just at present, but thinks himself better adapted by nature to handle a quill than a pitchfork, though very expert with a table fork.

Brooklyn Exponent: On last Sunday afternoon a little three-year-old daughter of Henry Mellinger, a farmer living south of this village, got hold of a box of Paris green, which had been purchased for use on potato vines, and began eating it. When discovered she had swallowed about a tablespoonful, but, as it acts as a slow poison it did not take immediate effect, and the hasty application of antidotes and emetics caused her to vomit most of it in a short time; but it is still uncertain as to her life being saved, as it is feared that part of the poison has worked into her system where it may yet result fatally.

Blissfield Advance: A Blissfield lady a few days ago, undertook to make ice cream, but when she came to flavor it, she found that her essence of lemon was short. Putting in what she had, she sent her little boy with a bottle to the drug store to get a fresh supply. By the time he got to the drug store he forgot the name of the article; but, judging from the color and the shape of the bottle and his familiarity with sewing machines, he asked for machine oil, which he received and carried home, and the lady dashed it into the ice cream before she discovered what it was. The family were not hungry for ice cream that day.

Mr. L. Egleston, proprietor of the Kalamazoo spring works and one of the chief promoters of the driving park enterprise was stricken by paralysis last week, and his trouble has since been augmented to a serious degree.

As a member of the salvation army at Adrian was praying for a stalwart young sinner he grew personal, and used the young man's name very pointedly in his petition. Thereupon the unconverted youth fell upon the petitioner and smote him hip and thigh.

Mrs. Wm. Farr, of near Cannonsburg, was thrown from her buggy on the 9th and instantly killed. She was thrown upon a brush heap and one stick hit her head and another pierced her side. She had her baby in her arms, and it is thought she lost her life trying to shield her child.

Fred L. Drake, of Ovid, was drowned at the Pine Lake resort last week. He was a young man highly respected and was to have been married in about two weeks. The accident occurred while Drake was in bathing near the bath house, and is the first fatal accident that has occurred at that resort.

WHAT I LIVE FOR.

BY G. LINNÆUS BANKS.

I live for those who love me,
Whose hearts are kind and true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task by God assigned me,
For the bright hopes left behind me,
And the good that I can do.

I live to plant some gladness
Where I believe for my sake,
To remove a single sadness
And forever to efface
Every trace of care or sorrow
Left by Sin's ever-busy plough;
To help the poor, the friendless,
The outcast and the slave.

I live for those who love me,
Whose hearts are kind and true;
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For all human ties that bind me,
For the task by God assigned me,
For the bright hopes left behind me,
And the good that I can do.

I live to hold communion
With all that is divine,
To feel there is a union
Twixt Nature's heart and mine;
To profit by affliction,
Bear crosses, meet reverses,
Gain a victory from defeat,
And strive for the prize of peace.

Also with each good design,
To live as God intends,
Live by precept and example
To the end of life's long journey,
And then, when life's work is ended,
Be gathered to the dead,
As fitting a ripe harvest
Is gathered in its season.

I live for those who love me,
For those who know me true,
For heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my spirit too;
For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do.

"OVER THE WIRES."

Perhaps I must tell you who I am, and how I came to be in the Baysville bank [illegible] years ago. Dryden was then quite a village, and I was fifteen years old that summer. I remember it was when Mrs. Hudson died. Dolly was not twelve yet, and we had a hard time indeed.

We were poor folks, though, for father died and left us very poor. Mother struggled on with a young family till I was sixteen, and then she had rented two rooms of Mrs. Knight, a widow with two children, one aged twenty and the other a daughter. Aunt Mary, mother and I were adopted by the Knights, and although I was earning a support as assistant teacher in the village academy, I was like one of the family when I was not my good, industrious self.

They were all in good positions, but by no means an aristocratic family. John, the eldest son, was in New York in a wholesale sugar house. Tom was the night watchman in the Baysville bank building, and grandpa—we all call him grandpa—was telegraph operator of the town, while Mary was a milliner and Dolly stayed at the office, sending and receiving messages.

The Baysville bank building was a large granite structure, containing the post-office and bank on the first floor, the telegraph office and a number of private law offices on the third floor. In the basement were post-office rooms for sorting the mail, and also the large bank vault.

I knew the building well, for I was fond of telegraphing and spent half my leisure time perched up beside grandpa while he sat peacefully or read the newspaper.

And that was the beginning of my amusement at Dryden, the next station. The operator at Dryden was a wag, and dashed nonsense to our office, but if I were there I sent back jest for jest, and sometimes an hour slipped by like a minute as we talked over the wires of every topic under the sun. He called himself "Lion," and I, for nonsense, signed myself "Elephant," laughing as I did so at the reflection of my tiny figure in the office mirror.

Beyond Dryden, and only five miles from Baysville, was C——, a large commercial town, the largest railway station where an office was always open for the accommodation of travelers.

As I have said, Tom Knight was the night watchman of Baysville bank building, and a lonely time he had of it. The last mail came by stage at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and the post office was vacated at six. The bank closed at three, and by six o'clock every office was deserted for the night.

At seven Tom was on duty, and grandpa, who was resting at night, was in the habit of taking down some coffee and luncheon, as the building was only a stone's throw from the house.

On the December night I have already mentioned, it had stormed heavily all day, and I had taken a new class at the academy, coming home later in the day than usual, and excited over my increase in salary.

Everybody else had gone to bed, and I was lingering over the kitchen fire with Mrs. Knight, dreading the plunge into my cold room, where I had allowed the fire to go out.

The clock struck twelve, and Mrs. Knight, lifting her face from over the fire, said:

"Do call grandpa, Olive; he's asleep on the sofa in the sitting room. I'll have Tom's basket ready by the time grandpa has his hat and coat on. I hate to call him, for he was complaining of rheumatism all day, and the ground is very wet, although the storm is over."

"Let him sleep, I said; "I'll run over with the basket. It is but a step."

"But it is so dark; are you not afraid?"

"Not a bit; I'll slip on my waterproof and rubbers, and draw the hood of my cloak over my head."

"Well, if you will, though I am afraid Tom will scold at my letting you go."

"I'll put down the basket and run, and he will never know who left it."

"Go into the rear basement door; he leaves that open for grandpa."

"I know."

I grasped the handle of the basket, and hurried across the space between the building and the house, and stole softly in at the basement door, in pursuance of my plan to drop the basket and run.

In my rubber shoes my steps were noiseless, and I had scarcely passed the threshold when I stood rooted to the floor in terrible amazement.

Somebody was talking.

I crept forward and listened. There was a man in the vault, and a light shone under the door.

While I listened somebody said:

"There is a confounded draft here; did you shut the door Smith?"

"Yes, but the wind might have blown it open."

I had just time to dart under the stairs and crouch down, when the door of the vault opened and a man came out.

He crossed the entry, drew two heavy noisy bolts, fastened the door by which he entered, and returned without closing the vault door.

I could look in by the dim light and see two men working at the safe locks by a strean of light thrown from a dark lantern.

There was the rustle of a man, bound and gagged upon the floor, and I could only conjecture that it was Tom, for I could not see distinctly.

Then I was nearly caged, for it would be impossible for me to draw those heavy bolts without attracting notice. And the bank was being robbed, that was evident. How could I prevent it? I could not reach Tom. Suddenly I remembered the telegraph office on the second floor. If I could [illegible] help [illegible] it was only five miles, and there was a long job for the burglars before they could open the safe.

I noiseless crept out [illegible] If one of these men turned his head I was lost. I softly crept out, up stairs, slowly, painfully and gained the office. By I darted, throwing my India rubber shoes, till I gained the door of the telegraph office. An [illegible] I dared not strike a match.

I listened, and then [illegible] the door, grasped my [illegible] well [illegible] and gave the signal for C——. I [illegible] my heart [illegible] to the sounder. It came [illegible] working.

[illegible] in the Baysville bank vault! Watchman gagged and bound! Can you not help.

[illegible] in listening, [illegible] Will [illegible] Tom to the [illegible] of his instrument [illegible] no response came to us. The [illegible] telegraph office [illegible] bolted [illegible] watch.

The [illegible] stroke on the deep [illegible] we were [illegible] road leading to C——. I was numb with cold, wishing heartily that I had not left Tom's basket under the stairs, thinking [illegible] of my [illegible] when I [illegible] on the solitary [illegible].

No sweet Anne in Bluebeard's tower was ever more [illegible] than I was then. Would the burglars take the alarm?

The building made a corner of two streets, and I saw eight [illegible] on the road separate and while four dismounted in front four went to the rear.

The burglars were unprepared for this flank movement, for while the police in front were thundering at the main entrance, the rear [illegible] to the rear basement door right into the arms of the police stationed there.

I could hear the [illegible] pistol shots fired, the scuffle of feet, curses, oaths and several [illegible] and I slipped down stairs and out of the now deserted main street and ran home.

Everybody was in bed, and I went to my room, had a crying spell, and comforted my half frozen body in double blankets, where I soon fell asleep.

All this was on Friday night, and I had [illegible] reading to do until Monday; so I slept late, but coming down I found all the family prepared to make a heroine of me.

"I never knew, until mother told me this morning," said Tom, "that it wasn't grandpa who sent the telegram to C——. By Jove, Olive, you're spunky, if you are little."

Tom then described in detail his experience, and added:

"I gave up when four of them pounced on me from one of the upper rooms. They must have got in during the day and hid."

I had to make the Knights promise not to tell my adventure, but could not. Before night all Baysville knew how Olive Hudson caught the burglars. I was in the office with grandpa, when over the wires came this message:

"What does Olive Hudson look like? Everybody in Dryden is talking about her great exploit."

I flashed back:

"What do you suppose such a woman would look like? She is nearly six feet tall, broad-shouldered and loud-voiced,—a perfect Elephant?"

"Was it really yourself, Elephant?"

"Dear Lion, it was!"

"Do you know I want to see you. I am going to New York to-day, but I'll be back next spring."

If he came to Baysville he did not see me. I ran away in a fit of shyness.

In March a wonderful thing happened. My mother's brother, who had been years—nearly all my lifetime—in [illegible], came out to New York, found me out, and took me into a life of ease and luxury, making me pet in his splendid house. He was a bachelor, over fifty years of age, handsome and well-informed, and with large wealth.

He introduced me to old friends of his, and my circle of acquaintances widened every day. I was entirely happy, for we loved each other well.

One day uncle George brought home to dinner a stranger, who he introduced as:

"The son of my old friend Olive, Mr. Roberts."

I made myself agreeable as in duty bound, to Mr. Roberts, a man of thirty, or thereabouts, with a face that was downright ugly, but pleasant from the expression of frank good humor and intelligence upon it. We talked of everything, and I was surprised at the congeniality of taste we soon discovered. In an animated discussion of heroines, Mr. Roberts, turning to uncle George, said:

"You were kindly inquiring this morning about my fortune since father died, but I did not tell you one little episode. Before I was fortunate enough to obtain my present lucrative position, I was for a time telegraph operator in a small place called Dryden, and there I heard of a real heroine, of whom the world will probably never hear."

I knew what was coming, but kept my face perfectly composed to listen. When the story was finished giving Uncle George a sly punch to keep him quiet, I said:

"What kind of a looking person was this wonderful heroine?"

"I never saw her; although Baysville was the next village to Dryden, I never went there. But she was described to me as tall, strong and masculine."

"In short, my dear Lion," I said gravely, "she was a perfect elephant."

Such a stare as greeted me I am certain never came upon Leo Roberts' face before or since that hour. His eyes dilated till I thought that they would pop out of his clear ugly face, and his mouth opened in utter amazement. Finally he remembered his manners, and gasped:

"Pardon me, I—was it really you?"

"Uncle George," I said, "will you be kind enough to introduce me properly to Mr. Roberts? I believe he thinks your niece must bear your name."

With a flourish, Uncle George arose and gravely introduced:

"Mr. Leo Roberts, Miss Olive Hudson; Miss Hudson, Mr. Roberts."

After that we could not certainly be strangers, and Mr. Roberts came often to dine with Uncle George.

[illegible] one day there was a [illegible] when the bride was very small, buried in lace and orange blossoms, and the bridegroom very ugly and good natured; but it was a [illegible] match, and finding for the [illegible] ation commenced at Dryden and Baysville.

"Over the Wires."

My First and Last.

A right molar had been aching [illegible] for [illegible] hours. I treated it, chloroformed it, tried hundreds of [illegible] of ginger, pepper, poultice, fomented and blistered, till that side of my face looked like a boiled beet, but all in vain.

I had exhausted the list of remedies known to me save one—the forceps—and was musing whether I should have [illegible] when an evil moment my [illegible] it was in my college days suggested it. Surely that would be something new to me. Excited on the battery, I announced, I put on my hat and made for the sign of the "Big Injun," on the next corner. [illegible] little sheepishness I entered, [illegible] on such a delicate errand, but put [illegible] face on, and asked for a [illegible] weed. The shopman handed them an [illegible] life to self cigars. I paid for them, slipped them into my deepest and darkest pocket, and started for home. It seemed as if the eyes of every person in the street were sent upon me, and every look seemed to say:

"That greeny has got six cigars in his pocket."

When I arrived home I solemnly prepared for the operation. I took off my coat and boots, put on my study-gown and slippers, tied a handkerchief in lieu of a smoking cap over my luxuriant hair, and then selecting the worst of the half-dozen I applied myself to one end, and a light to the other.

"Why, chum, what's the matter with the confounded thing? I can't get a whiff."

"Perhaps you would get more comfort out of it if you would bite off the little end. Smoke don't generally draw very well through a capped tube."

"Oh! ah! all right!"

Puff, puff!

"Beautiful! Chum, the machine runs!"

Then I settled back in my old rocker before the grate, put my feet on the fender and assumed the nonchalant air of an expert, and puffed away like a pair of bellows till the stub began to burn my fingers.

I had taken the remedy thoroughly. I aimed the fiery remnant at the grate, but singularly enough, it went wide of its mark, struck the mantlepiece, and came bounding back on the rug, scattering the sparks in every direction. I stooped to brush them up, when I suddenly found myself on all fours, and standing none too steady, even with this broadening of base. I tried to rise; the whole room seemed to have gone to sea, and the furniture was rocking at a fearful rate. I made at once for the bed-room doors. This dodged me, and the wall, about three feet to one side, rapped me in the face. My kind chum, seeing the state of my case, came promptly to my help, and after a very nice piece of civil engineering got me into bed. The relief was but momentary. Another wave came quickly, a sort of a subterranean commotion just below the diaphragm, I felt the crisis coming, and called:

"The bowl, the bowl. Quick, quick! I feel as if I was an Etna or Vesuvius; quick!"

After this development I fell back on the pillow, utterly resigned.

"How are you old boy?" inquired my chum, in a most consoling voice.

"Convalescent, thank'ee; guess I'll go to sleep."

After lingering half an hour in the borderland between thought and dream, I was fairly over the line. And a troubled realm it proved to be; blue with endless smoke. First, I was a chimney, with sixteen flues all centering in one at the top, and my nose served as a smoke-vane, keeping its long point to the wind, so that the gusts could not send the blue puffs the wrong way. Then I was the smoke-stack of some great steamer rolling in a heavy sea; in this capacity I took a very long voyage. Next I was converted into a railroad engine; not rolling on wheels, but swinging dizzily through the air as it seemed about fifty feet above the track, with the sparks from the fire flying out of my eyes, and all the flame and smoke streaming through my nostrils. At last the engine gave a sudden chuff, chuff, letting off the accumulated smoke, when I started up in a fright. My chum was exploding with laughter.

"Why, Bob, you snore like old Cyclops himself. You ought to have heard the three shores with which you came to! ha, ha, ha!"

I didn't join in the laugh.

The toothache had gone; but, oh, me, where? Into every fibre and particle of the brain. My pulses were trying to knock holes through my temples. My tongue was coated. My mouth tasted like an old smoke-house. My lips felt as if they had been exchanging with some horse, so swollen, and flabby and floppy they were. It was twenty-four hours before I was myself again. Then the old toothache came back as bad as ever, and I had to go and let the forceps do their work after all.

Thus ended my experience of my first and last cigar.

If any young man wants my advice about mastering the one art of self-fumigation with tobacco, it is that of the philosopher to the very young couple who wanted to get married—don't.

Charcoal.

Charcoal is valuable as fuel, but it has other uses, which make it one of the most serviceable of articles. When laid flat, while cold, on a burn, it causes the pain to abate; by leaving it on for an hour the burn seems almost healed, when the wound is superficial.

Tainted meat, covered with it, is sweet and sound. Strewn over heaps of decomposed pelts or over dead animals, charcoal prevents unpleasant odor. Foul water is purified by it. It is a great disinfectant, and sweetens offensive air if placed in shallow trays around apartments.

It is so very porous that it absorbs and condenses gases rapidly. One cubic inch of fresh charcoal will absorb nearly one hundred inches of gaseous ammonia. Charcoal forms an excellent poultice for malignant wounds and sores. In cases of what is called proud flesh it is invaluable.

It gives no disagreeable odor, corrodes no metal, hurts no texture, injures no colors, is a safe and simple disinfectant.

A teaspoonful of charcoal in half a glass of water often relieves a sick headache. It absorbs the gases and relieves the distended stomach pressing against the nerves that extend from the stomach to the head.

$2,500 versus $1.50.

"I spent $2,500 with other doctors," writes Mr. J. W. Thornton, of Claiborn, Miss., "Samaritan Nervine however alone cured my son of fits." This is on a par with hundreds of others, speedy but thorough.

A Word About Canning.

It is not alone the flies that the amateur never misses the points and tries to cut through the lattice work, that fill him with regret and his cup full of sage and onions. It is the horrible thought that the entire company is looking at him.

No matter how the perspiration may [illegible] down between his shoulder blades, however the hot flushes may chase the chill [illegible] the eyes may be strained to bursting, the rest of the company never allow interest to flag a moment.

We remember one time we were called [illegible] the mishap-niest of a lot for all [illegible] tournament of the home of a dove and stumping a hose and a gad we decided to catch on to as fast as possible.

[illegible] to us now the [illegible] of the guests, the rippling [illegible] the [illegible] as the blanks [illegible] merrily as a [illegible] bell.

[illegible] to mix the [illegible] laughter of [illegible] as she sat [illegible] left that day, scented cemented and [illegible] the gleaming steel, we felt buoyant and proud. Proud to think how we could slice the white, calm bosom of that deceased hen. Proud to think how, in our mind, we had laid out the different pregnable points about the cold cackler, and in the anticipation or applause, glad and free, when we had accomplished the warfare, and victory and stuffing had perched upon our banner.

We softly jabbed the shimmering fork a cradle of the breast-bone, tore off a few loose pimples from under the wings of the late lamented, gouged out a few shattered fragments from the neck, and to cut a sirloin steak on the back.

An oppressive gloom seemed to pervade the air. The old hen did'nt have her joints where we had them laid out in our mind. She was deformed. She seemed to be a freak of nature.

It unsettled and unnerved us.

We gouged wildly at the remains, squirting the gravy right and left, and filling the air with fragments of bread crumbs and sage.

By some kind of omission or miscalculation, we made a wild stab at the back of the late lamented hen, and with a frenzy born of repeated defeats and depressing failures, the knife struck the platter with a crash, and ceasing not in its untamed fury, glanced aside, and in an instant buried itself, with a sickening thud, in the corset of the hired girl.

With difficulty, we drew out the glittering blade, now sanguined with the gore of a fellow-creature, wiped it on the table cloth, and fled. Out into the cold, unsympathetic world, out into the crash and confusion of struggling humanity, to battle on through life under an assumed name.

That is why we tremble and turn pale when our past life is inquired into by biographers. That is why a baked fowl makes us quail.

That is why we always sign our nom de plume to a promissory note. That, too, is why we always travel incog. and without baggage.—Bill Nye, in Boomerang.

A Husband's Duty.

A very grave responsibility has the man assumed in his marriage. Doting parents have confided to his care the welfare of a loved daughter, and a trusting woman has risked all her future happiness in his keeping. Largely will it depend upon him whether her pathway shall be strewn with thorns or roses.

Let your wife fully understand your business. In nearly every case she will be found a most valuable adviser when she understands all your circumstances. If a dispute arises dismiss the subject with a kind word and do not seek to carry your point by discussion. It is a glorious achievement to master one's own temper. You may discover that you are in error, and if your wife is wrong she will gladly, in her cooler moments, acknowledge the fault.

Never neglect your wife for all the world besides. Never deceive; confidence once lost can never be wholly regained. Never give all your pleasant words and smiles to strangers—the kindest words and the sweetest smiles should be reserved for home. Home should be your heaven.

Never fail to tell your wife the truth; truthful you get your reward—you will get your punishment if you deceive. Never fail to say a kind, encouraging word to your wife; praise and encourage her. To keep her love, be kind and loving—always be a lover.

And last and above all, to keep your wife's love and respect, be a strictly temperate man. It would be difficult to love and honor a man whom she is compelled to look down upon, who would drag himself, wife and children down to poverty, shame and disgrace. One and all, turn from the inoxicating cup. That alone makes more misery, causes more unhappy homes and is the greatest curse on earth. God pity the poor wife with an intemperate man. Her life's happiness will be completely destroyed by such a union. Better a thousand times the single, free and independent maidenhood than married to a man addicted to dissipated habits. Don't go "down town" every night to see a man, and then expect your wife to be all smiles when you come home.

The Great Problem.

When we calmly ponder upon the subject it is amazing that at the end of many thousands of years of constant worship and constant inquiry, the human race should still possess so little information about its Maker. The soliloquy of Job that the footprints of God are in the sea, and are therefore easily erased and not to be followed by man as they could be were they made in the land or even in the perishable snow, is the soliloquy of even this far off period, and hearts the most devout often wish that the footprints of the Heavenly Father were made where the eye, even when blinded by tears, might discover them and run along that bright way with gladness. Books have appeared upon the "Footprints of a Creator," and yet after all such books have been published and read, the mind falls back again into its old longing for some more perfect evidence of the existence and presence and sympathy of God. The fact that our race has lived and inquired and struggle so long over the perfect solution of this problem, and stands to-day in the same cloud as that which lay around the mind and soul of antiquity, may well lead us to assume that there is something so unmeasurable in the Being of God that the human mind will always be kept away from a perfect solution of this mystery.—[David Swing.

RE-INVESTIGATED.

A Remarkable Statement Fully Confirmed by Three Important Interviews.

An unusual article from the Rochester, N. Y., Democrat and Chronicle was published in this paper recently and has been the subject of much conversation both in professional circles and on the street. Apparently it caused more commotion in Rochester, as the following from the same paper shows.

Dr. J. B. Henion, who is well known not only in Rochester, but in nearly every part of America, sent the extended article to this paper a few days since, which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and escape from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal inquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further [illegible] an editorial necessity.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion at his residence, when the following interview occurred:

"That article of yours, doctor, has created quite a stir, what. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?"

"Every one of them and many additional ones. Few people ever get so near the grave as I did and then return, and I am not surprised that the public think it marvelous. It was marvelous."

"How in the world did you, a physician, come to be brought so low?"

"By neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent headaches; felt tired most of the time; could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull, indefinite pains, and my stomach was out of order, but I did think it meant anything serious."

"But have these common ailments anything to do with the fearful Bright's disease which took so firm a hold on you?"

"Anything? Why, they are the sure indications of the first stages of that dreadful malady. The fact is, few people know or realize what ails them, and I am sorry to say that too few physicians do either."

"That is a strange statement, doctor."

"But it is a true one. The medical profession have been treating symptoms, instead of diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. We doctors have been clipping off the twigs when we should strike at the root. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of Bright's disease even more than a cough announces the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough, but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time time trying to relieve the headache, stomach pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of these ailments."

"This, then, is what you meant when you said more than one-half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it doctor?"

"Precisely. Thousands of so-called diseases are torturing people to-day, when in reality it is Bright's disease in some one of its many forms. It is a Hydra headed monster and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease."

"And did all these cases have symptoms at first?"

"Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy—Warner's Safe Cure. I am getting my eyes thoroughly open in this matter and think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also. Why, there are no end of truths bearing on this subject. If you want to know more about it go and see Mr. Warner himself. He was sick the same as I, and is the healthiest man in Rochester to-day. He has made a study of this subject and can give you more facts than I can. Go, too, and see Dr. Lattimore, the chemist, at the University. If you want facts there are any quantity of them showing the alarming increase of Bright's disease, its simple and deceptive symptoms, and there is but one way which it can be escaped."

Fully satisfied of the truth and force of the Doctor's words, the reporter bade him good day and called on Dr. Warner at his establishment on Exchange street. At first Mr. Warner was inclined to be reticent, but learning that the information desired was about the alarming increase of Bright's disease, his manner changed instantly and he spoke very earnestly:

"It is true that Bright's disease has increased wonderfully, and we find, by reliable statistics, that in the past ten years its growth has been 250 per cent. Look at the prominent men it has carried off: Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wilson, Carpenter, Bishops Haven and Peck, and others. This is terrible, and shows a greater growth than that of any other known complaint. It should be plain to every one that something must be done to check this increase, or there is no knowing where it may end."

"Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it, Mr. Warner?"

"Hundreds of thousands. I have a striking example of this truth which has just come to my notice. A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college was lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopic analysis, and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. In order to show the contrast between healthy and unhealthy fluids, he had provided a vial, the contents of which were drawn from his own person.—'And now, gentlemen,' he said, 'as we have seen the unhealthy indications, I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health,' and he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him, and in a trembling voice he said: "Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the Kidneys," and in less than one year he was dead.

"You believe, then, that it has no symptoms of its own and is frequently unknown even by the person who is afflicted with it?"

"It has no symptoms of its own and very often none at all. Usually no two people have the same symptoms, and frequently death is the first symptom. The slightest indication of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one. I know what I am talking about, for I have been through all the stages of kidney disease."

"You know of Dr. Henion's case?"

"Yes, I have both read and heard of it."

"It is very wonderful, is it not?"

"A very prominent case but no more so than a great many others that have come to my notice as having been cured by the same means."

"You believe then that Bright's disease can be cured?"

"I know so from the experience of hundreds of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends."

"You speak of your own experience, what was it?"

"A fearful one. I had felt languid and unfitted for business for years, but I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I found it was kidney difficulty I thought there was little hope, and so did the doctors. I have since learned that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day, saying, 'there goes a man who will be dead within a year.' I believe his words would have proven true if I had not fortunately secured and used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Cure."

"And this caused you to manufacture it?"

"No it caused me to investigate. I went to the principal cities, saw physicians prescribing and using it and I therefore determined, as a duty I owed humanity and the suffering, to bring it within their reach and now it is known in every part of America, is sold in every drug store and has become a household necessity."

The reporter left Mr. Warner, much impressed with the earnestness and sincerity of his statements and next paid a visit to Dr. S. A. Lattimore at his residence on Prince street. Dr. Lattimore, although busily engaged upon some matters connected with the State Board of Health, of which he is one of the analysts, courteously answered the questions that were propounded him:

"Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr. H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did this analysis show you?"

"The presence of albumen and tube casts in great abundance."

"What did the symptoms indicate?"

"A serious disease of the kidneys."

"Did you think Mr. Warner could recover?"

"No, sir. I did not think it possible. It was seldom, indeed, that so pronounced a case had, up to that time, ever been cured."

"Do you know anything about the remedy which cured him?"

"Yes I have chemically analyzed it and upon critical examination find it entirely free from any poisonous or deleterious substances."

We publish the foregoing statements in view of the commotion which the publicity of Dr. Henion's article has caused and to meet the protestations which have been made. The standing of Dr. Henion, Mr. Warner and Dr. Lattimore in the community is beyond question and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. They conclusively show that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, alarmingly increasing and that it can be cured.

A humorist, embittered by long and fiendish pursuit of puns, once impaled a baleful joke upon his wife at the close of a wash-day. She was preparing the frugal meal, whereupon she smote him [illegible] broad brow with a stewpan. The dying man cried out as he fell, with a gleam of immortal triumph in his eyes, "Stupendous joke!" and passed away to laughter land.

How Much Will do it?

How much of Thomas' Eclectric Oil is required to cure? Only a very little. A few drops will cure any kind of an ache; and but a trifle more is needed for sprains and lameness. Rheumatism is not so readily affected; an ounce and sometimes two ounces are required. No medicine, however, is so sure to cure with the same number of applications.

An Illinois paper asserted that there was one jackass in the state legislature, and before noon of the day on which the item was published the editor received a note from every member of the house, including the speaker, telling him to retract or look out for a libel suit, each member regarding it as a personal hit.

SIGNS OF FOUL WEATHER.

BY DR. JENNER.

The hollow winds begin to blow;
The clouds look black, the glass is low;
The soot falls down, the spaniels sleep,
And spiders from their cobwebs peep.
Last night the sun went pale to bed;
The moon in halos hid her head.
The boding shepherd heaves a sigh,
For, see, a rainbow spans the sky.
The walls are damp, the ditches gurgling
And hark! how the chairs and tables crack;
Old Betty's joints are on the rack—
Her corns with shooting pains torment her,
And to her bed unkindly sent her.
Hark! how the ducks; the sea-fowl cry;
And yonder flits are looking high.
How restless are the sporting swine!
And hear they disturb the wine.
Look! o'er the grass the swallow wings;
The cricket, too, how sharp he sings!
Puss on the hearth, with velvet paws,
Sits washing o'er her whiskered jaws.
The smoke from chimneys right ascends,
Then, spreading, back to earth it bends.
The wind, unsteady, veers around,
Or settling in the south is found.
Through the clear stream the fishes rise,
And [illegible] the insect flies.
The glow worm lingers [illegible]
Illumed the dewy hills last night.
At dusk the squalid toad was seen,
Like quadruped, stalk o'er the green:
The whirling wind the dust obeys,
And in the rapid eddy plays.
The frog has changed his yellow vest
And in a russet coat is dressed.
The sky is green, the air is still,
The mellow blackbird's voice is shrill.
The dog, so altered in his taste,
Quits mutton bones on grass to feast,
Behold the rooks—how odd their flight!—
They imitate the gliding kite,
And seem precipitate to fall,
As if they felt the piercing ball.
The tender colts on back do lie,
Nor heed the traveler passing by.
In fiery red the sun doth rise,
Then wades through clouds to mount the skies.
'Twill surely rain, we see't with sorrow—
No working in the fields to-morrow.

"The line, "Hark! how the chairs and tables crack," is incorrect, as the cracking—that is, contraction—indicates fair weather, from the diminution of moisture.—Steinmetz.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin remarks: "It is a misnomer to call America a free country when a boy desiring to learn a trade which a master workman is willing to teach him, finds his way blocked by combinations that assume to refuse him the privilege he claims."

Susan B. Anthony said "It has been ascertained that when young men and young women are brought together in colleges, their conversation is no longer characterized by frivolity, but becomes elevated by the discussion of subjects suggested by their mutual studies."

"Tobias Hobson was the first man in England who let out hackney horses. When a man came for a horse he was led into the stable, where there was a great choice, but he was obliged to take the horse that stood next to the stable door, so that every customer was alike well served, according to his chance, hence it became a proverb, when what ought to be your selection was forced upon you, to say: "Hobson's choice."

At Tacoma, the western terminus of the Northern Pacific railway, on Puget's Sound, there is a singular church tower. The building is of the rudest material. The tower is composed of a fir tree seventy feet high, cut off forty feet from the ground, and surmounted with a bellcote, bell and cross. The annual rings of the tree indicate an age of 275 years. Within fifteen days the corner log was laid, the last nail driven and the first service held.

Girls ought to be able to talk well on current topics—books, new and old, all that interests their brothers. But do they show themselves competent to carry on a conversation that will stimulate and refresh those they meet? Good talkers never fail to interest and to charm; but a young woman whose ideas are only broad enough to be expressed in the words "awful," "horrid," and "perfectly lovely," will hardly be classed as one of them.—Youth's Companion.

One beautiful illusion has been rudely dispelled. It has been supposed that the custom of banging the hair originated in the United States the style coming from the unfettered North American Indian. We devise so few styles that we have rather prided ourselves upon this, hideous though it may be. But it now seems that the bang is quite common among the savages of New Zealand, and has been for years. The returned convicts brought it to England, and from there it has spread widely and wildly.

A little Oil City boy whose father gave him a printing press the other day, has already discovered the dangers and pitfalls which surround the path of the printer. He set up and printed a little gilt-edged card, with the warning phrase, "Paint! look out!" By some means this card became fastened to his sister's hat, and hung down just above her left ear, where he who ran could read, and when she went down street there was a grin extending clear from Pearl avenue to the Exchange; and that night the boy traded off his printing press for a yellow dog and a pop-gun.

WHY HE RAN.—Recorder—"You were seen last night about 12 o'clock under suspicious circumstances, trying to enter the door of De Smith's store, on Galveston avenue." Prisoner—"I noticed in passing that the door was open, and was just shutting it up—that's all." "What did you run for as soon as you saw the policeman?" "What did I run for when I saw the policeman? Well, that gets me! Why, I am a friend of De Smith, and as soon as I saw his store door was open, and a suspicious-looking policeman sneaking around, I ran as hard as I could to let De Smith know his store was in danger of being robbed. What did I run for? Well, that get's me; What do you suppose I ran for?"

CURE FOR SMALL-POX.—The following cure for this loathsome disease was furnished the Liverpool Mercury by a well known English physician:

"I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man if the worst case of small-pox cannot be cured in three days simply by cream of tartar. This is the sure and never failing remedy: One ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of boiling water. Drink when cold at short intervals. It can be taken at any time, and is a preventive as well as a curative. It is known to have cured thousands of cases without a failure. It never leaves a mark, never causes blindness, and always prevents tedious lingering."

Butter? You remember the story of the guest who was eating more butter than buscuit, while the landlady looked on, and fidgeted, and hinted, until she fairly went into a nervous fit. Finally she said: "Do you know that butter is up to 65 cents a pound?" The hungry guest reached out and took what there was left. "Well," he drawled, approvingly and reassuringly "good butter is worth it."

It may not be known, says London Truth, that a man wearing dark clothes is more liable to infection from contagious disease than he who wears light-colored garments. Because particles which emanate from diseased or decaying bodies are much more rapidly absorbed by dark than by light fabrics. This is easy of proof. Expose a light and dark coat, to the fumes of tobacco for five minutes, and it will be found that the dark one smells stronger than the other of tobacco smoke.

The distance required for stopping railroad trains increases very rapidly with the increase of speed. In experiments made in England, the Westinghouse brake stopped a train moving at the rate of 41 1-2 miles an hour at a point only 485 feet distant from the place where [illegible] applied; but when the speed was increased to 51 miles an hour the distance run after the application of the brake was 1185 feet, and at a speed of 67 miles an hour the train ran 2005 after the brake was applied.

A Mrs. Carr, of Pittsburgh, Pa., while asleep, was bitten by a spider or some other insect upon the arm, and the next day the limb began to swell, and from the wrist to the shoulder there appeared poisoned blotches, the whole arm and side having the appearance of being badly burned. The inflammation was reduced by medical treatment, but about four days after, either from the effects of the poison or the shock to her nervous system, the lady became raving crazy.

The needlegun is the invention of John Nicholas Dreyse, a Prussian locksmith. He was 19 years old when the battle of Jena was fought, and picked up a musket upon the field, an examination of which convinced him that his countrymen were the worst-armed soldiers in Europe. Dreyse made his way to Paris, and entered the employ of a Swiss gunmaker, whom Napoleon commissioned to make a breech-loading musket. The young apprentice took up the idea and worked at it for many years until, in 1835, he succeeded in making a breech-loading needlegun. The Prussian Government tried and adopted the weapon, and supplied the inventor with means for carrying on the manufacture of the gun now used in Kaiser Wilhelm's army.

STRENGTHENING THE VOICE.—For putting the voice in good order for singing or speaking, the following recipes have been given:

A teaspoonful of compound tincture of cinnamon beaten up with a raw egg. A raw egg beaten up with a large cup of black tea and good milk or cream.

For hoarseness arising from over exertion of the voice, dissolve in the mouth a piece of gum catechu about the size of a pea.

To preserve the voice in good order, practice daily without fatigning the voice. Over exertion and want of practice are the chief causes of disorder in the voice. Rest cures the results of the former, and practice those of the latter.

OVER-CONFIDENCE.—Don't be over confident, young man. Don't carry your pet hobby too far. Take note of the legs and shoulders of a man before you "sass" him. Out here on West Hill there is a goat that for three long years has butted everything and everybody that the broad empire of Burlington could send against him. He ate the circus posters before the paste was dry, and when the advance agent remonstrated, the goat just stood up and crowded the man clear through the bill-stand. He once upset a hay wagon; jammed his head through the end of a wood-shed, and flattened officer Heefer up against a brick wall. And one day last week he wandered down into a saw-mill, and butted the fly-wheel. Only once. When he came down his neck was bent. He couldn't make a dent in a sack of meal now. Young man, be content with reasonable vicsories. Some day you too may run against a fly-wheel.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Weeds

The farmers should be deeply interested in the two leading points concerning weeds—how they get into the fields and garden, and how to get those out that are already in. Many of the seeds of weeds are sown with those of the crop. Especially is this the case with those that are nearly of a size, color, etc., of the grains and grass-seeds. Great care should be exercised in sowing only pure seeds. If the weeds are already in the soil, the quicker steps are taken to eradicate them the better. Let no weeds go to seed. This will end the annuals. With perennials the work is more difficult; but it should be remembered that they are much more easily destroyed when young. Cut frequently and dig out by the roots when possible.

Boys and Small Fruits.

Boys on farms, like boys in other places, want spending money, and are often sorely troubled to obtain it. They scarcely like to ask their parents for money to buy articles to please their fancy, and they have few opportunities to work out, for when neighboring farmers wish to hire extra help there is plenty of work on the farms where they belong. Their best chance to earn money appears to be in cultivating some crop at home that requires small capital to engage in, a small amount of land for its production, but which produces a considerable sum of money. The small fruits are excellent in these respects. They may be set out at times when the soil is too wet to be of good advantage, and may be cultivated at odd hours when there is little to do in the fields. They require but a small amount of land; and produce more money from an acre than any farm crop.

Eggsactly So.

"A teamster brought in some wood last summer, which Mr. Slater had to split up to get in the stove. After splitting several pieces, he discovered that the axe had exposed a peculiar protuberance. An investigation showed that it was a perfectly formed egg imbedded in the wood. The egg had probably been laid in some depression in the tree, and the wood had grown around it. The wood kept the air from the egg, consequently it did not grow stale. How could it? Mr. Slater got the egg out and put it under a hen. It hatched out a curious bird, which proved to be a game cock of a breed heretofore unknown or considered extinct. It can whip a dog easily."

THE SCIENCE OF COOKERY.—Ruskin thus discourses on cookery: What does "cookery" mean? It seems the knowledge of medea, and of Circe, and of Calypso, and of Helen, and of Rebekah, and of the Queen of Sheba. It means knowledge of all herbs and fruits, and balms and spices; and of all that is healing and sweet in fields and groves, and savory in meat; it means carefulness and inventiveness, watchfulness, willingness, and readiness of appliances; it means the economy of your great grandmothers, and the science of modern chemists; it means much tasting and no wasting; it means English thoroughness and French art, and Arabian hospitality; and it means, in fine, that you are to be perfectly and always "ladies," "loaf givers;" and as you are to see, imperatively, that everybody has something pretty to put on—so that you are to see, yet more imperatively, that everybody has something nice to eat.

Griggs' Glycerine Salve.

The best on earth can truly be said of Griggs' Glycerine Salve, which is a sure cure for cuts, bruises, scalds, burns, wounds and all other sores. Will positively cure piles, tetter and all skin eruptions. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Only 25 cents. For sale by Baker & Hall.

FLINT GLASS.—Glass is a double silicate of either potash or soda with either lead or lime. There are three kinds of glass: flint glass, crown or plate glass and bohemian glass. Take carbonate of potash, silica (or sand) and red lead and fuse them well together and a transparent and colorless mass of flint glass will be produced. Ordinary plate glass is made by using lime instead of lead. By adding the oxide of iron we get green glass; the oxide of manganese purple glass, and the addition of oxide of copper gives red glass.

Testimony From the Press.

To those afflicted with lung trouble, hear what V. W. Wilson, of the Ottowa (Ill.) Times says: "After being disabled for three months with a cough, and lung trouble, often spitting up blood, can testify that I am cured permanently by the use of Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure." A free trial bottle can be had at Baker and Hall's.

THE MATCH TAX.—The cent-a-bunch tax on matches yields the Government a daily income of nearly $10,000. Any one who desires can figure from this, approximately, how many matches are used per day. On the insignificant little bunch of matches is levied by far the heaviest tax known to civilized governments. Your grocer will charge 50 cents for a quarter gross package. Of this sum 36 cents stands for the tax of a penny a bunch, while 14 cents represents the first cost and the manufacturer's, jobber's and retailer's profits.

Perfect Success.

Those two words have a vast meaning when fully comprehended. A perfect success can be truthfully applied to Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures dyspepsia, biliousness, costiveness, all diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder. It is a perfect tonic and blood purifier; it keeps the skin clear and bright, drives away pimples and makes the general health excellent. Price 50 cents of Baker and Hall.

"THE PAPER."—As with the school, so with the paper. You pay your subscription price at the counting-room; you can acquire the right to be served with a copy; all that is commercial you can buy. But you do not own the paper. You did not start it. You cannot stop it. You can learn from it if it is a teacher; you can be influenced by it if it is an advocate; and you can love it if it is a companion. But, though you read it every day, and fill yourselves with its ample contents, it comes back again on the morrow freshly burdened with its wealth of thought and information. That is the newspaper.

Positive Cure for Piles.

To the people of this county we would say we have been given the agency of Dr. Marchisi's Italian Pile Ointment—emphatically guaranteed to cure or money refunded—internal, external, blind, bleeding or itching piles. Price 50 cents a box. No cure, no pay. For sale by Waldo & Doty, druggists.

Love, forget that a gun is not so harmless as a walking-stick. Don't point it at yourself. Don't point it at any one else. Don't carry it so that its range includes all your hunting companions. Don't try to find out whether it is loaded or not by shutting one eye and looking down the barrel with the other. Don't use it for a walking-stick. Don't climb over a fence and pull it through muzzle foremost. Don't throw it into a boat so that the trigger will catch in the seat and the charge be deposited in your stomach. Don't use it for a sledge hammer. Don't carry it full cocked. Don't carry it with the hammer on.

All family medicine chests should contain, at least one 25 cent bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, for sudden colds, croup and other lung difficulties.

In the performance in Paris of Le Pied de Mouton, a candlestick bearing two lighted candles is brought upon the stage. One of the characters in the play blows out the candles, but as he moves away one of them becomes relighted. The actor again blows out this light when the other one becomes kindled; and, becoming enraged, the man takes up the candlestick and blows furiously without being able to extinguish the light permanently. This effect, which creates considerable astonishment, is produced by means of an electric spark from an induction coil, which inflames the vapor from a mixture of ether and spirits of turpentine contained in the vessels representing the wax tapers.

A PAPER FOR THE TIMES.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is the pioneer of cheap journalism in the West. It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 3 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper, complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long-established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 33,314 copies; in 1879, 43,194 copies; in 1880, 54,891 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,019 copies, or a daily average of 19,848 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON, and EVENING ISSUES, known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the exceptional extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers to that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North. Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic failities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months, been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician, and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

Arthur and Tilden Undeniedly in the Race

A New York special to the Chicago Tribune says: There is no longer any doubt that there are two citizens of New York who are presidential candidates. They are Chester A. Arthur and Samuel J. Tilden. There are a [illegible] Arthur has decided to permit himself to be a candidate before the Republican national convention. This he [illegible] Arthur has [illegible] but he leaves it to his friends to make out a ticket with which he can be most intimately at home. [illegible] plans which have [illegible] a broader acquaintance with the people. The prominent Republicans in different parts of the country who have been with him within two weeks have created the impression that he is in the lead. The Republican leaders who are for Arthur think that Arthur was a candidate after a prolonged interview with him some time since. He expressed himself as a very decided candidate. In New York friends of Arthur have [illegible] He [illegible] in New York [illegible] better upon the theory of his candidacy than on any other hypothesis. The details of the trip which this now accomplished [illegible] show the same thing. He has [illegible] the purpose of going to New York [illegible] fashionable watering places. He will go west and will start via Louisville. He has promised to be there early in August and will complete work. From there he will go to Chicago, where he will remain some days. He has [illegible] Sheridan the [illegible] trip. It is reported that [illegible] have already been [illegible] the Republican party [illegible] but six weeks.

Samuel J. Tilden is a candidate. Ar[illegible] Tilden campaigner said last week [illegible] Mr. Tilden is a candidate about [illegible] will [illegible] renewed vigor. You may make a report that he has taken a fine [illegible] horseback [illegible] the old gentleman will be [illegible] he is frisky. He is frisky. But [illegible] an intelligent candidate only—information received from New York makes it certain that the Saratoga interview in The New York Times and Chicago Tribune was an authorized declaration of the fact that Tilden is in the field. The manuscript of the interview, there is good reason to believe, was submitted to Mr. Tilden before it was published. If the name of the gentleman with whom the interview was had could be given it would carry conviction as to the accuracy of the statements to all New York politicians. Mr Dana in his Sun is evidently very much annoyed at the publication of this interview. He declares with impatient emphasis that the report is not true. Dana's theory is that Tilden ought not to permit it to be known so soon that he is a candidate that the announcement will hurt his chances; there may be stronger organizations to defeat him, and that the candidacy should be strong very much later. Dana is, of course, a good friend of Tilden, but he is not an active adviser in this matter. The announcement of Tilden's candidacy is authentic. There are no prominent Democrats here now. The few congressmen who are here think that the knowledge of Tilden's candidacy may have some influence upon the speakership campaign, but they are not able to define in what particular. Gen. Arthur's friends think that if Tilden should be nominated it would be very vital to the Republican party that the Republican candidate should also come from New York.

A farmer very truly says: Good roads are not a personal convenience, but no public improvement so enhances the value of real estate as a system of good roads kept in good repair. While we cannot really shorten the distance between our homes and the market town where we sell our produce, yet we can practically do it, by the construction of a good road, for by this means we can not only reduce the time necessary to travel the distance, but we are enabled to double the load, and to travel with more comfort to ourselves and more ease to our team.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 16, 1883.

Young America is fast outstripping old America. Never was this better shown than in the National Convention of the Amateur Press Association, which was held at the St. Nicholas [illegible] on Wednesday. [illegible] hundred boys, ranging in age from 12 to 20 years, congregated, discussed the merits and demerits [illegible] their institution, [illegible] and wrangled in a manner to make even the veteran [illegible] ward politicians green with envy. Undaunted by parliamentary warfare, elected officers, and in the evening [illegible] over town. They were not [illegible]. In the evening I happened to drop in at the hotel and noticed that the parlor room was almost filled with the youngsters. The [illegible] in which they kept [illegible] claret punches, sherry cobblers, gin fizzes and other soothing and capacity drinks disappeared as if soaked up by so many sponges. "Don't you think," said the bartender with a smile, "that these lads have the making of great journalists in them?" "Why," I asked. "Because they have successfully mastered the first requisite for writing well, which is maintaining your place at the bar." At the St. Nicholas they make a very seductive variety of gin fizz called a crushed strawberry fizz and it deserved as the name indicates with strawberry juice. This is [illegible] presentable to the boys. Two of them, each about fifteen years old, were fairly infatuated with it. They drank at least a half dozen of them between nine and ten o'clock. The other question may be imagined, as the gin went to their heads. One of them set a Massachusetts paper, while the other plugged a Pennsylvania organ. They grew very loving but after a while disagreed on some questions of policy in the manner of conducting the affairs of the association. The [illegible] grew heated, other editors joined in it. Finally the climax was reached by the Pennsylvania [illegible] jumping up, throwing his straw hat aside and exclaiming to the representative of the Buzzed Bean State, "I eat you up." There was no assertion about him. He was a disciple of the muscular western school and was willing to prove it. He was prevented however from doing so by the night clerk, who beckoned two sturdy porters and they each took up one of the combatants and carried him to his room.

While passing through the lower part of Greenwich street the other afternoon I dropped into one of the Italian emigrant boarding houses with which the lower end of the city is dotted. It was inhabited exclusively by Germans. In fact Germans, Swiss, Frenchmen and now and then a better class of Italians are the only ones that patronize these establishments. The Irish as a rule are taken care of by relatives. Boarders are charged at rates varying from fifty cents to a dollar a day, according to accommodations. The rooms are clean enough, but oh, so hot and stuffy. Through the wide open windows the heat and sweeps in with sickening effect. The smoke and cinders of the elevated road add their quota to the discomfort, and the noise from them must keep the poor people awake most of the night. In the doorway sat a family consisting of father, mother and seven children, ranging in age from fifteen to two years old. They were going west that night. Despite the intense heat they were dressed in thick, heavy woolens, and one of the boys wore a comforter around his throat. The perspiration streamed down their faces, and one of the little girl's faces was one mass of prickley heat. Yet they seemed perfectly contented. The only thing that seemed to displease poor familias was that the beer in America was so light—not at all like German beer.

One of the brightest and cleverest Bohemians died this week of apoplexy, and quite suddenly. This was Colonel John Keegan, who about a year ago was sentenced to imprisonment for criminally libelling Senator Winfield of New Jersey. In the latter years of his life Keegan was "run down" considerably. He got into bad odor in the Metropolitan newspaper offices, declined to do "slush" work, and under repeated rebuffs his spirit broke and he drank rather too freely. That is the misfortune of men who have seen better days. Such of their former acquaintances who wish to be kind to them invariably ask them to take a drink when they meet them. A poor fellow may be starving at the time, but he could not suggest to his host that a fifteen cent bowl of soup would do him more good than the 25 cent glass of whiskey to which he is invited. Thus they invariably end in becoming drunkards and then everybody avoids them. Keegan had not quite gone so far as this last stage, but he was rapidly approaching it. I remember him in his prime some seven or eight years ago. He was then a handsome dashing fellow a trifle above the medium height, of capital figure and a handsome genial face, which men liked and women fell in love with. He had black hair which he wore long, and as he affected a slouch hat and a military cut in his clothes, he looked every inch a dashing frontier officer come back to civilization for recreation.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Tarragon Vinegar.—Tarragon leaves are brought to market. Put them in a pickle jar, cover with vinegar, keep in a warm place for two weeks, until the vinegar is flavored. Then steep it over the fire, strain out the leaves and bottle for flavoring soups and gravies.

Rye Toast.—To one quart rye flour add one even teaspoonful of salt and sufficient boiling water to make a stiff dough. Put it in a buttered pan, have a bright, clear fire, and the grate well raked; prop the pan in front of the grate, and as brown crust forms strip it off and keep it hot and dry. Repeat this till it is all brown, then break it up, pour hot cream over it and serve in a covered dish.

Huckleberry Pudding.—Take a five-cent stale loaf of bread, cut in thin slices and butter, and put a layer in the bottom of a pudding dish; strew in the huckleberries and a tablespoonful of sugar; go on this way until you come to the top, then pour in a cupful of water, and cover with bread on top, and bake until brown. [illegible] sweet enough, if not, add sugar. Must be eaten cold.

Squash Cakes.—Boil the squash thoroughly in salted water, and, with a masher, after the squash is strained, make as smooth as possible; half a pint sifted flour, pint of milk and two eggs, four tablespoonfuls white sugar, and a teaspoonful of salt; mix these all together, having first beaten up the eggs; add to this last two cupfuls of squash, beat it all up until it is smooth; half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar makes it lighter, but if the mixture is well fried in small, thin cakes it is light enough as it is. Eat with powdered sugar.

String Beans.—String beans if well cooked, is a delicious summer dish. In the first place, plant or buy the right kind of beans; down with improvements in vegetables, and keep on using the rank beans whose tough threads suggest "strings." Cut them in small pieces and cook until tender, giving ample time, say an hour; when done turn off all the water in which they are cooked; let the kettle remain on the stove while you allow a large lump of butter to melt, then stir it in and put a little cream and pepper and salt in it. String beans may also be used as pickles; steam till tender, not soft, then turn hot vinegar over them; they will be ready for use after a day and night. They will not keep well, but must be used soon after pickling.

Dutch Rolches.—Honey-comb tripe is eight cents a pound. Take fresh tripe, cut it into square pieces and also cut into small bits pieces of flank of beef large enough to fill the tripe. Add a little fat with the lean beef, season with salt and pepper and sweet herbs and sew up in the pieces of tripe in round little balls. Put them in a pot of boiling water and boil slowly till you can pierce them with a straw. Skim off the fat, put a press on them while in the water, and let them stand till the next morning. Make a mixture of half the pot-liquor and half vinegar, cover them with it, and put them away in a stone jar, and when needed take from the liquor and cut in slices for supper.

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years, wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

Y. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this Popular Beverage Two Men Express their Minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic teetotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves, added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight schooner leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headache, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

There is a case of diphtheria in the family of Wm. McMullin, in Raisin.—The family were exposed from the cases in the Calhoun family, and we understand that they went to Calhoun's contrary to the advise of the physician, thinking they were better posted than the family physician as to what malady existed among the Calhoun children. The safe way in all such cases is to heed the doctors advice.

What is more delightful these beautiful summer mornings than to be up with the birds enjoying the rarest of nature's gifts—the balmy and healthful breezes. If you have a conveyance to take you for a sniff of the new mown hay, and a view in the morning dew, of the tall, ripening grain, you will find your early rise doubly pleasant, and will inwardly exclaim: "Oh! fields, Oh! woods, when, when, shall I be made the happy tenant of your shade."

Andrews' Bazar for August is by all odds the handsomest number ever published. It is evident that it has fallen into hands who know what the ladies want in a Fashion paper, and know how to publish it. Its low price (only $1 a year) places it within the reach of all, while its styles, stories and table of contents generally, compare very favorably with those of the high cost Foreign and American publications of its class. Published by the American Bazar Co., 202 Broadway, N. Y.

Just now, when southern military companies are returning to the northern troops who lost them, colors honorably captured on the battle field, as a token of the good feeling existing between the south and the north, wouldn't it be a graceful thing for northern holders of private property appropriated from southern homes to search out the rightful owners and make honest restitution. There are valuable books and family plate thus acquired, which might be returned in the same spirit as the southern boys in gray are returning to their northern brethren trophies of the late war for the union.

On Monday morning last while Mr. Joseph Russell was starting up his harvester and binder by some mishap got the little finger of the left hand caught in the gearing, badly crushing the same. Dr. Woodward amputated the unlucky member and Mr. Russell is now as comfortable as could be expected—minus a little finger.

Persons patronizing papers, please pay promptly; the pecuniary prospects of the press possess peculiar power in pushing public prosperity. Pay the printer promptly; if promptly paying patrons his pocketbook plenish, printer puts pen to paper in peace, paints pictures of passing phases pleasantly, and people peruse his paper pleasantly. Paste this piece of proverbial philosophy in a place to be perceived by all people.

Last Friday while little Ferry Gillman was driving a team and wagon with a load of hay through a gate way for his grandfather, Mr. John Hayward, the front wheels ran into a furrow, throwing Perry off the front of the load on to the ground by the horses heels, and one of the wheels striking him in the back of the head cut an ugly gash several inches long, triangular in shape, and nearly peeling the scalp off his head. Dr. Woodward was called and dressed the wound and the boy is now doing well.

Adrian Press: One Deerfielder lately wagered another, that a gray mare formerly owned in Deerfield could trot from the Deerfield hotel to Main street in this city, in an hour and five minutes, any time within a week.—The stakes were $400, and were put up. Then the man who bet against the horse became alarmed, and the next day slipped quietly over to Dundee, found the owner of the fast stepper, and bought her, and of course expected in that way to win $200 by preventing the race. It is more likely that he simply saved the $200 he had put up, and still it was a pretty sharp trick.

BINDER CONTEST.

A Large Crowd of People Present—Machine Men without Numbers—Minneapolis Takes the "Cake."

Last Monday without any just cause or provocation we started on the morning train for Clayton to see the Self Binder work in all its glory, and if possible to strike a crowd of farmers and machine men whose minds were the same on all subjects.

The contest was to be held on the farm of Ed. Baker, about three quarters of a mile from Clayton village. The Minneapolis, Deering and Esterly machines were on hand early in the morning, but the Dennet and Reliance did not show up, so nothing commenced until afternoon. During this time the farmers began to congregate, and as the crowd grew larger the festive machine man could talk the louder. Just imagine five distinct and separate crowds of binder men all congregated on one high land given full sway with plenty of material to work on; even the newspaper men had to fall back and wait till the binder men got busy with their machines before they could get a chance to put in a word. At 2 o'clock P. M. everything was announced ready for a start, and the Minneapolis machine started to cut around the worst piece of wheat that could possibly be found in the township of Hudson. The straw was heavy and green, and in many places flat on the ground. After the Minneapolis came the Deering, then the Esterly, Dennet and Reliance, and to speak plainly all of them seemed to do poor enough work, but it was simply a miracle that any of them could pick the wheat up in that condition. The Dennet got stalled badly several times, and it was difficult for her to go at all on the lodged side. The Esterly did a little better, but the Reliance stalled and shipped her bundles on the home run. The Minneapolis tied a good bundle and cut a fairly close swath. The Deering made a trifle closer cut than the Minneapolis, but did not tie quite as good a bundle. Many farmers seemed to be great friends with the Deering while many seemed to hang close to the Minneapolis, and it is a mighty hard thing for a newspaper man to tell which machine did the best work. Both machines can do good work. We do not think a farmer came away from the trial prejudiced one way or the other. Mr. Baker decided to take the Minneapolis machine which gave the victory to the "Minnie," and we can heartily congratulate her, for she did the work splendidly. After the test was over the machines all moved across the lane and did splendid work in the straight, ripe grain, which seemed to ache to be cut. Towards evening the draughts of the machines were taken with the following results:

Deering, 600 lbs.
Dennet, " "
Esterly, 626½ "
Reliance, 633½ "

It was our intention to return on the local freight to Adrian and then take the passenger for home, but Stearns, of the Adrian Press, begged to be allowed to turn over "just one more bundle," until said local whistled and we were left—to some other day to take that local, if we wished to ride on that particular train.

Through the kindness of Mr. Will Schermerhorn of the Hudson Gazette we caught a ride to Hudson and enjoyed a very pleasant evening by his entertainment.

A NEW DIRECTORY.

We began last week the enterprise of getting up a directory for Tecumseh. It is several years since a publication of this kind has been issued here, and we believe the times are ripe for one now. The book will be a handsome pamphlet bound in cloth covers and will contain the names and residence of every family in the corporation, together with a historical sketch of the village, advertising pages, etc. Our canvassers were at work upon it last week and thus far they have met with very flattering success. We expect to complete the canvassing next week and the book will then be put through the press as rapidly as possible. In case any residences in the village are passed by the persons omitted will confer a favor by handing their names into the HERALD Counting Room. Omissions of this kind may possibly occur. The business men who wish to be represented by an advertisement will please hand in their notices at an early day in case the canvassers should fail to give them a personal call.

To the Public.

Heck's new Roller Mill is in full blast. We are now running our complete roller mill on full time and are now prepared to furnish the public with the best of both straight and patent flour. The only roller patent ever made in this county, and this process is given up by experts, that middlings reduce on rolls is far superior to mill stones. Every one wishing to examine our mill and see what we are doing and how we do it are invited to come and see us. We will be glad to show you through the mill.

TO SAND LAKE AND RETURN.

Last Tuesday was a model July day. Hitching up "Billy," before the family 'gig, we started out about nine o'clock A. M. in the direction of Sand Lake. The first halt was at Henry Haines', on the turnpike, where we found a double gang of hands haulting hay. Twenty-five loads were secured that day. The next stop was at L. E. Taylor's, in the Bridge Wells neighborhood, whom we found with his three boys making the best of time in the wheat field.

Noon found us at Electus Rundell's and as it would look impolite to refuse an invitation to dinner we were constrained to partake of Mrs. Rundell's prime graham bread and the other dishes of a substantial farmer's dinner. By the way, we believe the readers of the HERALD would like to see the receipt for that bread in these columns.

[illegible] day drawing in hay. Alden is at home this season. His time is mostly given to the celebrated trotter Seneca Chief.

Three miles more took us to Henry Lancaster. Henry is not running his hotel this summer, except when old acquaintances may request accommodations. He is taking life happily, having accumulated a competence from a successful business. We always enjoy a short visit at the Evans Lake house.

The Sand Lake House was next on the route, where we found the proprietor, C. H. Adam, at home, and the old air of cozy comfort about the house. Mr. Adam is now filling his large barn with hay, expecting to need it all during the summer. He has twenty good new boats on hand. The groves east and west of the house have been nicely cleared out for picnic parties, and he has all the room and accommodations necessary for entertaining all the guests that may come. This popular resort will be patronized more largely than ever this summer.

The next section of our journey extended from Adam's to Putnam's new hotel. On the road we overtook our friend Joe Kies, of Clinton, puffing along over the big hill east of Sand Lake. We took pity on him and took him to Putnam's also. He, with his family, are stopping a few days at their cottage on the north shore, near Adam's hotel. Of all the cottages on the lake we think his has the finest location. Arriving at Putnam's we found quite a company there, altho' not as large by any means as we expected to see on the big opening day. Adrian and Tecumseh were represented by good delegations from each town, but the farmers did not show up. It was too busy a time for them to go boating. The Adrian K. T. band furnished some of their choicest music at intervals during the day and the large collection of boats was well patronized. Mr. Putnam has a very convenient house, good stable accommodations and a nice grove handy by. He expects to receive his share of the patronage.

Our next mile post was at Richard Caldwell's, in Franklin, where we arrived just at tea time, and of course we couldn't refuse a cup of tea with our old neighbor. An excellent supper that just filled the place for it came very acceptable. Mr. Caldwell is nicely fixed, on a forty acre farm.—He enjoys raising wheat and turnips as well as he did making bureaus and chairs in the village. He has seventeen acres of beautiful wheat on the ground this year. The next section of the day's journey was the home stretch, where we arrived just at dark.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The ties were laid about half a mile west of Britton last Saturday, and a gang of Polanders is pushing the work of track laying this week.

Deerfield Record: A number of the directors and chief engineer of the Ohio & Michigan railway, were in town on Monday inspecting the different routes which have been surveyed from Britton to Toledo, by way of this village. The survey running by way of Corbus, appears to be the most favorable line, and will probably be adopted. The above route runs through the south western part of the corporation, and about one half mile from the business part of the village.

Toledo paper: Four Michigan & Ohio engineering forces are surveying different routes from Britton to Toledo. Two engineers from Marshall are in charge of two gangs. The company are anxious to get the route settled and commence the grading.

Last Saturday night about one hundred Italians were landed in Tecumseh to commence labor on the T. & M. railroad. Sunday afternoon thirty of them were taken to Britton to assist in the track laying, and the balance were taken Monday to a point about twenty miles west of the village.

Brooklyn Exponent: During the night preceding the 4th, some smart Alecks mixed machinery and agricultural tools belonging to different parties, hung a bunch of fence wire on the sign post in front of the Brooklyn House, and otherwise showed their superior wit and wisdom to the early riser of the next morning.

Tecumseh never looked more beautiful than at present, and to be appreciated should be seen in the lovely month of July. Just now it is at its best, and every day adds to its charms. Everybody appears to take more than usual interest in their surroundings, making them prettier than in former years; the streets are being improved in all parts of town, and we are already prude ourselves on the neatness and beauty of our little village; the lawns are clearly shaven, the houses neatly painted, and in fact everything wears an air of cleanliness and thrift, such as is seen in but few towns throughout the country.

On a warm day two townsmen meet upon the sidewalk and one remarks to the other, "It's hot." "Yes, terrible." Now supposing one of them had said instead, "This is Tecumseh," or, "this is Thursday," would it have been more ridiculous than the first remark? Both you see, are absurdly true. What can give a pleasanter impression of human nature than the men who pass each other in a drenching shower and remark pleasantly and simultaneously, "Wet?" But it is a habit of salutation that we all will continue to indulge. What, indeed, would loving but bashful swains do were not the weather a perennial subject for conversation?

Strength of Gibraltar.

Until you set foot on Gibraltar you can form no idea of its impregnability. Very probably its real strength cannot be seen from a ship in the bay. Only when you land do you find that the sea wall bristles with heavy guns and groans beneath piles of ball; only as you traverse its flank do you see how formidable breech-loaders peep from every available chink, and powerful mortars lurk behind every convenient embankment. And not until you penetrate the body of the rock do you get any just notion of the marvelous piece of military engineering exhibited in its "galleries." These are tunnels excavated from the solid rock, parallel to its outer side, but some thirty feet therefrom, and large enough to drive a carriage through. They are in two tiers and comprise a total length of nearly three miles. At every thirty feet, or so, along the inner galleries embrasures are cut, shaped like the ancient incommoding portholes through which the archers used to shoot at the foe, and through which look the spectator outside the rock like swallows' nest holes in the sea-cliff. These embrasures contain heavy guns, always standing ready for action, with powder-magazines hard by. From the portholes [illegible] the bay and the Spanish country are obtained. Out of these, on the north side, you look down upon a half-sandy, half-grassy flat, perhaps half a mile long and as wide or wider, connecting the rock with the main land, and separating the bay from the Mediterranean. Two lines of sentry boxes, one at the rock end the other at the distant end, mark the boundaries of British and Spanish land, and between these lines in the "neutral ground." The guns of the quarried embrasures, and those hidden cannon that stud the western and southern slopes of the rock, cover the neighboring Spanish land, the whole of the bay and the straits, and the strengthening work is ever going on by the fortification of new points that from time to time appear vulnerable. The eastern side of the rock requires no protection; it is a forbidding wall, with a great sand slope in one place, but with no foothold for anything more than a few fishermen's huts near the water's edge.—London Telegraph.

Fashionable Calls.

"I've heard she gave $300 for that group. I'd just as soon have a chromo, would you?"

"H-u-s-h!"

"And just look at that center table—looks like a fancy fair, for all the world; one would think——"

"H-u-s-h, she's coming."

(Enter lady of the house.)

"Oh, you dear, darling creatures! What an age since I've seen you. Where have you been? Enjoying the holidays, no doubt. I'm so glad to see you both!"

(Together:) "And we are so glad to see you! How perfectly sweet you do look! What have you been doing to yourself? Oh, it's that lovely new dress! so becoming! but then you look well in every thing!"

"Oh! oh! Who's got a new sealskin cloak? Dear Mrs. Smith, I just envy you; it's a b-e-a-u-ti-ful thing!"

Mrs. Smith; "Well, it ought to be; James gave $125 for it."

"Yes! but that's nothing for Colonel Smith, you know! How is he? I do admire the colonel so much! But then he never looks at any one but you."

"Oh, yes! make me believe that! He is a regular old flirt! But I can easily forgive him for everything since he's got me this cloak. Well, we really must go—ever so many more calls to make. Now, return this soon; there's a darling. By-by, sweetness."

(Lady of the house to next caller:)

"Yes, that Mrs. Colonel Smith and her sister—what a dowdy that sister is!—did call here, and, do you believe, she had the impudence to tell me—me—that her husband gave $125 for that shabby old sealskin, as if I didn't know exactly what it was worth! He'd much better pay his debts," etc., etc.—Detroit Free Opinion.

The Newspaper Reporter.

The Printer's Circular, in an article upon newspapers and reporters, remarks:

"We owe not a little of the pleasures we derive from newspapers to the exertions of the reporters. The editor may elaborate and comment upon the news of the day, but the intelligent reader, if in possession of the same facts, is quite able to do this for himself. The most popular newspapers, other things being equal, are those which employ the best reporters, the largest number of them, and which allow them the largest liberty. It is a hard liberty. It is a hard life and full of real drudgery, yet there is a sort of liberty attached to it, which, combined as it is with the severest discipline, gives the business its attractions, while preparing the incumbents for higher positions. It is by this reportorial experience that the editor learns how to come near the public, and how to find just what is the opinion of the people and, if he is wise, he will bear in mind this part of his professional life. The reporter is often pointed in his observations, sharp, shrewd, and at times sarcastic. It could hardly be otherwise. No class of men come into such close contact with all other classes, and none see so clearly and near at hand the shams and follies of the times. None are therefore better able to hold the mirror up to nature. He is sometimes a little severe in noting the follies of the day; but does he not know, after all, that readers generally apply the sarcastic remarks to others, and rest content or touches for themselves?"

PERILOUS COMPLIMENT.—Edwin Booth says that the most genuine compliment he ever received was on the occasion of his playing Iago for the first time at Grass Valley, Cal., then a new mining camp. The audience, who had not seen a play for years, were so much incensed at his apparent villainy that they pulled out their "shooters" in the middle of the third act, and began blazing away at the stage. Othello had the tip of his nose shot off at the first volley, and Mr. Booth only escaped by rolling over and over up the stage and disappearing through a trap door. A speech from the manager somewhat calmed the house; but even then Mr. Booth thought it best to pass the night in the theater, as a number of the most elevated spectators were making strenuous efforts to induce the Vigilance Committee to lynch "the infernal sneaking cuss."

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters, as it is not a whiskey drink. It is more like the old-fashioned bone-set tea that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right, try Hop Bitters.—Nunda News.

A Wonderful Telescope.

The San Francisco Call tells an extraordinary story respecting a monster telescope made by Professors Lefevre and Longtour, French scientists, and erected at San Francisco. The lenses are twenty feet in diameter, and this is what happened when the astronomers and their friends turned the instrument to the heavens: "M. Dufrere was the first to apply his eye to the eyepiece of the telescope. For fully five minutes he looked on in speechless amazement, then, without a word, turned away to hide his emotion. One by one the gentlemen present tested the telescope, exhibiting their astonishment in various ways. The planet which happened to cast its beams upon the great speculum was Mars, and the revelation is too wonderful for credit. The eye-piece of the lowest magnifying power was first placed on, when the planet presented a most astounding sight. The powerful lens brought the surface of the planet nearer than that of the moon has ever been brought by the most powerful telescope. The green of the sea was brought out in unmistakable color, and one could almost imagine that he could see the waves upon the surface. There before the eye was spread out a splendid panorama of hill and dale, dark yellowish patches that looked like autumn fields, silvery threads that must be rivers, and unmistakable volcanoes in action.

How Life of German Girls.

Their life is far different from that of American girls, and we could hardly fancy anything more prosy than the home life of the high and well born German girl. They are educated precisely alike, the range of study being limited. The common branches, French, sometimes English, and a few small ornamental accomplishments, comprise the list. The statement that American girls study the the sciences and sometimes Greek and Latin causes from them manifestations of surprise. The traditions and prejudices of their class are carefully inculcated. Any woman who does not think or act in opposition to the conventional standard is looked upon with a distrust. But their domestic education is carefully attended to; whatever their rank they must master all branches and steps of housekeeping. Their wedding trousseau and outfit in bed and table linen is generous in quantity and beautiful in texture, and usually made up by their own willing hands. An engagement with them is as solemn and binding as a marriage contract, and unfaithfulness in either sex is an exception that meets hearty condemnation. Their simpleness and quietness of life is a reproach to the lives of most of the idle, ease-loving girls of many other countries.

Polishing Furniture.

To clean furniture, especially the surfaces of a finely-polished piano, we will give our lady friends a recipe better than any in the books. Take a wash-bowl half full of tepid water and a little fine toilet soap and a tablespoonful of sweet oil. Dip a piece of old flannel in this, and apply it to the furniture or piano, rubbing vigorously for a while; then exchange the flannel for a piece of old soft fine cotton, (not linen, as that leaves its fibers of lint) and rub with this a while, finishing with a fresh piece of the same rag, until the liquid application is thoroughly removed. All these successive applications to be made to one particular spot of the wood no larger than can be worked with a single stroke of the arm, and that to be finished before a fresh place is treated. When the whole piano has been gone over in this manner, (it should take two hours at least, to do it well,) it will look as good as new, and far better than if refinished by an ordinary workman. This is the best application for that purple cloud that comes on a polished wood surface in damp weather. Of course, a judicious person will be very sparing of the liquid, although she has a washbowl half full of it, and will not use enough to drip on the carpet, or penetrate to the interior of the piano.

An Old Maid's Consolation.

The writer rallied a young lady friend some time ago, and chaffed her upon being an "old maid." She replied: I am now past thirty: I have a good name. I have been bridesmaid a score of times. I ask myself with which one of the beautiful girls that I have seen take the marriage vow would I exchange lots to-day? Not one. Some are living apart from their husbands; some are divorced; some are now the wives of drunken men; some are hanging upon the ragged edge of society, endeavoring to keep up appearances; some are toiling to educate and support their children, and these are the least miserable; some tread the narrow line beyond the boundary of which lies the mysterious land, and some have gone out into its darkness and unknown horrors, and some are dead. A few there are who are loved and honored wives and mothers, with happy homes; but, alas! only a very few.—The Parisian.

You are to be pitied if you cannot find your first and greatest happiness at home. There is where you should find it. The independence that comes to a man when his day's work is over and he feels that he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family, is something real. It does not make so much difference whether you own your house or whether you have one little room in that house; you can make that room a true home to you. You can people it with such sweet fancies that it will be fairly luminous with your presence, and it will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none should ever transgress. It should be the place to find true love and courtesy.

Iowa heard from.

W. L. Rose, of Border Plains, Iowa, writes, Coe's Dyspepsia Cure cannot be recommended too highly. I have taken the medicine for a number of years at different times. My son-in-law has had very poor health for a long time, and this winter I persuaded him to try Coe's Dyspepsia Cure. He is now on the second bottle, and says it has done him more good than anything he has ever had before. Please let us know your lowest price by the dozen, as we use a good deal of it.

Tanner's German Ointment.

Has been found to cure so many things that if we were to enumerate them all here our statement would hardly be believed. For all sores, wounds, bruises, lameness, &c., it is a sovereign specific.

Mrs. M. G. Baldwin writes: "I burned my arm badly, your Ointment was applied immediately and I never felt any pain; in a few days was entirely well without using any other remedy and I would like to recommend it as invaluable in every family."

Blotting Paper.

It may not be known that blotting paper is an important article of commerce. It is, and is called one of the staples of the paper trade. Large manufactories are devoted exclusively to its production. The demand is always good, and subject to little variation. When paper stock advanced under the influence of the boom, the price of blotting paper went up with the rest, that is, advanced about twenty per centum. Prices have declined little since, for, like the prices of other things, it was easy to get them up, but very difficult to get them down. The sale of blotters is very large, but it would be larger if insurance and other companies did not scatter so many advertising blotters. Blotting paper is of comparatively recent origin. It is not many years since blotting sand was an article of foreign export, and domestic use. Foreign sand came from the Mediterranean, but Block Island beaches supplied Rhode Island. Some of the merchants of to-day remember when, as clerks in stationery stores, they occupied leisure hours and rainy days in putting into convenient packages blotting sand that came over three thousand miles in the hold of sailing vessels, pointed shallops that plough the main very little now-a-days. The use of blotting sand led to the manufacture of sand-sifters, which in itself was an industry of some magnitude. A piece of paper has displaced them, sand and all.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

Education in Prussia.

Education in Prussia is general and compulsory. Every town, or community in town or county, must maintain a school supported by the taxes, and administered by the local authorities, who are elected by the citizens. All parents are compelled to send their children to one of these elementary schools, whether they can pay the school fees or not. The cost per week in the country, five cents per month in town, is thus raised goes toward [illegible] the schools, and any deficiency made up from local taxes. No compulsion exists in reference to a higher educational institution than elementary schools, but parents who send more than one child to any school supported by the community have a reduction made in charge, and a limited number of pupils whose parents cannot afford to pay the full rate enjoy either this reduction or are admitted entirely free, at the discretion of the authorities. The whole of the educational establishments public and private, are under the direct control of the minister of public instruction and ecclesiastical affairs, with a local supervision in every province. They prescribe a general system of instruction and discipline, the proper selection of books, examinations, and appointment of teachers.

American Locomotives.

Mr. B. M. Brereton, an English engineer, draws the following comparison between American and English locomotives:

"I argue that the greater duty done by the American motor is due to the better design and the better system of working the locomotives. The American builder excels in the system of framing and counterbalancing, and in the designs of crank axles, etc., so that the engine may run remarkably easy and without jar round sharp curves, and work not only the light roads, but also diminish the wear and tear on the solid roads, and at the same time increase the effective tractive force. The English engine is a very heavy affair, and in running it not only wears and tears itself very rapidly, but also the roadway, and it greatly, by its unsteadiness and jar, fatigues the drivers and firemen. I have ridden hundreds of miles on engines in India, in England, in France, and in the United States, and I have always found the American engine most easy and comfortable, but I never did the English or the Continental engines. It is almost impossible to give these engines their full hauling power, simply because the greater portion of the weight cannot be thrown on the driving wheels."

A cotemporary says: "There is no reason why farming may not be made to pay much oftener than it does. Very few have learned to regard it as a business. It is a sort of chance work all round. Most men look on it as a sort of real estate transaction. They hope to sell out at a big figure; hence are afraid to improve their farms with a view to agricultural operations, for fear that whoever buys the land will not care for these little things. We have often heard some improving farmer ridiculed for his expenditures by knowing ones who were very sure so-and-so would get no more for his place than if he had burned his money.

A Virginian writes in praise of corn not only as the best food for laboring men, but for domestic animals of all kinds. He states that the usual ration for a negro laborer, for a week, is one and a half pecks of corn, three pounds of bacon, and a little molasses. They thrive on it and are healthy and strong. Southern horses and mules, as a rule, have only corn for grain, but they live longer and do more work than northern horses that feed on oats. In that part of the country dogs are fed almost exclusively on corn meal, and they not unfrequently eat corn in the ear, while wandering cows devour it on the stalk. Even cats eat corn meal stirred up with water, as is done in the case of chicken feed.

A Dead City.

St. Joseph, Fla., was at one time a busy seaport, had a railroad to Iola, on the Apalachicola, shipped cotton to the extent of hundreds of thousands of bales annually, and was the entrepot of supplies for western Florida, southern Georgia, and north-eastern Alabama. Railroads from the Mississippi to the Atlantic at length deprived it of its commerce and made its own railroad worthless. The track was taken up and used elsewhere. The inhabitants gradually abandoned their homes. Yellow fever visited those who remained, and the living were unable to bury the dead. What few escaped fled, and not a soul was left to claim property or home. A tornado completed the ruin. Every house was leveled to the ground, and to-day there is not a chimney to mark the spot where no long ago stood a busy little city.

Startling Discovery.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all throat and lung diseases is daily curing patients that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best physicians using it in their practice. Trial bottles free. Regular size $1.

The columns of a paper are the publisher's stock in trade, and the parties who ask to use them for their special benefit must expect to pay for the same. Every public spirited citizen of a place should have a pride in seeing his town and surroundings improve; every new house, every new road, every new manufacturing establishment erected, every new business opened enhances the value of property in our midst. Every reflecting mind knows this to be true, and it should not be forgotten that the local newspaper adds much to the general wealth and prosperity of the place, as well as increases the reputation of the town abroad. It benefits all who have business in the place; enhances the value of property besides being a desirable public convenience, even if not conducted in the interests of either political power. It increases trade, it cautions against imposition, it saves you from loss, it warns you from danger, it points out different advantages, and increases your profits. The local press is the power that moves the people; therefore support it by advertising in it liberally, subscribing for it and paying it.

An old Latin manuscript of the times of Henry VIII. [illegible] an account of certain days allowed to be unlucky. It says, "These are evil days according to old philosophers amongst the Greeks.—For if on any of those days a child be born, it shall die soon; if any one falls ill, he shall never get well; if any one undertakes a long journey, he shall never return; if any one marry he shall soon be separated from his wife, or else they shall live together in the greatest misery; and if any one commence a great undertaking, he shall never attain the desired end." The unlucky days are then enumerated as follows: January, 1, 2, 4, 5, 9, 11 and 20. February 7. May 15 and 17. June 6. July 15 and 19. August 19 and 20. September 16 and 17. October 6. November 11 and 17. December 6, 7 and 9.

As when She was Young.

"I have used Parker's Hair Balsam and like it better than any similar preparation I know of," writes Mrs. Ellen Perry, of Colebrook Springs, Mass. "My hair was almost entirely gray, but a dollar bottle of the Balsam has restored the softness, and the brown color it had when I was young—not a single gray hair left. Since I began applying the Balsam my hair has stopped falling out, and I find that it is a perfectly harmless and agreeable dressing."

DR. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates for every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

ORANGES AND FLORIDA.

Better than Breezes and Blossoms—Under a New Flag.

Even the balmy air and orange groves of Florida fail to keep its people full of happiness and comfort. Art must help nature everywhere—in the tropics as among the pines of the North. "And chief among the blessings which are adapted to all zones," writes Dr. J. G. Wallace, of Fort Dade, Fla., "is Fisher's tonic. It seems to have the world for a field, and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seems to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved my personality of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purifier and invigorator."

Messrs. Hiscox & Co., call special attention to the fact that after April 1st, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply Parker's Tonic. The word "Ginger" is dropped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic, we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

WORDS FAIL. Words fail to express my gratitude to you sir, for the benefits derived from
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
SELBY CARTER, of Nashville, Tenn., writes: Having been afflicted with a severe scrofula, my system became so reduced that I became covered with Blotches, Boils and Sores, all over my body. After using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA for a short time, I was thinking its use long enough to warrant a return of the scrofulous symptoms.
All humor, whether of the blood or skin, promptly yielded to the medicinal alterative.

Elimination.

Our bodies are in a state of incessant waste and repair. At countless millions of points old material is being used up, and instantly replaced by new material, that is as instantly cast aside.

For this reason it is true not only that one's body is wholly changed every year, but that it is not the same at two successive moments. Hence the importance of eliminating organs, to drain off this dead matter.

Arterial blood furnishes all the new material, while the old is carried away in the veins, from which, it having been eliminated, the residue returns to the heart purified for further use.

The eliminating organs are lungs, liver, kidneys and skin. The lungs eliminate carbonic acid, the most abundant of all the waste; the liver, cholestrine—waste of the brain and nerves; the kidneys, the waste of the muscles; the skin, more or less of the carbon, but especially the salts of the system.

If any eliminating organ is inactive or disordered so as to render it unable to perform its office properly, the effete matter is left in the blood, to accumulate in the circulation, except that some one or more of the other eliminating organs come to the help of the former.

The skin often does so much of this vicarious work that a single glance at the diseased man's face will sometimes enable the physician to know what eliminating organ is diseased or torpid.

Old Age.

The brain in old persons, at the age of 70, diminishes both in bulk and density, and thus becomes lighter. Its capacity for continuous hard work is thereby lessened as really as is that of the body for muscular labor.

As an old man, however, has the accumulated knowledge, skill and practical experience of almost a lifetime, and that wonderful facility which comes of habit, he may, with good health and care, do much of his best work in the neighborhood, say, of 80.

He cannot bear mental strain, and he must not attempt mental "spurts," but he can still show himself a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Since, however, the brain is not so firmly supported by the skull, and is slighter in texture, the blood vessels are more easily dilated or ruptured. The danger of paralysis and apoplexy is still further increased, because the blood vessels become in old age more or less ossified and brittle, and thus unable to sustain a sudden rush of blood.

The aged should carefully abstain from every form of violent action, and, indeed, from every violent emotion. The full term of toil, whether in rearing and supporting children or in the service of the public earns a right to what is the normal physiological condition of age—freedom from all that annoys, perplexes, harasses, excites and burdens.—Youth's Companion.

A New Theory About Food.

A German physician maintains that both the vegetarians and the meat eaters are on the wrong track. Vegetables are not more wholesome than meat nor meat than vegetables, and nothing is gained by consuming a pound of both. Whatever nutritive qualities they may possess, he says, are destroyed in a great measure, and often, by the process of cooking. All food should be eaten raw. If this practice were adopted there would be little or no illness among human beings. They would live their apportioned time and simply fade away, like animals in a wild state, from old age. Let those affected with gout, rheumatism, and indigestion, try for a time the effect of a simple, uncooked diet, such as oysters and fruit for instance, and they will find all medicine unnecessary and such a rapid improvement of their health that they will forswear all cooked articles of food at once and forever. Intemperance would also, it is urged, no longer be the curse of civilized communities. The yearning for drink is caused by the unnatural abstraction from what are termed "solids" of the aqueous element they contain—uncooked beef, for example, containing from 70 to 80 per cent., and some vegetables even a larger proportion of water. There would be less thirst, and consequently less desire to drink if our food were consumed in its natural state without first being subjected to the action of fire.

Fill Out the Blanks.

To lose by one's own ignorance or carelessness is more mortifying than to lose by another's dishonesty. It is certainly aggravating enough to lose by both. To illustrate how little the law will help a person who does not know how to do business, and to show the importance of small details, a New York Journal cites an actual case:

"A man drew a note promising to pay one hundred dollars. He used a printed form, and did not close up the blank devoted to dollars, and after passing it as negotiable paper, somebody inserted 'and fifty' after the one hundred, and before the printed dollars.

The note, thus altered, got into the hands of an innocent party, who presented it to the drawer, and the Supreme Court decided the maker of the note was liable for its face, because through negligence he did not draw a line between the word 'hundred,' and the printed word 'dollars.'

Any testimony that the drawer might offer to establish the fact that he gave the note for one hundred dollars, must go for nothing, as there was nothing on the face of the note showing that it had been altered.

Evidence of any alteration on the face of the note, would have changed the case. Let this be a lesson to all drawers of promissory notes. No one can be too careful in such matters."

Seipio, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1879.
I am the pastor of the Baptist Church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has become thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

"Well, miss, said a knight of the birch rod, "can you decline a kiss?" "Yes, sir," said the girl, dropping a perplexed courtesy, "I can, but I hate to."

The best thing for the complexion is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It brings the bloom of health to the wan cheek.

Carolina's Sweet Sixteen.

A curious petition was that addressed in 1733 to the governor of South Carolina by sixteen maidens of Charleston. It ran thus: "The humble petition of all the maids whose names are underwritten. Whereas, we, the humble petitioners, are at present in a very melancholy disposition of mind, considering how all the bachelors are blindly captivated by widows, and our own youthful charms thereby neglected; in consequence of this, our request is that your excellency will for the future order that no widows presume to marry any young man till the maids are provided for; or else to pay each of them a fine for satisfaction for invading our liberties, and likewise a fine to be levied on all such bachelors as shall be married to widows.

The great disadvantage it is to us maids is that the widows, by their forward carriage, do snap up the young men, and have the vanity to think their merits beyond ours, which is a great imposition on us, who ought to have preference. This is humbly recommended to your excellency's consideration, and hope you will permit no further injury, and we good maids in duty bound, will ever pray." The forlorn sixteen would have approved the edict of the Portuguese king, which forbade widows more than fifty years old from remarrying, on the ground that experience taught that widows of that age commonly wedded young men of no property, who dissipated the fortunes such marriages brought them to the prejudice of children and other relatives.

How to Succeed.

The first requisite to success is not to undertake an unwise and impracticable thing. For this reason the advice often inculcated by wise and great men has been to give much time and reflection to the formation of plans. Be slow to decide; but, having resolved, be prompt to act.

It is not sufficient, by any means, to be prompt in beginning to act. This is easy to every one. It is the continued, persevering, unflagging activity which, alone, accomplishes great results.

The temptations which beset one's steps at every stage to deliver his attention from the main pursuit he has fixed on are almost innumerable, and to the irresolute and weak they are found irresistible. This accounts for numerous failures.

If a man has not attained to what he started for it will almost always be found that he has been attending to something else. The song of the bird by the wayside fell upon his ear and charmed his eye, and he lingered when his pace should have been onward and firm and quick.

If you would insure success in your undertaking, whatever it may be, let nothing divert your attention from it. Leave nothing undone, no matter how seemingly little and unimportant it may be, which is calculated to promote its accomplishment. There is no other way to make success certain. It is not luck. It depends on doing doing, DOING.

Yet simple as the lesson of success is—few as are its requisites—there is nothing that people are slower to learn.

Small Trees.

Nurserymen usually describe trees on their catalogues as "second class," "medium," "first class" and "extra." The difference in these classes is principally, if not wholly, in the size and height of the trees; and as most farmers desire the best, they suppose that the large "extra" trees merit that description, and hence order them. The fact is, however, that a small tree will grow faster and (if a fruit tree) come into bearing condition sooner than a large one; and, as the New England Homestead states, in half a dozen years the tree that was planted when small will be larger and finer than the other. The larger the tree, the larger the roots which it has, and the larger the roots, the less fibers there will be upon them. A tree that has plenty of fibrous roots will grow readily if proper care is used in it stransplantation; but no amount of skill can coax a tree to live and flourish which is destitute of these little fibers. The roots of large trees are always more or less mutilated in the process of taking up, while small trees sustain little injury from this source. Dealers in trees assert that experienced men buy small, thrifty trees, while those who are just starting are anxious for the largest to be had. Those who wish to set out trees will do well to learn from the experience of those who, at considerable loss to themselves, have demonstrated that small trees are the ones to buy.

Beecher's Bad Head.

For two months in the year Henry Ward Beecher can't preach. In August and September he takes his vacation and endures the onset of the hay fever. And it is, so he says, something terrible and tremendous. A man with hay fever isn't accountable for his actions. He is merely a wild beast—frantic with snuffing, sneezing and headache. His eyes are red and his nose. Every nerve in his skull thrills with distress and his head is a fountain of tears. He lives only to fly from seaside to mountaintop in search of relief.

And yet, whether we call this form of Catarrh hay-fever, rose fever, hay-cold or rose-cold, Ely's Cream Balm will cure it. This remedy is simple, pleasant and easy of application. Placed in the nostrils it penetrates and soothes the affected parts at once, restores the impaired senses and creates healthy secretions in cases of the longest standing. You cannot run away from hay fever, but you can drive it from you by using Ely's Cream Balm.

Tramping all day through bush and brier, fighting flies and mosquitoes and branches that tangle the line, and snags that break the hook, and returning home late and hungry, with wet feet and a string of speckled trout on a willow twig—this is pure happiness, the like of which a boy will never have again.—C. Dudley Warner.

Rheumatic Syrup Co.:
Gents—For the benefit of those who may be suffering from rheumatism, I make the following statement in relation to your Rheumatic Syrup: I had been suffering severely for six weeks with rheumatism all through my whole body. Spent many sleepless nights, for I could not turn myself in bed, nor raise my hands to my head. My wrists were so swollen I could not bend them without causing terrible pain, when I was persuaded by a friend to try your Rheumatic Syrup. Have been taking it three weeks and find myself able to be up and around the house, and improving so rapidly that I feel as if I could safely recommend it to all those so afflicted.
Yours respectfully,
Miss A. E. Goodell.

A Lost Note.

In 1746, a director of the Bank of England lost a £30,000 bank note, which he was persuaded had fallen from the chimney piece of his room into the fire. The bank directors gave the loser a second bill, upon his agreement to restore the first bill should it ever be found, or pay the money if presented by any stranger. "About thirty years afterwards," says Mr. Francis, "the director having been long dead, and his heirs in possession of his fortune, an unknown person presented the lost bill at the bank, and demanded payment. It was in vain that they incitigated to this person the transaction by which that bill was annulled; he would not listen to it; he maintained that it had come to him from abroad, and insisted upon immediate payment. The note was payable to bearer and the £30,000 were paid him. The heirs of the director would not listen to demands for restitution; and the bank was obliged to sustain the loss. It was discovered afterward that an architect having purchased the director's house, had taken it down, in order to build another on the same spot, and found the note in the recess of the chimney, and had made his discovery an engine for robbing the bank."

How to Keep Your Friends

In the first place, don't be too exacting. If your friend doesn't come to see you as often as you wish, or if she is dilatory about answering your letters, don't make up your mind at once that she has grown cold or indifferent, and above all, don't overwhelm her with reproaches. Rest assured that there is no more certain way of killing a friendship than by exactions and upbraidings.

It is quite possible that you friend may have other duties and engagements whose performance employs the very time you would claim, and instead of being neglected you are only waiting your turn. Perhaps she comes to you in her rare intervals of leisure to be rested and cheered and helped by your affection and sympathy. But is she likely, to find cheer and comfort in your society if you meet her with doubt or coldness, or with a sense of injury, and insist on a full account of how she has spent her time, and whether she could not possibly have come before?

In nine cases out of ten she will go away feeling that she is injured by what you consider affection, and that your friendship is a trouble rather than a help.

Household Hints.

A clam shell is more convenient for scraping kettles and frying pans than a knife. It does the work in less time.

When washing fine laces do not use starch at all; in the last water in which they are rinsed, put a little fine white sugar, dissolve it thoroughly, and the result will be pleasing.

After the lamps are filled and the chimneys washed and put on the shelf, take pieces of newspaper and roll in the form of a chimney and slip over chimney and lamp; it will protect it from dust and flies, and when the lamps are lighted, one will be rewarded by seeing them as clear and bright as when first put in order.

A teaspoonful or more of powdered borax thrown into the bath-tub while bathing will communicate a velvety softness to the water, and at the same time invigorate and rest the bather. Persons troubled with nervousness or wakefulness at night will find this kind of bath a great benefit.

Bonaparte died in his military grade, his field-marshal's uniform and his boots, which he had ordered to be put on a short time previous to his dissolution. Augustus Cæsar chose to die in standing position, and was careful in arranging his person and dress for the occasion. Siward, Earl of Northumberland, when at the point of death, quitted his bed, put on his armour saying that "it became not a man to die like a beast." A more remarkable instance is that of Marie Theresa, of Austria, who, a short time before she breathed her last, having fallen into a slight slumber, one of the ladies in attendance remarked that her majesty seemed to be asleep. "No," said she, "I could sleep if I would indulge in repose, but I am sensible of the near approach of death, and I will not allow myself to be surprised by him in my sleep. I wish to meet my dissolution awake." Such are the efforts of poor expiring mortality—still clinging to earth—still laboring for the breath of prosperity, and endeavoring to cope with inexorable fate.

Agnosticism.

A correspondent writes entreating us to expose his name, but to let him know "what under the sun the agnosticism and the agnostics," so often mentioned in the debates of the Pan-Presbyterian Council in Philadelphia, really may be. Our correspondent need not be ashamed of his query. Prof. Huxley claims to have been the first to apply these terms, formerly used to designate a branch of the Deists or early times, to the doctrines and the "doctrinaries" now so designated. Agnostics are persons who refuse either to affirm or deny, or accept upon authority the doctrine of the existence of a God, the immortality of the soul, and in general, anything in the theology, psychology or metaphysics the existence of which cannot be scientifically proved or disproved. They are scientifically "know-nothings" in regard to such matters, and since they will neither affirm or deny, they are, or should be, insufferable to them. In practice, however, these anti-believers and anti-models are apt to be as hot as if they were baptised Christians or rank heathen.

[Agnosticism and agnostics are defined substantially as above in the supplement to the latest edition of Webster's Dictionary.—New York Times.

A Cure for Diphtheria

Among the ten thousand or more cures, for this dreaded disease, or supposed cures, the following is said to have been tested in many cases, and to have resulted well. It may be well to remember it. A mother of six children recommends this following remedy as an almost unfailing cure for that dreadful, malady, diphtheria. All of her children have been afflicted with the disease. She says: "Take a slice of fat pork,—side meat—the older the better; sew it on a soft piece of flannel; then saturate it with kerosene oil. Place it on the neck, having the meat reach from ear to ear. After pounding several raw onions into a poultice, place enough of the same into the patient's stockings to cover the soles of the feet, and have the patient put the stockings on. The poultice must be warm. In order not to chill the patient. The throat should then be gargled with some tomato catsup, strong with red pepper; salt and vinegar shaken well together, will do. If vomiting occurs, lime-water purchased at a drug store, with directions, should be given. Be sure to cause an irritation of the neck."

Don't Allow Talent to Rust.

As by constant friction steel is kept highly polished, so by constant exercise is talent ever at its brightest. All our powers grow by use. If we neglect to cultivate the habit of observation, we might as well walk through the world blindfolded.

We lose our faculty—what artists call our "touch"—by neglect of practice on other things besides the piano. The man who seldom reads read slowly; the woman whose writing is confined to an infrequent letter to some absent child, spends more time over that than does a practiced writer over a dozen pages of manuscript. Exercise of possessed talent is absolutely necessary, then, if we would retain our gifts.

For example: If our occupation is sedentary, we ought to plan for walks, rides and active games, to keep our muscles lithe and serviceable. But if our calling does give us enough muscular action, it is not one which lies in the path to our health is likely, that we should plan for mental exercise—intellectual enough of memory and our reasoning powers to keep them in the most healthy and unhealthy one that does not provide exercise for our spiritual faculties—for worship and charity and patience and magnanimity.

Exercise of soul, mind, and body can alone bring us to the stature of the perfect man.

In the reign of Edward III a knight held some land at Cukeney, in Nottinghamshire, free of rent during the reign of the king, on condition of his shoeing the king's pottingy or saddle horse, on each foot with the king's nails and materials; but if he lame it he was to give the king another one worth four marks. The Knight of Cukeney attended at the king's stables to perform his duty, when one of the monarch's farriers offered to instruct him how to do it; but in order to save his purse he declined the offer, consequently, by his ignorance he lamed the horse. This was repeated until he had to forfeit more marks than the value of the land, by which act of folly the word Cukeney became proverbial, even at court; and every stupid, ignorant citizen was called a Cukeney knight—afterwards changed to Cockney.

Since the introduction of the lawn mower the lawn has come to be regarded as the great feature of a garden. When it is well kept there is nothing more beautiful or pleasing than a broad, open space of turf and in the planting and arranging of trees it should be our endeavor to keep the lawn as open as possible. This can be accomplished by arranging the trees and shrubs in borders or belts around the margin, with a fine specimen tree occasionally standing alone in a prominent position, where its beauties can be seen to the best advantage.

A Splendid Remedy for Lung Diseases.

Dr. Robt. Newton, late President of the Eclectic College of the City of New York, and formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, says of Wm. Ward's Balsam very extensively used in his practice, as many of his patients testify, and restored to health by the use of this invaluable medicine, as many testify. He always said that such a remedy ought not to be considered merely as a patent medicine, but that it ought to be prescribed by every physician as a therapeutic agent in all cases of Lung Disease. It is a sure cure for Consumption, and is prepared by a gentleman of great experience. See circular.

Kellogg's Liniment.

We call the attention of the public to Kellogg's Liniment, one of the best preparations ever put up for all pain purposes for which a Liniment is used. Applied to the head it relieves headache and prevents the hair from falling out.

One of the simplest and best remedies to give to children if they are troubled with worms is poplar bark. A well-known physician has used this for years with marked success. It can be bought at any drug store. Take a little pinch of the bark about as much as one would naturally take upon the point of a penknife and give it before breakfast. It has a clean bitter taste, and there is no difficulty in getting a child to take it.

A Newspaper Editor.

O. M. Hedstom, Bloomville, Ohio, writes to explain: "Had that terrible disease catarrh for twenty years; could hardly smell, and hearing was failing. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured me. These facts are voluntarily given against a former prejudice of patent medicines."

In 1505 there was buried at Bengal, India, a man named Cugua, who claimed to be 350 years of age. The oldest person who died during the present century was a Frenchman, in Paris, named Jean Golenbski, who was 126 years old. A man named David Kurnison died in Chicago in 1871, who claimed to be 116 years old.

"Don't Hurry, Gentlemen."

Said a man on his way to be hanged. "Let me alone, I'll be no less, till I get there." When you feel dull, nervous, and constipated, don't hurry thoughtlessly for some remedy of doubtful merit, on promise of relief, when you can secure at the druggists Green's August Flower. Green's Bitters is a good cure to cure and return to health.

In building a chimney, put a quantity of salt into the mortar with which the intercourses of brick are to be laid. The effect is that there will never be any accumulation of soot in that chimney. The philosophy is thus stated: the salt in the portion of mortar which is exposed absorbs moisture from the atmosphere every damp day. The soot thus becoming damp, falls down in the fireplace. This is an English discovery. It is used with success in Canada.

My investigation of Allcock's Porous Plaster shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plasters. These ingredients are so proportioned that the Allcock's Porous Plaster will not cause blisters or excessive irritation, and I find it superior to and more efficient than any other plaster.

Rupture

We caution the public against an impostor who is definitely utilizing Dr. J. A. Sherman's long-reputation by distorting the likenesses of his patients, and generally counterfeiting the character of his Book, and publishing the same in pamphlet form and sending it out as Dr. F. T. Smythe's, representing the likenesses to be cases he has cured. This man Smythe is located in St. Louis, Mo., calls his rooms the "Vienna Institute." With the aim and deliberation of a counterfeiter of bank bills and coin, this man Smythe has set sail in the rupture business, with his shameless doings to personate these picture frauds and false statements of cure, hoping to escape detection and punishment.

Dr. J. A. Sherman's book with truthful photographic likenesses of patients and reliable statements from eminent gentlemen, is mailed for 10c. Office 251 Broadway, New York.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

L. B. Stephenson has his store, Ayres Bros. old stand, open with a full line of goods usually kept in a general store, and is ready to attend to the wants of all customers with neutrality.

Everybody goes to Sand Lake this season to see the new hotel at Ingham's landing.

C. H. Adam also has various attractions, among which was the Manchester band on Sunday last, and are expected again on August 5th.

C. L. Vaughn contemplates a trip to the White Mountains.

The late rains may perhaps give many farmers the blues, but remember you can sympathize with one another.

Jackson Ayers has a horse that one week ago would have been given away, which now could not be bought for $100.

Springville band are again to be heard among the echoes of the evening.

Humphrey Egan, Sr., is to be one of the giddy boys no more; he and his new wife can be found at the old homestead, as happy as can be.

Miss R. S. Mosher has a cousin, Mr. Maynard, of Hudson, to entertain this week.

Wm. Hand is finally building the new upright to Wm. Stephenson's house.

The new railroad station of this town is to be located on Granville Lyman's place.

J. H. Smith is to build another new barn for Ace Cure.

During the storm of last Sunday evening the lightning struck James Brighton's house. Shingles flew, chickens died, but Jim and family were unmolested.

BRITTON BUZZINGS.

Wheat nearly all cut in this vicinity.

Bad weather for haying.

The Pilbeam Bros. are putting up, and have it nearly completed, one of the largest barns in the township of Ridgeway, for Edmund Smith, 40x60 with 20 feet posts.

One of Britton's merchants is putting up a residence on South street.

Business is lively in Britton now.—The Y and side track and about half a mile of the M. & O. railroad is now laid.

A few Sabbaths ago was Children's Day at the Christian church, and all enjoyed the day very much. A collection for the mission fund amounted to $26.17. The church was nicely decorated.

One week ago last Sabbath the following Sabbath school officers were elected:

Supt.—Geo. L. Oliver.
Asst. Supt.—Mrs. D. Coryell.
Secretary—Miss Olive Oliver.
Asst. Sec.—Miss Olive Cheever.
Treas.—Wm. Nickerson.
Organist—Miss Olive Dubois.
Asst. Organist—Addie Underwood.

Mrs. William Allen is on the sick list, and has been for some time.

HOLLOWAY HICKUPS.

Wheat is nearly all cut.

The continued rain causes much anxiety among the farmers for the safety of their wheat and hay.

Holloway still increasing in population; a boy for Dr. Begel and one for W. Sofer.

Ed. Arner starts in a few days for York state.

C. A. Satterthwaite met with a severe accident last week. He has been in the employ of D.P. Anthony & Co., and was at the time of the accident near Rome Center, where he had just started a binder. Seeing some straw which had got into the machinery he reached in to pull it out and in some way his hand came in contact with the needle, which passed through his hand, breaking the bone to his fore finger. He is doing as well as can be expected.

Al. Hoxie is still improving.

A. J. Sutton, the operator at Holloway, has moved his family into the depot.

Mrs. Chatfield fell and broke her arm one day last week.

The following is the great Sun cholera mixture, which has stood the test of 40 years. Says the N. Y. Journal of commerce, no one who has this by him and takes it in time will ever have the cholera. Even when no cholera is anticipated it is an excellent thing for ordinary summer complaints, dysentery, etc. Take equal parts of tincture of cayenne, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint, and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose, fifteen to thirty drops in a wineglass of water, according to age and violence of the attack. Repeat every fifteen minutes until relief is obtained.

A COMMUNICATION.

EDITOR HERALD:

Dear Sir.—If you will allow me space in your columns for a few lines I would like to set my side of the case of Marshalship before your many readers, for I see in your last issue in the report of the Common Council, that a discussion arose between the worthy members and myself.

They [illegible] that I did not intend to make any return of any services performed by me as Marshal either in making monthly reports or in filing copies of notices or other papers served by me. That statement I wish to say emphatically is false. If that honorable body will look back all through my past record, and even in the first part of their report of July 2d they will find an itemized bill of labor performed by their orders and according to their corporation law, a regular fee charged and the several amounts make $7.50. This bill and report went to the finance committee and was allowed, and an order drawn for the same. Further they say in their report that I presented a petition signed by 75 of our citizens. Now I was not present at the meeting of July 9th, but will say that on that evening, just as the honorable body was convening, I was presented with a paper containing something to the action they were to take, and requested to hand it to Mr. Bresie on the street, and he presented it to the Council.

As to my refusal to do what I considered dirty work that is all correct. For when you try to compel me to hunt up horses and cows that may be tied to a hitching post in front of their owner's own premises, and because there is a corporation law that, no horses or cattle shall be hitched on the streets for the purpose of feeding, for me to go and untie that horse or cow and lead or drive the same to the village pound, is what I call dirty work. Then on Sunday I must be on guard around the mill ponds to see who may fire a gun at some stray duck. That too I consider dirty work. Again I must be the sly detective, behind some old barn, shed or house to watch all day Sunday for some violation of the liquor law, and see if in any way we can raise a disturbance and have a liquor suit on hand and pay a reward of $25 for information that will convict. Nor do I consider myself competent to fulfill the requirements of your corporation laws, wherein it says, "No fire ball, gun, or pistol shall be fired inside the corporation;" and when the bright spark of your Council orders me to enforce this law on the 4th of July, I say, No, sir, that cannot be done.

Now, to the honorable members of the Common Council of Tecumseh, I tender you my heartfelt thanks for your action in my removal, for now I am out and free from all the harassing cares that crowd upon any one who tries to do his duty manfully.

H. W. STEVENS,
Ex-Marshall.

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard,
One glance most kind
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if through all the livelong day
You've emitted no heart by yea or nay,
If through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace,
That brought thy sunshine to one face,
No act most small,
That helped some soul, and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

Where malice raves its worst of power.

"Stand like the anvil," when the bar
Jeers what it resists, groaning slat
Proud coils upon the forge its rest:
Stand like the anvil, close and fear
Are from of earth and the world

MRS. SMITHER'S INFATUATION.

NOT A LOVE STORY

To make home beautiful is a duty, Mrs. Smithers had always felt it to be so. She had, therefore, knit tidies, embroidered lamp-rugs, worked paper-racks and table-cloths, and filled the house with little womanly nick-nacks. Her husband, Mr. Smithers, was a solid, respectable man, who had made money in trade and could afford to spend it. He had no great artistic taste, and scarcely ever opened any book, except perhaps the Bible of a Sunday afternoon. It was an old habit his mother had taught him, and he generally got half through the psalm he selected before he fell asleep. He could not have told you the difference between the masterpiece of a great artist and an auction pot-boiler, but he had, from dealing in goods for a long while, acquired a certain appreciation of color in upholstery and carpets, and he liked to see things handsome about him. The house was full of soft, well-stuffed, puffy chairs and sofas, with comfortable, low seats; there were beds into which one sank as into a downy paradise; a splendid steam heater kept up a summer-like temperature all winter. The dining room table, with its big claw feet, was hospitality personified; the side-board, with curly carvings, held nice, round, silver water pitchers, tea-pots and jugs. On the mantel-pieces were the orthodox clocks, vases and bronzes. There were heavy cornices above the window-curtains, and they were looped back with massive cords and tassels. All was perfection—at least its owner believed it to be so; certainly it was comfortable and costly, and very showy.

"I like to come home to a home like this," Mr. Smithers used to say, rubbing his hands as he stood before the fire. "There is no nonsense about it."

So Mrs. Smithers thought herself, until she went one morning to an amateur lecture "On Taste in Furnishing." When the speaker, a red-haired young lady in a purple dress, without a wrinkle, like a pre-Raphaelite figure, had finished her lecture, of which not one word was original, poor Mrs. Smithers was in despair. Taste was evidently something she knew nothing about. She had been proud of her home; now she felt that she should be ashamed to let this purple young lady enter its doors.

How many things were wrong there—her carpets, her curtains, her doors, her mantel-pieces, her very chairs. Oh! if Mr. Smithers had but been there! What would he have said? But Mr. Smithers was away; he had gone a long while; would he learn while away that his house was all wrong? He might. Then it came like an inspiration to poor Mrs. Smithers that, as her dear Smithers never was "mean about money," she might make his house right before he returned home.

Mrs. Smithers, though she prided herself on her good taste, was not a literary woman, and fancied that the Terence Shook so often alluded to in the lecture was some upholsterer. Probably the purple young lady had her own house furnished and arranged by him.

Mrs. Smithers, on going home, looked in vain for this famous upholsterer in the directory. Finally, she ventured to ask a better informed friend, who Terence Shook was and where his "Earthly Paradise," that the purple young lady had spoken of, could be found.

Having received the revelation that the "Earthly Paradise" was a book, and in this the sayings so often quoted were to be found, Mrs. Smithers at once procured it from a bookseller and sat down to study it.

The result was such a house-cleaning as the world never saw before. Various strange men and women, all the servants, and Mrs. Smithers herself, toiled from morning until night for six weeks, and at length, on the very eve of her husband's return, Mrs. Smither's, delighted with her success, went through her home and declared it perfect.

And now a carriage drives up to the door, Mrs. Smithers flies down stairs and in a moment quite vanishes in the recesses of an enormous ulster. A trunk is bumped into the hall, a portmanteau follows; the door bangs, and Mr. Smithers looks about for his hat-rack with big mirror, round knobs, and solid umbrella stand. A long thin table, with a rail at either end meets the eye instead, flanked on either side by a rigid chair with a marble seat and marble slabs let into the bottom. The whole aspect of the house is altered: The heavy carpets and broad, silvered rods are taken up from hall and staircase. There is no sign of the register in the polished oaken floor. The heavy walnut banisters are gone, and replaced by spindly oak rails, each one conspicuously fastened by a brass rivet.

"What's the matter? Had a fire?" asks the bewildered gentleman. He doesn't look very much pleased; but Mrs. Smithers is confident of the effect of the parlors. She glides forward and draws back the portiers. There is no door now.

"You didn't tell me anything had happened," says Mr. Smithers. "Well, you shall have it all fixed up nicely again. What was it? Furnace flues evidently—the furnace isn't going. All your pretty carpets, too?" and he glances down at the expanse of polished oak, relieved by Turkish rugs, and stops before the mantel-piece. When he last saw it, it was of marble, carved elaborately. Now it was replaced by one of oak, which ran up to the ceiling in a series of shelves interspersed with small looking-glasses.

The place of Mr. Smither's jolly old naps and prim-looking mamma, which, in massive gold frames, had filled either recess had been banished. The portraits of the king and queen of the storks, on long panels, in inch-wide frames of oak and gold, filled their places. This was too much for Mr. Smithers. He fell into a long-legged Eastlake chair, which stood before a small wood-fire, perched upon a pair of tall brass andirons, and took his pocket handkerchief.

"I wouldn't have parted with pa and ma's pictures, now they are getting so old, for any money," said he, "tell me all about it, sis."

"Oh, the pictures are quite safe, Jeremiah," said Mrs. Smithers. "They're in the bed-room. There hasn't been any fire, but I thought our dear we were furnished all wrong, you taste shows it all, you know—and I went to a lecture, and I really felt ashamed," and here she paused to get things perfect, "there you cannot, don't you think I'm a dado is elegant."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Smithers, in a quiet tone, speaking soothingly, as he might to a baby.

"The border around the room you know," here Mrs. Smithers [illegible]

"Um," groaned Mr. Smithers, [illegible] thought it was a dado. We'll, where's the mantel-pieces?"

"Down cellar," replied Mrs. Smithers, with the dpors.

"Oh!" groaned Mr Smithers, "how hard those chairs are! I must walk about to rest myself a little. Are the chairs and sofa down cellar too?"

"No, I stored them," said Mrs Smithers.

After that the married pair walked about the house and looked at the improvements; but Mr Smithers never smiled.

"Don't you like it, my dear?" asked Mrs. Smithers, tenderingly.

"Very nice! very nice!" said Mr. Smithers, in a soothing tone.

"I'm sure it must be perfect," said Mrs. Smithers. "I've acted on Terence Shook's advice all the while."

"Eh?" cried Mr. Smithers, sharply. Then he added; "Don't get excited, my dear. Go to bed quietly and take a good rest, and you'll feel better to-morrow."

"I'm sure I'm very well, indeed, Jeremiah," said Mrs. Smithers.

"But you are tired, you know—tired," said Mr. Smithers. "Go to bed—there's a dear. I'll scold Fanny up with you."

"Why should the chambermaid go up stairs with me?" cried Mrs. Smithers, beginning to feel mysteriously terrified.

"She shan't, then!" said Mr. Smithers. "Go she shan't, Kitty."

Then he himself accompanied Mrs. Smithers to her apartment; saw that she retired, tied a handkerchief wet with spirits of camphor, about her head and left her to herself. Poor Mrs. Smithers was afraid to resist, fearing that her husband might be insane enough to be dangerous. She lay staring into the darkness, in the greatest misery of mind, not knowing what her husband might take into his head next. Meanwhile that gentleman had rushed in haste to the family doctor.

"Doctor," he said, sitting down in the physician's study, "I've got a terrible thing to tell you. When I went away from home I left my dear little wife as well as I could wish, in as snug a home as a woman need to have—but you know my house, Doctor. I came home to-night and find the poor soul quite out of her mind—quite out of her little mind, Doctor. She's packed off all the comfortable things, I don't know where; had the doors and mantel-pieces taken down cellar, and hung up horse-blankets on rods and rings; sent away the carpets and rubbed up the floors and scattered about a few fuzzy rugs. She won't have the heater or the gas; and there's a log of wood on some of my grandmother's old brass andirons, and a few candles perched here and there. And she's taken down the family portraits and hung up pictures of long-legged birds; and she's stuck plates and bowls and cups and saucers all over the wall somehow; and the place is full of the queerest old spindle-legged things, chairs that make you say Ouch! when you sit down on 'em, and tables you can't get your legs under. The place is like a charnel-house; but I wouldn't mind that if she was all right in her mind. Doctor, what do you think of her saying she did it by the advice of some fellow or other? I don't remember his name. That's a mental delusion, ain't it?"

The doctor looked at his friend with a solemn countenance, but his soul was full of fun. He knew very well what little Mrs. Smithers had been doing to her house, and why she did it; and he quite understood the effect it had produced on her spouse.

"Smithers, my dear friend," he said, solemnly, "don't be alarmed. It is an epidemic; half the women in the city have it. Your wife will recover. Take my advice; Send her into the country for a week, and put your old things back into the house. You can sell the new ones at auction very readily. Let Mrs. S. as I have said, visit your mother the while. When she comes back she'll see everything all right again, and all will be well. Don't talk to her about it. There'll be no relapse."

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Smithers, "I hope you are right. And you'll go over and see Kitty? I've put her to bed and tied her head up. You'll go this evening, doctor?"

"At once," said the doctor.

He went. Poor Mrs. Smithers lay sobbing in her spindle-legged bed, with the handkerchief still about her brows.

"Oh, doctor," she sobbed, "I am so thankful you've come. Jeremiah has returned home in such a strange condition. I am afraid his mind is affected. He would have me go to bed at once, as you see. Did he send for you? There was nothing the matter with me until he nearly frightened me to death."

"I've seen your husband, ma'am," said the doctor, solemnly. "He'll be all right in a few days. It was the shock of seeing things so changed about him—that was all. Do exactly as he bids you, and everything will be well again."

Mrs. Smithers promised and obeyed, and went mildly away to visit Jeremiah's mother in the country on the following day. As soon as she was gone, the anxious husband packed off all the expensive purchases to the auction-rooms, where they created quite a furore, and brought more than they cost, restored his doors and mantel-pieces, hunted up his old furniture, rehung his gas-fixtures and set his heater to work, and then went to bring his wife home.

He watched the effect of her entrance into her home with anxiety, but all Mrs. Smithers said was:

"How comfortable!"

"I thought you'd think so," sighed he, wonderfully relieved.

He has never quite understood the matter yet; but Mrs. Smithers does.

"The Trapper's Last Shot."

He was probably christened James, but is always Jim now, and, along with the greater part of his christened name, he has almost entirely lost his surname. If he had been a few shades lighter, he might have been "Colored Jim," but black being the absorption of all color, this name would not fit him. So he is known, wherever known at all, as "Nigger Jim." He is an expert trapper and fisherman, but, rather singularly, considering these gifts, a poor marksman. For years he lugged about a carried in his boat an ancient flint-lock Queen's arm, so deadly in its action that it would kill pickerel with only a charge of powder, so Jim said, yet he rarely brought home any spoils of field or flood but such as were gained by trap or hook. Once, however, by made a very telling shot. It was on an October morning, and he was adding his fall trapping skill up the channel of Wonakakatuk, as cleverly as any Indian could, when, as he rounded a bend, he saw through the tall stalks of the wild rice at least a dozen ducks sitting among the lily-pads in the edge of the channel, not six rods from him. Here was his long-sought opportunity, and no sooner did he [illegible] the stern of his canoe with the paddle stopped the headway of the craft just before she poked her sharp nose in sight of the unsuspecting foul. Then he laid the paddle in the boat without the slightest noise, and as silently lifted from her resting-place his old gun whose true inwardness at that moment consisted of all the powder in her owner's possession and a handful of B B shot, both wadded with a half-pound or so of waspnest. He cautiously thrust her muzzle through the rice stalks, cocked her without a tell-tale click of the ponderous lock, set the breech-plate firmly against his shoulder, laid his cheek to the stock, took such long and deliberate aim that a spider, setting his snare among the rushes, made fast an end of his web to the rusty barrel before Jim, shutting both eyes set his teeth, and with a sturdy pull unlimbered. There was a dazzling flash in the pan as if a kettle full of lard had caught fire, and then the noble weapon belched forth a horizontal column of flame and smoke, kicked Jim and his skiff half the boat's length astern, and gave a roar that went bellowing down the creek, across the lake, and was tossed back and forth from Split Rock Mountain to Shellhouse for five minutes before it lost its voice. When Jim got his eyes opened and his wits gathered, he peered through the eddying smoke and saw—not a feather raised, nor one wounded duck fluttering its last, but some riding unconcernedly with their heads knocked off and some keel up in a quarter-acre of fine splinters. Then up rose two Boston men from among the rushes, and the fire and smoke and uproar and vicious recoil of Jim's gun were as nothing to the vials of wrath which they poured out upon his curly, devoted head. Never was such paddling done on these waters as Jim did till he put half a mile of Wonakakatuk's channel seething with his rapid strokes, between himself and the scene of bloodless slaughter. Then he shoved his boat into the rushes and skulked ashore. Next day he offered his gun for sale, giving as a reason that she burned so much powder no poor man could afford to keep her. He effected a sale at $1.50, and has done no duck-shooting since. Always, with emphatic shakes of the head, "Any man that'll try to fool ducks with them wooden images will steal sheep! Yes, sir, 'course he will!"—Forest and Stream.

"Pure Mocha."

A DELUDED PUBLIC—THE KIND OF COFFEE WE DO NOT GET.

If the official returns of the coffee trade are to be trusted—and presumably they are not greatly in error—the coffee consuming public of this country has been for a long time past very much deluded. There are a multitude of people in this part of the world who are laboring under the belief that the beverage which they drink at breakfast, and, possibly after dinner, is Mocha coffee. Their grocer tells them that the article he sells is "pure Mocha," and they have no means of knowing that he is deceiving them, if, indeed, he has not been deceived himself. Some, with a peculiar fastidiousness, insist upon having a mixture, and want one-half or one-third of Mocha and the remainder of Java coffee—a request which the grocer seemingly complies with: that is, he takes the coffee from two separate compartments. Now, the last completed returns of the coffee production of the world are made up to the year 187[illegible]. In that year the estimated growth was [illegible]082,112,500 pounds of which Brazil produced 407,127,300 pounds, or nearly one-half. Next came the Dutch East Indian possessions, where the crop amounted to 201,500,000 pounds; while Ceylon, South Africa and the West Indies furnished nearly all of the rest. Arabia, it is true, appears on the list, but its total growth, the Mocha district and the rest of the country combined, was only about 4,500,000 pounds—this, not quite ½ of 1 per cent. of the growth of the world.

When it is considered that coffee is extensively used in Arabia, that Mocha comes within the possessions of Turkey, a country peopled with coffee-drinkers, and that we have no direct communication with Arabia, one may well hesitate [illegible] accepts the current Mocha fiction [illegible] grocers. It is highly probable that [illegible] pounds of this article are brought [illegible] country in the course of a year [illegible] that would not furnish a day [illegible] for the inhabitants of this city. [illegible] of course, know the flavor of Mocha, [illegible] and hence can not be deceived, though in reality probably not one in a thousand of us ever tasted it.—N. Y. Times.

Entertaining Company.

The whole philosophy of hospitality is summed up by Emerson in the following: "I pray you, O excellent wife, not to cumber yourself and me to get a rich dinner for this man or this woman who has alighted at our gate, nor a bed-chamber made ready at too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in, they can get for a dollar at the village. But let this stranger see, if he will, in your looks, in your accent and behavior, your heart and [illegible]nestness, your thought and will, what he cannot buy at any price, at any village or city, and which he may well travel fifty miles and dine sparingly and sleep hard, in order to behold. Certainly, let the board be spread and the bed be dressed for the traveler, but let not the emphasis of hospitality be in these things. Honor to the house where they are simple to the verge of hardship, so that the intellect is awake and sees into laws of the universe, the soul worships truth and love, and honor and courtesy flow into all deeds." One of the greatest comforts of having a home should be that in it we have a place for friends and even strangers—rooms, more than supply the needs of the family, and extra "leaves" to the extension table. The secret of true hospitality, as Emerson has stated, is in its coming from the heart.

The Intensity of Arctic Cold.

The chronicler of Lieut. Schwatka's expedition in search of the remains of Sir John Franklin records some interesting facts regarding the great cold of Arctic regions. The lowest temperature met with by the company was 103 degrees below the freezing point, or seventy-one degrees below zero Fahrenheit, a degree of cold almost impossible to imagine by the people of more temperate climes. The effects of such intense cold upon the human system were not so marked in the case of the lieutenant and his companions as might be supposed, and even during the month in which the average temperature was sixty-five degrees below zero, the health of the party remained unimpaired. The men adapted themselves as much as possible to the habits of the natives, feeding largely upon blubber and fat meat, by which the vital heat was sustained. Plenty of game was found by the adventurers, who were able to secure with their repeating rifles enough reindeer at the time to last them for several days. The difficulty of approaching these animals was very great, for in the still cold air the step of a man upon the snow could be heard two miles away, and the grating of [illegible] like the clothing of tempered steel. It was not an easy matter to keep guns in working order in this climate, for at sixty and seventy degrees below zero, strong oak and hickory would break like icicles, and all lubricants harden and interfere with the working of the locks. When the guns were brought into the warm atmosphere of the huts to be cleaned, they would at once become coated with moisture, and every part had to be carefully dried and wiped, lest the hunter, on stepping into the cold air again, would find a useless block of ice in his hands. A bottle of whisky which was in the stores was congealed to the consistency of thick syrup by the intense cold, and the cup from which one of the travelers essayed to drink, actually froze to his lips. The low temperature of this latitude permitted some of the Esquimaux to practice a terrible revenge upon some wolves which had attacked them. They set upright in the ice several keen knife-blades, and covered them with blood. These the wolves licked, slicing their tongues, but being prevented by the cold from feeling the wounds at the time, and their own warm blood tempted them to continue until their tongues were so scarified that death was inevitable.

Three Gallant Dogs.

THEIR EFFORTS TO RESCUE ANOTHER ONE FROM A WATERY GRAVE.

The South Bend (Ind.) Tribune relates the following instance of dog sense: "All day Monday four dogs were playing on the shore ice which runs out into the river from the Singer factory docking. At least three of the dogs were of the breed known as setters. Between 3 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon some of the Singer employes, who work in the building facing the river, and who had noticed the dogs at different times during the day, were attracted by a great commotion among them. Three of them were running up and down the river along the edge of the ice, but the fourth one was missing. Directly one of the dogs was seen to reach his head in the water over the edge of the ice and grasp some object in his teeth and try to pull it out of the water. The object was the dog who had fallen or jumped into the river and was unable to get upon the ice again. The effort of the dog on the ice was also unsuccessful, and he released his hold, while all three of the dogs set up a brisk barking, varied occasionally by dismal howls; finally another effort was made to rescue their companion, all the dogs joining in it, but the slippery ice afforded them such poor foothold, and the distance from the ice down to the water was so far that, after three or four trials, they gave it up. They then held consultation with heads close together, and two of them started off up town, apparently to get help, while the third one laid himself down on the ice close to the edge, as if to keep guard over their companion, who was paddling in the current for dear life, and could just manage to keep his nose above the water. At this stage of the proceedings two men came to the rescue of the dog. They procured a long board and running it a short distance beyond the ice, one of them stepped upon it and together they pulled the dog out. He was almost dead with exhaustion and nearly stiff with cold. The dog who had remained as watcher made every possible canine demonstration of joy when his companion was safely landed, and was soon after joined by the other two in like expressions, they having returned from an unsuccessful hunt for help a short time after the dog was rescued. We record the case as one of the most remarkable in the line of dog stories we have ever heard of, and its truthfulness can be vouched for by several eye witnesses."

The Goat.

The goat is a native of the vacant lots about the city, and there are lots of them.

The goat is omnivorous. He will goat anything that he sees, and will seize anything he may goat.

His principal food, however, is play bill. He is very fond of letters.

Let us honor him for his love of bill letters.

The gentleman goat is called Billy, but he is a Billy that no policeman can handle.

The goat is generous to a fault. He presents a couple of horns to everybody he sees.

In the matter of mere cash, the Cashmere goat is the most famous.

The goat wears a beard. It is called a goatee though not confined to the goat.

The goat is noted for his hunting, but he never flags.

The goat is one of the signs of the zodiac, signifying that he has a propensity to knock things sky-high.

He never gets high himself. That is to say, never gets over the ba-a-a.

Shakespeare understood the spontaniety of the goat when he said, "Stand not upon the order of your going, but goat at once."

The goat is a wide-awake animal. He is never caught napping, notwithstanding the many cases of kid-napping you may have read about.

For many years the goat was the only butter known.

Goats love to get on a high rock and sun themselves. Give them a chance and they will always seek a sunny climb.

The god Pan was a sort of half-goat, all goats do not pan out as well as he did.

Ba-a-a!—Boston Post.

An exchange says the weekly newspaper costs less each week than a glass of beer, yet there are men who each day drink three to ten glasses, that say, "I am too poor to take a paper."

Our Foreign Population.

According to the census of 1880, there were at that time 6,677,360 persons of foreign birth in the United States. The number given by the census of 1870 was 5,567,229. We gained about eleven hundred thousand foreigners during the decade.

The place of birth of the population was given for the first time in the census of 1850. Let us, therefore, follow the progress of foreign immigration and our increase due to it since that time.

The last thirty years, indeed, have been the great years for immigration. During the whole period from 1790 to 1850 we received from abroad only about as many people as came over in the decade between 1850 and 1860. The immigration for the sixty years was in round numbers 2,700,000, and of the ten years it was 2,000,000. Between 1860 and 1870, the period of the civil war, there was a small falling off as compared with the decade just previous and the total reached only about 2,500,000. Since 1870 however, immigration has been even more extensive than it was between 1850 and 1860, though from 1875 to 1879, when the country was struggling with hard times and business depression, it was at a low ebb. The total for the decade was about 3,000,000.

We have, therefore, received since 1790 the great aggregate of over 10,750,000 foreign immigrants, and more than eight millions of them have landed on our shores since 1850; in the last thirty years. It is accordingly easy to account for the 7,667,360 foreign born inhabitants found in the country by the census of 1880.

When we remember that these eight millions of foreigners who have come to us since 1850 are more prolific than the old native population, and that emigration is not usually undertaken except during the most active years of maturity, we must attribute to them a large part of our natural increase in population. Of our fifty millions of inhabitants they and their descendants make up a fraction which we cannot yet determine from the census, but it is unquestionably a great one—above one-fifth, probably. These immigrants of thirty years have modified our national characteristics, affected our religious thought and practice, and changed many of our social customs.

And they will go on increasing, both by births and by new and still greater accessions from abroad. 1880 showed a larger aggregate immigration than we had before witnessed. If the prosperity upon which we have entered continues, we shall probably receive between 1880 and 1890 from four to five million settlers from abroad, and then at least one-third of the population of the United States will be composed of the foreign born and the descendants of the immigrants who landed here during the forty years from 1850 to 1890.—*N. Out-Door Air and Exercise.

The surest of all natural prophylactics is active exercise in the open air. Air is a part of our daily food, and by far the most important part. A man can live on seven meals a week, and survive the warmest summer day with seven draughts of fresh water, but his supply of gaseous nourishment has to be renewed at least fourteen thousand times in the twenty-four hours. Every breath we draw is a draught of fresh oxygen, every emission of breath is in evacuation of gaseous recrements. The purity of our blood depends chiefly on the purity of the air we breathe, for in the laboratory of the lungs the atmospheric air is brought into contact at each respiration with the fluids of the venous and arterial systems, which absorb it and circulate it through the whole body; in other words, if a man breathes the vitiated atmosphere of a factory all day and of a close bedroom all night, his life blood is tainted 14,000 times in the course of the twenty four with foul vapors, dust, and noxious exhalations. We need not wonder, then, that ill-ventilated dwellings aggravate the evils of so many diseases, nor that pure air should be almost a panacea.

Out-door life is both a remedy and a preventive of all known disorders of the respiratory organs; consumption, in all but the last stage of the deliquium, can be conquered by transferring the battle-ground from the sick-room to the wilderness of the next mountain range.

Asthma, catarrh and tubercular phthisis are unknown among the nomads of the intertropical deserts, as well as among the homeless hunters of our Northwestern Territories. Hunters and herders, who breathe the pure air of the South American pampas, subsist for years on a diet that would endanger the life of a city dweller in a single month. It has been repeatedly observed that individuals who attained to an extreme old age were generally poor peasants whose vocations required daily labor in the open air, though their habits differ in almost every other respect; also that the average duration of life in various countries of the Old World depends not so much on climatic peculiarities or their respective degree of culture as on the chief occupation of the inhabitants; the starved Hindoo outlives the well-fed Parsee merchant, the unkempt Bulgarian enjoys an average longevity of forty-two years to the West Austrian citizen's thirty-five.—Dr. Felix L. Oswald.

Founder.

Founder may be caused by sudden changes of temperature, over-exertion on hard roads, over-feeding, large draughts of cold water, standing in snow or ice-water while warm; or it may be due to rheumatism, or a sequel to strangles, influenza, etc. If the horse is shod, remove the shoes. Cut down the rim of the hoof all around to such an extent that only the sole and the frog touches the ground. Do not pare away anything from the sole or frog. Then place him on an earthen floor and not on a plank floor unless it is kept well littered. Envelop the feet in large, soft, cold poultices of equal parts of bran and linseed meal. If much tenderness prevails scarify the skin above the hoof and place the feet in warm water to stimulate bleeding. Give five drachms of aloes and a drachms each of podophyllin and capsicum, made into a ball. Give every hour from the beginning of the attack ten drops tincture of aconite root, until six doses are given. If after two or three days, the fever and pain in the feet do not decrease, thin down the sole at the toe and make an incision sufficiently deep to start bleeding, and encourage the same by immersing the feet in warm water. Thereafter apply blister round the pastern. Give loosening food. Subsequently give liberty outdoors when weather permits, during daytime.—Western Rural.

We can all do something for each other in this world if we only try. Do not let us forget what Wordsworth taught us, so long ago, "the primal duties shine aloft like stars," while "the charities that soothe and heal and bless are scattered at the feet of man like flowers."

Let no one now omit to buy
The fragrant "Teaberry," and try
Upon the Teeth its cleansing powers,
And gain a breath like scent of flowers.

SECRET.

THE ONLY DISSOLVER OF THE POISONOUS URIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, liniments, liniments and soothing lotions will not reach to these diseases which are the result of the poisoning of the blood with Uric Acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

Firework-Making.

HOW ROMAN CANDLES AND SKY ROCKETS ARE MADE.

An article in the London Daily News on fireworks says:

A visitor to one of those case-making sheds in which a good fire may be roaring in an open fireplace will perhaps be rather startled to notice a number of barrels and jars, which he will be apt to assume are filled with firework-making materials of an explosive character, or they would not be in a building with a fire in it. These receptacles represent the most modern development of the pyrotechnic art. Just take a dip into this barrel and bring out a little of its contents on the point of a knife and hold it in the dark part of that gas flame. It is arsenite of copper and sal ammoniac, and instantly the broad light of noon-day is overpowered with a blue glare that would have fairly astounded Friar Bacon, or the Heathen Chinee, or John Babington, or any other artist in fire of ancient days. We make another dive and bring out a little chlorate of baryta, and a dazzling outburst of green is the result when placed in the flame. Here is a barrel of sal ammoniac which is combined with color-giving substances to give depth and intensity. Another receptacle holds chlorate of potash, a source of oxygen gas, without a good supply of which neither fireworks nor those for whose enjoyment they are made can be expected to be very bright. Some of the coloring substances are very perilous. If, for instance, a little of a compound of nitrate of strontia and sulphur and potash—the source of the most vivid red color known to chemists—if a little of this should be left after a display at the Crystal Palace, it is always either fired or buried. It is too dangerous to attempt to store. All this branch of pyrotechny is of quite recent development. Forty or fifty years ago colored fireworks were unknown, or nearly so.

Perhaps the most delicate and interesting feature of modern firework-making is the charging of Roman candles—those colored balls which are puffed out softly into the air one after the other without any report, and which always are recognized as such a pretty feature of the Sydenham displays. The public like to see these balls thrown out with exactly an equal force so as to play just within the same sphere. In order to secure this, very careful adjustment is necessary. The fiery balls of color are little lumps of composition filled into the case, and separated from each other by a layer or "dark fire," a little charge of gunpowder being just underneath. It is this little charge of powder which blows them into the air, and if all the charges were alike, every ball would be thrown out a little farther than its predecessor, because the deeper down in case an explosion takes place the more violent it is, the resistance being greater. To obviate this, the charge of powder is made to increase as the tube is filled up. The workman who fills a Roman candle, therefore, has before him a series of little scoops of different sizes for measuring the powder, and uses them in succession, the smallest being used for the first ball put in, and the largest one for the ball at the mouth of the tube. The "dark fire" is a composition which only smoulders, and which, therefore, does not burn down to a second ball until the first has performed its graceful progress through the air. Of all fireworks the rocket is perhaps the most beautiful, and it certainly is the most curious in its structure. Some of the best of them are said to rise to a height of more than a third of a mile, and this amazing power of flight is secured by running in very tightly into the rocket-case a composition which burns fiercely, and generates gas very rapidly when once lighted, but which has only a very small vent for its fury at the lower end of the case. The gas generated inside rushes out with such violence against the air outside that the rocket is driven upwards by it, the tail of the comet consisting of the sparks of the fire burning within. Rocket making of course forms a large part of the work of any fire-work factory. In one shed the cases are being made; in another building sticks are being split up and rounded at the head so as to fit into the rocket-case. In a third all sorts of curious burdens are being prepared for the fiery messengers whose heads are holding chambers capable of holding "tail stars," comets, colored stars, golden rain, floating lights, and a score of other surprises when the rocket can rise no higher.

A Case not Beyond Help.

Dr. M. H. Hinsdale, Kenawee, Ill., advises us of a remarkable cure of consumption. He says: "A neighbor's wife was attacked with violent lung disease, and pronounced beyond help from quick consumption. As a last resort the family was persuaded to try Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. To the astonishment of all, by the time she had used one half dozen bottles she was about the house doing her own work. I saw her at her worst and had no idea she could recover.

Watson's Neuralgia King.

This is one of the best remedies for Neuralgia ever invented. It is not a liniment, but it is a medicine to be taken internally, and cures by going right to the root of the disease. A lady who had tried many other things, without relief, tried Neuralgia King, and was immediately cured. We guarantee it in all cases, when used according to directions.

The quinine production of the world is estimated at from 250,000 to 260,000 lbs per year, as follows: Germany, 56,000 lbs; Holland, 45,000 lbs; France, 45,000 lbs; England, 27,000 lbs; America, 63,000 lbs; India, 12,250. Efforts are being made to acclimatize the cinchona in Italy, but the successful culture in India and Ceylon encourages the belief that it will grow wherever the soil is dry, the rainfall large and the climate temperate.

From Cleveland, Ohio.

Comes a letter signed T. Walker, saying: "About six months ago commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters for protracted case of lumbago and general debility, and am now pleased to state have recovered my appetite and wonted strength. Feel better altogether.

The true girl has to be sought for. She may be in the parlor hammering a waltz out of the suffering piano; she may be in front of the bureau-glass admiring her hair; perhaps she's swinging on the front gate with a young man with a tender mustache; if not there, she is promenading the streets and flirting with a masher. O, you'll have to seek her. And after you find her, just say that her mother is washing the dishes and needs her assistance.

The Fast Young Man.

There has been so much said about the fast young lady, that it is time the fast young man took his share of the blessings.

Go where you will, and you will see a specimen of fast Young America. Ride in the car or stage, and at the most fashionable street corner our fast young man will get in, and finding the most comfortable seat, ensconce himself therein, and then look around to see if his appearance has produced the awe he expected. If a fashionably dressed young lady enters, how quick he springs up to offer her a seat. But let a poorly dressed woman get in, and he is very intent on watching something out of the window, and, of course, does not see her; while if he would always be polite to rich and poor, old and young, he might sometime have a fortune left him by a poorly dressed man or woman, as that seems to be the way fortunes are left now-a-days—in the newspapers.

Walk in the streets, and on every corner, holding up the buildings and lamp-posts, you will see quite a number of the fast young men; some mooning idiots making remarks about every lady that passes by. "That's a beauty." "Isn't that a bully girl." "I think she's some." These and similar expressions may be heard at almost any time, and uttered by respectable young men—they call themselves.

Go to the theatre, and in the gallery, and even in the opera-box, you will find him. He is here, there, and everywhere. Now daintily holding his opera-glass, he looks around the house, and if he sees any modest, shy-looking girl, stares her out of countenance. He is on familiar terms with the actresses and ballet girls, and even boasts of his intimacy with them.

After the play is over, he lounges around town, stopping here and there, and finally brings up at home about "five o'clock in the morning," sometime too gloriously drunk to find his own room, and at others, "only drunk enough to make me jolly, upon my honor."

He sleeps next morning until nearly noon, and then after freshly perfuming his hair, brushing his somewhat seedy hat, and giving a peculiar twist to his new necktie, sallies out to repeat the performance of the day before, only varied by attending a race or church now and then.

After a while, when his landlady becomes impatient for her rent, due six months or so, and when creditors come thick and fast upon him, he looks around in search of a wife. Be she young or old, homely or handsome, it makes no difference to him, if she has abundance of the needful cash. It is not for love he wants her, but to pay his wine, carriage, and other bills.

He proposes in the latest style. Papa consents. A rich trousseau is ordered from Paris, and they are married in style in a fashionable church, without any love-making on his part, and on her side she does not care for any. After marriage, he goes his way, she goes hers, and no questions are asked on either side. He has some one to pay his bills, and she has a husband to redeem her from the odium of being called an old maid.

After a year or two, they disagree, find out their "incompatibilty of temper," and in nine cases out of ten they get a divorce; she goes back to papa, and he goes in search of new fields to conquer, or perhaps, to break some poor girl's heart and then say, "Poor thing, I really couldn't help it. How can a fellow help being good-looking." No wonder that divorces are so frequent, with such ill-assorted marriages:

Such is a fashionable marriage,
They are well mated in life,
She's got a fool for a husband,
He's got a fool for a wife.

Nothing To Do.

Boarding-house life is responsible for a great deal of illness among women. I was recently brought in contact with a young couple whom I will call Smith. The wife spends her time doing fancy work, reading novels and making calls. The husband is a clerk, on a salary of twelve hundred dollars a year. They live up to every cent, with apparently no thought of the future. Mrs. Smith said once that she supposed she spent over a hundred dollars a year in worsteds, patterns, fancy braids gimps and the like. And she buys all her underclothes ready made, while a dressmaker is employed to make her dresses. She has a sewing-machine, which was a wedding present from a sensible uncle, but she never uses it. She has a piano, but can play only the most simple tunes, and she has a box of oil paints and a dozen or more brushes, but she has painted only a few shells and a small panel.

She is irretrievably lazy, and calls herself delicate. She never gets up out of bed until half past eight in the morning, and lies on the sofa certainly half of every day. If a visitor comes in, she monopolizes the conversation and invariably manages to lead it to the subject of physical ills. Her personal ailments is a subject of which she never tires. I believe that in the few weeks I spent in that hotel with her, I heard the history of every pain and ache which had ever visited her body or her imagination since childhood. Not an ache could be mentioned by any one that she had not had, only in a more aggravated form.

When her husband comes home her method of entertaining him is to describe at length every particular pain she imagines she has felt during the day. He loves her now, and is very attentive and kind; but how much longer will his patience endure? How much longer will he submit quietly to hearing the tedious details of her headaches, backaches, neuralgia, sideaches, rheumatism, etc.? Even now he sometimes looks a little bored and weary as she begins the same old plaint as soon as he enters the room. He knows quite well—for he is a man of good common sense—that for the most part it is only in her imagination that she suffers. She forgets all her aches and pains very quickly if there is any project for amusement or fun.

As it is, she is a burden to herself and a bore to her acquaintances. Of real friends she has none; how can such a woman gain affection and esteem?

Called to Preach.

We feel called upon to preach a few gospel facts—facts that are worth knowing. We want everybody to enjoy all that is possible in this world. We want all those who are suffering from rheumatism, neuralgia and all aches, sprains and pains to know that Thomas' Eclectric Oil is an unfailing and splendid cure.

When a woman leaves a man who has not earned his salt for years, he advertises that he will pay no debts of her making.

It is unlawful in Massachusetts to keep a drinking bar in any place not visible from a public street, and screens and other obstructions to the view are prohibited, as well as any arrangement of bottles and casks to effect the same purpose. This law is strictly enforced in Boston, where in many instances the bars had to be removed to front rooms, and windows cut through the walls. One paper speaking of the liquor trade, says the law has not lessened the sales at all. At first there was a slight hesitancy on the part of some drinkers, but that passed away, and the general result was to make the traffic more open and respectable.

As when She was Young.

"I have used Parker's Hair Balsam and like it better than any similar preparation I know of," writes Mrs. Ellen Perry, of Goldbrook Springs, Mass. "My hair was almost entirely gray, but a dollar bottle of the Balsam has restored the softness, and the brown color it had when I was young—not a single gray hair left. Since I began applying the Balsam my hair has stopped falling out, and I find that it is a perfectly harmless and agreeable dressing."

It is said that Green Lake in Colorado has the highest elevation of any lake in the world. Its surface is 10,252 feet above the level of the sea. Pine forests surround it, and eternal snow decks the neighboring mountain tops. One of these, Gray's Peak, has an altitude of 14,341 feet. The water of Green Lake is clear as crystal, and very large rock masses and a petrified forest are distinctly to be seen at the bottom. The branches of the trees are of a dazzling whiteness as though cut in marble

"Twenty-seven, sir," was the son's reply, and the father admired his frankness. The following week the report placed the lad number twenty-nine. "How is this? I thought there were only twenty-seven in the class," inquired the father. "Ah, sir, two new boys came in this week."

It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 3 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 38,314 copies; in 1879, 45,194 copies; in 1880, 54,891 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,019 copies, or a daily average of 18,846 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON, and EVENING issues, known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the exceptional extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers so that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North. Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic facilities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 26, 1883.

all absorbing topic of interest. On the one side is arrayed one hundred million dollars capital, and on the other ten thousand intelligent men and women fighting for their rights. The public heart must sympathize with the strikers.

"Under a properly adjusted tariff," remarks the editor of a postoffice in Ohio, "we should not import a pound of wool." Quite likely, but the tariff would have to be prohibitory; and in that case, many branches of American manufacturers would have to be discontinued, for they require varieties of wool that are not and cannot be grown in this country.

Our inventors seem to have gone wild on the subject of electricity.—This is now the largest division in the Patent Office, and two thousand applications were entered there last year, about two-thirds of which were granted. There are but few of these patents, however, of much practical value, and the prospect of a cheaper light is not very encouraging.

Anything refreshing is peculiarly acceptable in this weather, and a young man from Kalamazoo has contributed a cooling breeze. He boarded a west-bound train on the Michigan Central in company with a buxom lass who blushed carmine and looked foolishly happy. Standing in the aisle the young man said, with a joyous pride that illuminated the darkest corner in the car: "Ladies and gentlemen, this is my wife, Mrs. Heuffer. Ain't she a daisy?" The delighted auditors heartily concurred, and the couple took a seat, sharing between them a smile that would have served for a calcium light. Mr. Heuffer believes in unbottled felicity, and the chances are that he will get through life without losing any flesh in apprehensive worry over the loyalty of his daisy.

One of the most glaring evils of the new tariff law is that the home manufacturer is still taxed and in some cases is compelled to pay an increase tax on his raw material. As is inevitable the tax clings to the commodity he produces through all the processes of manufacture, increasing the cost of production, and finally falling upon the consumer. The result is, as current experience demonstrates, when the home market is glutted the manufacturer is prevented by the tariff from disposing of his goods in foreign markets, and before he can resume production he is obliged to wait until the home demand exhausts the oversupply. To tax the raw material of the manufacturer is therefore the worst possible folly, and yet the new tariff law raised the tax on iron ore and bituminous coal about fifty per cent., and increased it on many other articles. In this regard the effect of the law is to cripple American manufacturers.

In these dull times platform making seems to be a favorite amusement with many of the newspapers. This from the Jackson Patriot is as good as any we have seen lately:

1. The strictest economy in the administration of the government.
2. The equal civil and political rights of all men.
3. No bounties, subsidies, or special privileges, shall be voted or granted to any interests.
4. A tariff for revenue in contradistinction to a tariff for protection.
5. A genuine reform of the civil service, whereby honesty, ability and faithfulness shall be the sole tests of continuance therein.
6. Opposition to all forms of monopoly.
7. Supervision of railroad tariffs and traffic by a national commission, to the end that unjust discrimination and extortions may be prevented.
8. No further grants of public lands to railroad or other corporations, and the absolute forfeiture by congress of all unearned grants as soon as possible.
9. Bribery in elections to be punished by the perpetual disfranchisement of both the buyers and sellers of votes.
10. Taxation so adjusted as to meet all requirements of the government, but not to leave a surplus for distribution among the states or to be squandered upon worthless objects.
11. Election of United States senators by the popular vote of the people of the several states.
12. Government of the people, by the people, for the people, as against government of the people by, and for the benefit of corporations.
13. The union of the states, inviolable and indissoluble forever.

ALUMNI HISTORY.

BY LUELLA WARING.

In preparing for your amusement and delectation this, the seventh paper of the Alumni History, I have labored under various difficulties; lack of a natural ability for historical writing; no acquaintance with the persons to be epitomized; insufficient time to devote to the matter; wherefore I beg that you will listen very leniently and I will make haste to find the end.

To those herein mentioned—I have no doubt omitted much that would be complimentary as well as entertaining. I regret exceedingly that I had no time to enter into a correspondence with each one.

John V. Voree after leaving Tecumseh went to Ann Arbor where he was graduated; thence he removed to Arlington, Va., at which place his father was living. His whereabouts at this time I have been unable to ascertain.

Isaac Adams was graduated from the literary department of our state university, and was then principal of the Bay City schools for one year; literary to his own advancement he spent fourteen months traveling in Germany, and a year in this country. He then studied law and was admitted to the bar, the firm of Sears & Adams, being known in Chicago for about two years. At present Mr. Adams is a teacher in the commercial department in the schools of Omaha, Neb., he also edits a paper, published in the interests of the school and has contributed a number of scholarly articles to it.

Wm. E. Burtless, upon leaving the Tecumseh schools, in 1870, went to Ann Arbor, where he was graduated from the medical college. He married a daughter of Dr. Hamilton, of this place. She died soon after. He married again and is now practicing medicine at Midland, Midland county, in the northern part of this state, where report says he is doing a thriving business.

Philander H. Adams was a member of the class of '71, under the professorship of H. M. Fish. He soon entered a business college, in Ohio, whence he was graduated. He is now in Topeka—he is the owner of a splendid farm which he manages in connection with the large landed estate left by his deceased brother.

Willis Merritt was born in this township in 1854. He entered the high school at the beginning of the fall term of 1865, and was graduated June 1871. Mr. Merritt was graduated from the Michigan university law school in March, 1874, and has been engaged in the law business in this village and at the city of Adrian ever since. He is now at home in this village, having returned recently from a trip to Texas.

A card addressed to Mrs. Libbie Spahr elicited the following: "Libbie L. Cook after graduating at Tecumseh spent one year at Adrian college. She was married June 10, 1875, to Rev. S. K. Spahr, of the Methodist Protestant church. She has presided over a manse at Mechanicsburg, Dayton and Springfield in Ohio, and Adrian in this state. She has been actively engaged in religious work all these years—especially identified with the woman's missionary work of the M. P. church. She was corresponding secretary of the Ohio conference branch of the W. F. M. S., for a term of years. She represented the branch in the general society which met in Pittsburg, Pa., 1881. She is now the president of the Michigan branch of the W. F. M. S. She is the mother of two children, a girl six years old and a boy of three months. She has many virtues among which is that of modesty, which made it necessary for me to write this history.—S. K. Spahr."

Miss Ella Fulton left our high school in 1871; she then went to Binghampton, N. Y., where she was graduated, and immediately commenced teaching in the school. After three years she removed to Norwich, N. Y., where she has since remained. She spends her summers at the Thousand Isles or at Brooklyn, N. Y. A large part of her time has been devoted to painting and music, in which she has made great proficiency. In the language of another, "A splendid girl if she is my niece."

J. Raynor Lilley after leaving school in 1872 became book-keeper in a crockery house at Toledo, and was there during a period of eight years. He was in New York City a year in the interests of the Fairbank's Scale Co., then at Adrian a year as manager of a paper mill, for which company he is now secretary at Cleveland, Ohio.—He was married to Miss Daniels, of Buffalo last October.

Elbert Tripp, after graduation was identified with the lumber interests of Franklin, he being manager of a saw mill in that place. He is married and is now engaged in teaching school winters and traveling for some agency summers.

After June, 1872, Leon J. Dutton was engaged for two or three years in Mr. Drew's hardware store; he then clerked a year in the dry goods house of A. Richard. In 1875 the Peoples' Bank was started and he at once assumed a position there which he retained till the failure in 1882. From here he went to Chicago, remaining a year, thence to Cleveland only staying there six weeks. At this time Maj. Fitzsimmons offered him the position of private secretary, which he accepted and is now in C. A.

In 1873 a class of five was graduated. Henry C. Wilson, of Ridgeway, is a member of this class. After leaving Tecumseh he taught a term in a district school at what is known as 'Pickerel Hill.' He then went to Ypsilanti, remaining there four years, and completing the Cl. course in 1878. He immediately began teaching in the vicinity of Ridgeway. He was afterwards principal in the school at Petersburg. Then following the advice of that sage, H. Greeley, he "went west," and was for a time superintendent of the schools at Osceola, Iowa. Finding, like many another, that Michigan was a very good state in which to live, he returned and is now located at Blissfield, teaching "the young idea how to shoot." From the Educational News I note the following:—"It is proper here to state that the "West side" school is in a flourishing condition, and that the average standing of the pupils is excellent, showing efficient work on the part of Prof. Wilson, and the faithful teachers in the several departments."—Blissfield Advance. While at Ypsilanti he was president of Michigan State Normal Lyceum one term.

Albertus E. Palmer is now a prosperous wholesale furniture dealer of Reading, Mich. Three of the ten years which have elapsed since he left Tecumseh were spent in the State Normal School, leaving there in 1876. He then assumed the charge of the Reading public schools, holding that position until 1879, when he resigned and devoted himself to his present business.

Miss Minnie Hunt, now Mrs. J. W. Robinson, since leaving school in 1873, has been engaged in teaching.—For the past 5 years she has been in Manchester in the grammer department. She was married last March to Prof. J. W. Robinson, of the Manchester school. She writes that much of her time outside of school has been spent in study and hopes that she has advanced not retrograded in scholarship. She also sends "grateful thanks to Alma Mater and kindest regards to Alumni." It is also proper to state that she holds the only first grade certificate granted to a lady in Washtenaw county.

THE BALL GAME AT HUDSON.

The Hudson papers speak thus of the base ball game between our club and the Chaffs at Hudson on Thursday of last week.

The Gazette says: "The Chaffs laid out the Blissfield nine last Friday 14 to 8. But they were fared to a reverse themselves yesterday, the Tecumseh coming over and waxing them, 17 to 8. This is the first defeat the Chaffs have sustained this season. The boys must learn to brook such. The matter is a tie now, the Chaffs having beaten the Tecumsehs on the Fourth. The decisive game is yet to be played between the two clubs."

The Post says: The Tecumseh people chartered a car (single decker) attached it to a freight train, and sent a base ball club (stuffed with professionals) to this place yesterday to play the "Chaffs." The car load arrived in good shape, with plenty of muscle, assurance and skill, and at one o'clock commenced to demolish the home club. Our boys were not feeling as well as usual, and only succeeded in making eight tallies to seventeen by the Tecumsehs. It was a difficult thing for the visitors to get into the car when ready to depart, they were so puffed up with the success of their day's sport. They were a gentlemanly lot of fellows, however, if they were too much for us.

DR. B. MINCER,

Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.

V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.

I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.

DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles. C. RYND, M.D.

DROWNED IN BEER.

Concerning this Popular Beverage Two Men Express their Minds.

"The fact is sir, and you may stick a pin there, that the people of this country are likely to be drowned in a flood of lager beer," shouted an enthusiastic tectotaler the other day into the ear of your cornered correspondent. That German drink has struck us hard. It is the second deluge."

"Yes, and the worst of this beer drinking business is that it gets up kidney troubles, as a heavy wind raises the waves, added a city physician, who had a knowledge of the times and a tendency to metaphor. "The midnight 'schooner' leaves behind it a wake of furred tongues, headache, torpid livers, nausea, and all that, and lays the foundation of Bright's Disease."

This melancholy fact accounts in part for the increasing sales of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters, which at once mitigates these symptoms. Price 25 cents. Ask your physician about Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Eli Perkins and Sojourner Truth met, the other day, and the Troy Times cruelly remarks that "it is the first time that Eli and truth ever came so near each other."

The huckleberry and snake crop of the state are said to be remarkably large, and as the two generally go together the prospects for berrying parties this year are unusually exhilarating.

Last week an extra telephone line was strung between Tecumseh and Adrian, which will be used for our business to Adrian and Toledo. The increased business to Toledo made this second line a necessity.

Record: Glad to make a note of it. Ald. Stearns blossomed out this morning in a new full-dress salvation army blue suit. Yes, "while the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return," or words to that effect.

We have recently noticed some crayon portraits, furnished by C. A. Thatcher, of Tiffin, O., of several of our citizens, and pronounce them the finest ever brought to Tecumseh. We cheerfully recommend his work.

"A GREAT DEAL OF FUN FOR A DOLLAR."

Last Thursday our base ball team went to Hudson to play the return game with the Chaffs, of that place. As a number of our people wished to go over and see the game a special car was chartered and started out in the morning well filled with people who desired a day's pleasure and were interested in base ball. A pleasant day was enjoyed by everyone, and the party returned on the evening train well pleased with everything and particularly with the score which was 17 to 8 in favor of Tecumseh. Our boys played splendidly and were altogether too much for the Chaffs. For want of space we cannot give a detailed account of the game. Either Hudson does not take much interest in base ball, or something else was the matter, for very few Hudson people came out to see the game, and the gate receipts in all did not amount to ten dollars. Conductor Stevens and Brakeman Kennedy conducted the exercises in splendid shape. Each station was called promptly and distinctly and everybody had "a great deal of fun for a dollar."

DETROIT ART LOAN EXHIBITION.

In view of the fact that excursions at reduced rates are to be run from here to Detroit next fall, for the accommodation of those desiring to attend the Detroit Art Loan Exhibition, an outline of this ambitious enterprise will be apropos. Briefly stated, over two hundred of the leading citizens of that city, have for months been perfecting arrangements for the holding of a grand art exposition during the months of September and October of this year.

A temporary brick building (to be torn down as soon as the exhibition is over) containing 26 rooms and costing over $15,000, has been erected.—The structure contains over 2,400 running feet of wall room and is built upon the plan of the Centennial art annex. Each room has its own skylight and will be lighted at night by electricity. Over a thousand paintings of the highest artistic merit, together with an unusually large collection of other exhibits, selected because of their illustrating the artistic principle, will be displayed. Price of admission has been fixed at 25 cents, and the exhibition will be open from 10 A. M. to 10 P. M. for 52 consecutive days beginning September 1st. It is proposed to run two excursions from every town of any size, upon each of the twelve lines of transportation centering in Detroit, one during September and another in October. A meeting of General Passenger Agents will arrange rates, which will probably be half rates for the round trip and include a coupon of admission to the Detroit Art Loan. It is intended to interest churches or societies in making up these excursions by offering them a margin upon tickets sold. Particulars can be learned by addressing, with stamp, Detroit Art Loan Association, room 46, Moffat Block, Detroit, Mich.

STATE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

A Two Weeks Session to be Held at Tecumseh, Aug. 6th to Aug. 17th.

The State Teachers' Institute for Lenawee County will be held this year at Tecumseh, commencing on Monday, Aug. 6th, and closing on Friday, Aug. 17th. The superintendent of public instruction has issued the following circular giving a few items of interest connected with the institute.

It is becoming a well established fact that an interchange of views such as is given in these Institutes, is of great practical benefit to those who attend them. The teachers that are found in the front ranks of their profession are generally those who take interest enough in their work to avail themselves of such means of improvement.

The institute law, as amended by the last Legislature, allows teachers, whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County Institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent to close their schools during the continuance of such Institute, without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the Institute. This removes a cause that has prevented many teachers from attending these Institutes in the past; and in view of the inducements of self-improvement thus furnished by the law, County Examiners and School Boards will both exercise wisdom and practice by giving preference to those teachers, other things being equal, who seek all such means better to prepare themselves for the work of their profession.

It is designed to make the work in these institutes as practical as possible and thus meet the wants of the teachers of all grades in their every day work. At the same time it will be the purpose of every worker to raise the standard of the profession of teaching, and to gain for it that dignity to which it is entitled. Especial attention will be given to such subjects as have been recently added to the list of those in which teachers are required to pass examination before obtaining certificates. The exercises will be conducted by persons of extended experience, known ability, and eminent success.

The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of topics of particular interest to teachers, while the evening lectures will be of a popular character.

There will be no tuition or enrollment fee. Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

Prof. Hammond of this village, Secretary of the county board of examiners has sent the following notification to the teachers of the county, which gives still further details in regard to the work to be done.

TECUMSEH, Mich., July 21, 1883.

To the Teachers of Lenawee Co:

Arrangements have been made for holding the Teacher's Institute for this county at Tecumseh, beginning August 6th, and continuing in session for to two weeks, or until the 17th inclusive, under the direction of Prof. I. N. Demmon of the University. Prof. Demmon will be assisted in the work by A. E. Curtis of Adrian High School, and D. A. Hammond of Tecumseh. The change from an institute of one week to one occupying two full weeks, will, we think, be greatly advantageous to all concerned. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the teachers of the county, and that all will feel free to take part in the discussions. The institute will be divided into sections and as thorough review as possible will be made of all the common branches. Teachers will please bring any text books that they may have at hand. Lectures upon the professional work will be given by the conductor before the whole institute.

A certificate will be given every teacher attending the institute showing the number of half days attendance, and the Board of Examiners upon the presentation of the same, will allow a credit of one per cent. on the average, for every full days attendance.

Your attention is also called to Sec. 4; p. 5, of the amended school laws, which provides that teachers who close their schools to attend the institute shall not forfeit their wages during the time they are in attendance. In order that arrangements may be made for their accommodation, it is desired that all who can attend should notify the Secretary at Tecumseh on or before Aug. 1st.

Please remember that the institute will be organized on Monday, Aug. 6th, at 9 A.M., and that it will not close until Friday evening, Aug. 17th.

August 18th there will be a special public examination of teachers at Dean's Opera House, Adrian.

D. A. HAMMOND,
Secretary Board of Examiners.

We expect to be able to publish the program in full next week.

Adrian Record: The Tecumseh HERALD asks, "what is a Mother Hubbard wrapper?" We can't say exactly, but there is no harm in worshiping it; it isn't in the image of anything that was ever made, and therefore does not come within the scriptural prohibition. It looks like one of Hogan's balloons, after three-fourths of the gas has leaked out, and by careful poking around a woman may very often be found inside of it.

The new armory of Co. C, in Slayton & Son's building is a model of convenience. The main drill room is large enough, and the two ante-rooms for cupboards and other furniture are just what was needed. We doubt whether a company in the first regiment has a better armory.

Mr. Albert Bath, of England, during his recent visit here left for our perusal a copy of the Mark Lane Express, which is the highest authority in England upon the grain trade and agricultural topics. It is an immense paper in more senses than one.

COUNTY CONDENSATIONS.

This storm will make the farmers look blue.

The Morenci Exchange has received a new coat of paint.

The threshing machine will now begin to put in its work.

Clinton is adopting the fashion of tearing away the door yard fences.

Port Smith, of Clinton, lost a valuable horse last week by the bursting of a blood vessel.

A public ball and festival will be held to-morrow evening for the benefit of the Adrian band.

John Smith & Son and B. O. Randall, of Clinton, import their crockery direct from England.

The Deerfield Record says the force of men who run the Monroe branch passenger train, are known as the linen duster gang.

The recent rains have softened the soil of wheat fields to such an extent that the cradle will take the place of the binder in many places.

The Carpenter family of Blissfield had a happy reunion in that village on Wednesday of last week, which was the 80th birthday of the reverend Joseph Carpenter. 'Tis a half century since he came to Blissfield.

Hudson Post: D. W. Kennedy went from Morenci to the eastern market with a shipment of hogs, from which he realized $905.45. On the way home he met a couple of three-card monte men, who scooped in his pile.

Morenci Observer: During the entire existence of the prohibitory law in this state, covering a period of 23 years, the little village of Canandaigua, had from two to four saloons, and none whatever since the enactment of the tax law.

Deerfield Record: Deerfield takes the cake as the sporting town of the county. Glass ball shoots and bowery dances every Saturday afternoon and night, with base ball games and horse races sandwiched in through the week, make lively times.

Adrian Times: There has now been received at the industrial home for girls, 134 candidates for reform, in all. Of these two have been returned as they were not sent under proper circumstances, two have died, eleven are on ticket of leave, and 119 are now in the institution.

Blissfield Advance: Frank Dent attempted to board the caboose of a moving train Sunday afternoon when he was swung around, his head striking the brake-rod and throwing him backward on the track. He was stunned by the fall, and lay unconscious until picked up by friends and carried into the station, where he soon revived. It was said too much tangle-leg was the cause of the young man's mishap.

Hudson Post: A wagon containing a historical load went from Hudson to Rollin a few days ago, it being nothing more or less than the safe which Billy Treadwell robbed many years ago when it was in the bank. When it was replaced at the bank with a better article, it was taken to the store of Eaton Bros., where it has been in use up to the present time, and has now been transferred to Rollin, where it has been placed in the store of Geo. Rice.

The Observer "puts it to 'em" on the telephone question as follows: When will Morenci be able to put its aggregated ear, as it were to a receiver and hear the subdued yet clear tones of the telephonically universal "hello?" Nearly every town in the county has readily accessible communication with all parts of the state. We would like to see a telephone agitation started at once—such as would result in the construction of a line. What say you, men of business?

Adrian Record: We have heard of two or three accidents from teams running away with reapers. One occurred Friday, the team becoming scared at the Wabash train, when the driver, a boy, was seriously injured. Another occurred Saturday near Holloway's. Wesley Smith, of this city, has an invention of his own, that if it was attached to reapers and mowers no such accidents could occur. The Smith attachment should be adopted by all reaper and mower manufacturers.

Degolyer Post G. A. R. of Hudson, will hold a picnic at Devils Lake on Wednesday, August 1st. Tecumseh, Adrian, Waldron, and Hillsdale posts will all be represented, and it is hoped each post will turn out in full numbers. A speaker will be selected from each post, and a general good time and grand basket picnic will be enjoyed. Degolyer post not only invites all the posts, but all old soldiers and their families and friends to participate and assist in making the occasion one of general pleasure and profit. It is expected that an organization will be formed and arrangements be made for holding annual picnics in the future.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Dundee Reporter: The line for the new railroad seems still to be an unsettled question. During the past week surveyors have been engaged in levelling and perfecting the line recently run passing just west of village limits. The line strikes the T. & A. A. road at Monroe Junction, running thence to Toledo beside that road. An agent of the company has also been here during the week endeavoring to effect the purchase of the three pieces of right of way upon the old line for which Agent Scovill failed to make satisfactory terms at time of making other purchases. Their purchase was not effected. We shall see what we shall see before long.

Battle Creek Republican: The gravel train on the T. & M. road now makes its headquarters at this city, and is at work in this vicinity levelling and grading the roadbed.

Homer Index: Laborers are at work sinking a large well near the crossing of Hillsdale and Fulton sts., for the M. & O.

Marshall Statesman: The ballasting gangs on the M. & O. are all at work and the track is being rapidly straightened up. Where the work is completed the road rides as smoothly as the best trunk line in the country, and the company may justly be proud of the line.

The water tank being built for the M. & O. railroad at Battle Creek is 16 feet high and 24 feet in diameter. Its capacity is 1600 barrels.

The Raisin Valley Reunion Association will hold its annual session on the Seminary grounds, on Friday, Aug. 10th, 1883. The exercises will begin at 2:30 P.M. Oration by Philip Hathaway, poem by Sarah Stanley, to be followed by supper in the grove.

The telegraph strike is proving a great benefit to the telephone service. Business over the state lines has doubled at the Detroit office during the past week, and has largely increased at all offices throughout the state.

Frank Silvers will take in the Central Michigan Trotting Circuit, commencing next week at Marshall, with his horse, Banker Rothchilds.

W. R. Wooden has accepted a position as collector and bookkeeper for a large firm at Battle Creek.

HOPE.

Men speak and dream with keen delight
Of some sure-coming better day;
To gain the happy golden height
All madly press the crowded way.
The world grows old and young by turns,
But human hope unchanging burns.

Hope leads the infant forth to life,
And gaily plumes the boyish head,
Her spell lures youth to manly strife,
Nor leaves the aspirant dying bed;
And when life's over, even from the tomb
Hope springs to shed her brightest bloom.

All is not vain illusion—say
Mere fancy, sprung from error's brain;
"You will not claim the life we know"
A darker life man shall attain;
And what those dwell in realms of bliss
Shall never the hope-born of hope.

Little Red Noses.

How, that night, I did wish I had taken the other day! It was the first night of a long drought in winter, and even men in overcoats turned sharply corners to get out of the biting blast. Two children, a boy and girl, neither over nine years old, stood [illegible] on Monroe avenue, wishing to go to their lonely home but dreading the wind. They crept closer and closer to each other, and their chins quivered and their noses grew red as they grew colder. Hundreds of men and women passed up and down without care but, by and by, along came a whistling jovial lad of fourteen, who was swinging his boot-black's kit by a strap and picking up the steps of some clog-dance. He saw the shivering bits of humanity when others were blind, and halting before them with a jingle-jangle of his heels and a toss of his box, he called out:

"Kim, borrow them 'ere chips o' your'n about an hour?

"Yes, ma'am, demurely replied the girl.

"Kim, eh?—ho! ho! That's a give-a-way on me! Be you chickens cold?"

"Yes, ma'am," she answered again.

"And that 'ere cub is your brother, I spose? Well, when I m cold I git warm. What do you do—freeze?"

"Yes, ma'am, if you please," she replied.

"If I please—ha! ha!—nother give-a-way on me! Well, you autumn leaves come along with me. I hain't got no influence on the weather, but I kim smell a hot stove as far off as the next shiner in this town. Come right over to this store."

He led the way across the street and into an office where there was a fire. He had placed chairs for them when a man came in from a back room, and said:

"What do you children want here?"

"Want some of this waste hotness," bluntly replied the shiner. "These 'ere cubs is nigh froze to death, and I brought 'em here to thaw out.

"And we won't even look at you, nor cough, nor sneeze!" added the little girl as she saw a frown on the man's face.

"That's richness; there's innocence!" laughed the shiner, and the man's face cleared and he poked up the fire and said they could sit nearer.

"S'pose m'n, you chip in and buy 'em suumthin to stay their stomachs?" suggested shiner, all of a sudden. Tell you what, some of the children in this town don't have a square meal any more'n you'n me wear diamonds. Little gal, are you hungry?"

"Yes ma'am, if you won't be mad at us," she replied.

The man stood irresolute, but shiner went down into his pocket, rattled around and said:

"Here's ten cents that says they're hungry!"

"Well, I'll give as much," replied the man. "You go and buy something and they can sit here and eat it."

Shiner bought crackers and cheese, and the children ate until he felt obliged to say:

"Now, you cubs, go a leetle bit slow and save the rest for supper. Kin ye find the way home alone?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"And do you feel as warm as 'taterbugs tolled up in wool?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"All right then. We're dead to rights obliged to this man, and I'll black his boots beside. You'd better run along home now. What's ye goin' to tell yer mother?"

"I'll tell her we come awful near going to Heaven, and my little brother he thanks you too, and now we'll go, and—and nank you ma'am, ever so many times, good bye!"

The man looked after them through the window with softer lines in his face than had been there for months. The boy stood outside on the walk and watched until they had turned a corner, and then exclaimed:

"Phew! but I most feel that I was interfered to that gal!"—Detroit Free Press

Sleep.

There is no danger of wearing this subject threadbare, for people are beginning to wake up to the fact that plenty of sleep is requisite to health, particularly in the case of brain workers. The more sleep the brain gets the better does the brain work. All great brain-workers have been great sleepers. Sir Walter Scott never could do with less than 10 hours sleep. A Bell may want eight hours, as George III also, but a philosopher wants nine. Those who have been the greatest generals are the men who could sleep at will. It was thus with Wellington and Napoleon. The greatest speakers in the house of commons have been the men who could go to sleep as much as they liked. This explained the juvenility of the aged Palmerston. Sleep is in many cases the best of medicine. A friend says that he treated himself for a fever. He went to bed with a pitcher of lemonade. He drank and slept, drank and slept until he was well again. When you take to your bed take all the sleep you can out of your bedstead, even although, to quote Dick Swiveller's saying, you may have to pay for a double bedded room, confessing that you have taken a most unreasonable amount of sleep out of a single bed: you will be banking a whole store of recuperative energy. It will be safe to say of any man that if he sleep well he will do well.

A New York clergyman, in a lecture on "Modern Courtship," told his audience that young ladies and gentlemen should be entirely frank in their courtship; they should describe to each other their weak points. Many of the young people of his audience concluded to take his advice, and the result was that twenty-two engagements were broken between the young men and women of that neighborhood.

The Young Lawyer's First Case.

The young lawyer conducting his first case before a jury is worthy of the deepest commiseration. Take him, for instance, in the criminal court, before which he has a case. While the prosecuting attorney is tying the first witness in bowknots and untying him again, the amateur sits listening, but endeavoring to look as unconcerned as a marble statue in a thunder storm. He throws in stand objections every time he thinks he sees a hold, and as each one is overruled by the court he gets on a stern look, as much as to say "I'll knock the wind out of that in the upper court." When the prosecutor is by an old, able attorney, dryly says, "Take the witness," the youthful aspirant trembles a little and endeavors to swallow something that is sticking in his throat. He feels that every eye in the room is upon him, and that they are as "hot as blazes."

He fires a few initatory questions at the witness, and warms as he proceeds, until he is brought up standing by "Oh! your Honor, we object to such irrelevant questions," followed by a few scathing remarks from the prosecutor. The court sustains the objection, and advises the young lawyer to keep within bounds, which sets him to wondering where in the thunder the bounds are. Objection follows objection, and each one is promptly sustained. He wonders why it is that a free and independent people will tolerate such one-sided justice. He plunges ahead blindly now, until he becomes so confused that he does not know whether he is a practicing attorey with a gilt sign, or a flywheel on a steam wood-saw. Finally he runs out of questions, and with a sigh of relief or something tells the witness, "That's all." So he grinds through, and at last the prosecutor rises and proceeds to address the jury in a masterly style. As he progresses he picks up all the evidence adduced by the defense into particles fine enough to be incorporated into codfish balls. The youthful Blackstone wrestler begins to feel uneasy as his mind reverts to the fact that in a few moments he must deliver his maiden speech.

He wishes the prosecutor would hold his grip and keep it until time to adjourn court, feeling satisfied that he could make a splendid speech the next day after a night's fighting on the evidence. He tries to remember what the witnesses swore to, but cannot recall the evidence to save his life. The prosecutor finally winds with a grand peroration, and as he says: "And in conclusion, gentlemen of the jury," the youth nervously fingers his moustache, and wishes he had never begun the abominable business. Cold chills are tingering him all over the back, as if measuring him for a shirt, and his spinal column acts as if it was tired and wanted to sit down a while. Like Banquo's ghost, the lump in his throat won't stay down, by an obstinate majority, and he swallows it and wonders what he is going to say and how long it will take him to say it. As the prosecutor calmly takes his seat, the young lawyer rises and moves to the front. He dares not look at the audience, and tries to imagine there is no one in the room but himself and the twelve sphynx-like forms in the jury box. The eyes of each juror are fixed upon him, and he would almost relinquish his hope of heaven to some one would raise a cry of fire to divert their attention until he gets a start.

Finally he shrugs his shoulders and manages to remark, "Gentlemen of the (swallows) jury." Very good. He then surveys them a moment, and every man in the box thinks he is endeavoring to read their thoughts; but he isn't. He is wishing to gracious he could read his own thoughts. At last he strikes out and goes for them about their intelligent looks, and how he feels that his client's interests are safe in their hands. At the same time he feels serious doubts as to their safety in his own hands. He worries through his speech with an average of two swallows at that lump to the sentence. The prosecutor closes the argument, and the case goes to the jury, who retire to a secluded room to chew tobacco, and ask each other what they thought of it. It so happened that the flimsy testimony against the accused warrants a verdict of "not guilty;" whereupon the amateur grasps his client's hand and whispers: "It was a hard fight but I got you out of it!" Then he rises loads up enough law books to swamp a mud scow, casts a triumphant look at the prosecuting attorney, who smiles pleasantly in return, and walks slowly and majestically down the aisle to the door with as much dignity as if he owned a Western railroad. Oh, you can't deny it, even you old veterans—you've all been there!

The milk is delivered at the factory and strained into vats as for other cheese. It is then raised to a temperature of 96 degrees Fahrenheit, when enough rennet is added to coagulate the mass in about thirty minutes. The curd is then cut crosswise and lengthwise of the vat with a gang of steel curd-knives. Soon after it is turned with tin shovels frequently for an hour, when it is left for the whey to settle: if the curd is of the proper consistency, about two-thirds of the whey is removed. The curd is now ready for the molds into which it is dipped, the whey remaining escaping through the perforated sides of the molds. After the curd has hardened to a proper degree, it is placed upon a table slightly inclined, and the whey drains off, care being taken that the cheese retains the form of the molds. Then they are turned several times, and finally are ready to receive the salt, which is rubbed in by hand, morning and evening, for four days, thus gradually hardening, until they can be taken to the curing room, where the bricks of cheese are set on edge close together. After being properly cured, they are then packed for market. But prices for this cheese are also fluctuating, and the market or dealer frequently needs to store. His cheese in a room of uniform temperature to preserve it fresh, and prevent it from becoming over-ripe. For this purpose large and deep vaults and cellars are built, where the air is neither too hot nor too cold—and the cheese will keep well summer or winter. It is made with less expense than American cheese, its price is less fluctuating, and hence the milk of our dairymen is bought largely by dealers and made up by their employes. Proprietors pay, we are informed, 8 cents per gallon for milk to be made into Limburger, or the price of milk will be regulated by the price received for American cheese at the factory.

Gallant Rescues.

There can be something heroic in a medicine as well as in individuals. Burdock Blood Bitters have effected many a gallant rescue among the suffering sick. Thousands have escaped the miseries of dyspepsia and nervous debility through the use of this wonderful medicine. It is emphatically the best stomach and blood bitter in the world.

Tenderness of Old Hickory.

In the days of his youthful vigor, General Jackson was fond of what Dryden calls "a knock-down argument—a word and a blow." But when age and office had modified his temper, he omitted the blow, though his words were still as hard as cannon balls. Once, while President, he summed up the Websterian argument against nullification in this style:

"If this is to go on," he said to Gen. Sam Dale, his old courier during the New Orleans campaign, "our country will be like a bag of meal with both ends open. Pick it up in the middle or endwise, and it will run out. I must tie the bag and save the country! By the God of heaven, I will uphold the laws, he continued, striding across the room, brandishing a long pipe.

"They shall go right, sir," exclaimed the President, shivering his pipe upon the table. "Old Hickory," as his admirers named him, was but a tender sapling when his emotional nature was touched. The slightest reference to his dead wife caused him to bow in grief.

"Sam," he said, at this same interview, "you have been true to your country, but you have made one mistake in life. You are now old and solitary, and without a bosom friend or family to comfort you. God has called mine away. But all I have achieved—fame, power, everything—would I exchange if she could be restored to me for a moment."

Late one night, the President's private secretary, wishing to consult him about a letter to be sent off in the early mail, tapped at his chamber door. On entering, he found the President sitting, undressed, at a little table on which rested his wife's miniature, propped up against several volumes. Between him and the picture lay her prayer-book.

The last thing the iron man did at night was to read in her book, with her miniature before him. During the day he wore the picture on his heart, suspended from his neck by a strong black cord.

The worshippers of Napoleon mention a delicate act of devotion done by him. On being elected First Consul he jumped into a carriage and was whirled away to Josephine, that, he might be first to tell her the good news. But in nine years Josephine was a cast-off wife.

Gen. Jackson made his dead wife a living presence. At his death he willed his property, as he thought she would wish it devised, to his adopted son. The son had shown himself an unsuccessful business man, and a friend suggested that the property be secured to the son's wife.

"No," said the general, "that would show a want of confidence. If she," pointing to the tomb in the garden, "were alive, she would wish him to have it all, and to me her wish is law."

The woman whose wish was law to the stern-willed man had been dead seventeen years.—Youth's Companion.

Remedies for Emergencies.

Very few young mothers are able to control their nerves so completely as to keep from being startled when confronted with a cut finger with dripping blood, and the loud cries which announce a catastrophe. Sometimes she cannot collect her thoughts sufficiently to recall any of the good remedies with which she is familiar. One way to avoid this is to write out a list of help in trouble, and tack it upon the door of your room, after the manner of hotel regulations.

There is nothing better for a cut than powdered resin. Get a few cents' worth, pound it until it is quite fine, and then put it in an empty, clean pepper or spice box with perforated top; then you can easily sift it out on the cut; put a soft cloth around the injured member, and wet it with cold water once in a while. It will prevent inflammation and soreness.

In doing up a burn, the main point is to keep the air from it. If sweet oil and cotton are not at hand, take a cloth and spread dry flour over it, and wrap the burned part in it.

It is always well to have some simple remedies in the house, where you can get them without a moment's loss of time: a little bottle of peppermint, in case of colic; chlorate of potash for sore throat; pepsin for indigestion, and a bottle of pure brandy. Have them so arranged that you could go to them in the dark and reach the right one, but be sure you never do it, even if you know they have not been disturbed; always light a lamp or the gas, and make sure you have what you are after. Remember that pistols are always loaded, and that poison may be put in the place of peppermint.

A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters, as it is not a whiskey drink. It is more like the old-fashioned bone-set tea, that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right, try Hop Bitters.—Nundn News.

She Spelled John "G-o-n."

She had grown to womanhood in a rural home, and, by chance or choice, her father had removed to East Nashville. She was pretty and pleasant, which two qualities rendered her an attractive magnet, and she drew a number of the young men, who are adorers of beauty, around her. One of the gents, seizing time by the forelock, prepared his declaration of love, and thinking it might be an incentive to his success, prefaced his declaration with a description of her future home which she would be led to, and, to make the picture grand, he borrowed Claude Melnotte's language, descriptive of his palace by Lake Como. He had proceeded with his portrait until he came to—

"I would have no friends to share my home
We would read no books that were not tales of love"

when she gently interrupted him, and gazing with tearful eyes into his, she implored him to never again to wound her feelings thus, and added: "John, I cannot read. I never went to school a day in my life—I know not no book, love—nor can I even spell but one word correctly, and that is your dear name, 'G-o-n,' and mother, poor soul, learned me that."

ORANGES AND FLORIDA.

Better than Breezes and Blossoms—Under a New Flag.

Even the balmy air and orange groves of Florida fail to keep its people full of happiness and comfort. Art must help nature everywhere—in the tropics as among the pines of the North. "And chief among the blessings which are adapted to all zones," writes Dr. J. G. Wallace, of Fort Dade, Fla., "is Parker's Tonic. It seems to have the world for a field, and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seems to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved me personally of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purifier and invigorator.

Messrs. Hiscox & Co., call especial attention to the fact that after April 16, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply, Parker's Tonic. The word "Ginger" is dropped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic, we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

Father and Sons.

"If you wish to train up your child in the way he should go," just skirmish ahead on that line yourself," said wise Josh Billings, and if he was not addressing fathers or thinking of boys, he ought to have been. The writer was present once at a social religious meeting, when a very large man with a very large nose, and no doubt a very large heart, also, arose and used his space of time to tell what a good mother he had, and how her influence had guided him, and finished with an exortation to all mothers to make good men of their boys.

The divines followed in a similar strain and ended with the same exhortation, and all the brethren settled themselves more comfortably into their seats, and all the sisters bowed their heads with meek faces as if sweetly taking up the heavy burden thus flatteringly laid upon their frail shoulders. No, not all; for one sat bolt upright, too indignant for speech, to see those great broad-shouldered men thus calmly shirking the greatest responsibility God ever called them to bear.

Because some mothers blessed with mighty faith and powerful will, have borne their sons triumphantly over the quicksands of youthful temptations and planted their feet firmly on the pleasant upland of righteous manhood, shall it be demanded of every frail woman to whom God has given a son, that she do the same? No; with equal justice it might be demanded of every woman that she write books like Mrs. Stowe, entrance large audiences like Miss Willard and Anna Dickenson, or be a brilliant newspaper correspondent like Mary Clemmer.

What weight has a mother's word when weighed against a father's example? The mother says: "My son, do not smoke; it is bad for your health, bad for the purse, bad for the morals, and the pleasure it affords is trifling compared to the evil it works."

"What does mother know about smoking?" reasons the boy; "she never smokes; father smokes, and I am going to too."

"Don't spend your evenings about the bar-room and village store," pleads the troubled mother; "the conversation there is not such as I wish you to listen to."

"What does mother know about bar-room talk?" questions the boy; "she is at home rocking the baby or darning stockings; father is there, and I'm going."

One out-spoken ten-year-old boy said: "I like my mother well enough; but I think father is a great deal smarter;" and he expressed the feeling of the average boy when he enters his teens. Now, which parent is likely to have most influence in forming the character of that son?

"I'll take what father takes," said the boy at the hotel dinner table, and boys are taking what their fathers take all the world over.

A father and son were clambering up the rough, steep sides of a mountain, when the father paused to decide which of many paths to take; the boy said: "Be sure to choose a good path, father, for I am coming right behind you."

Fathers, upon the hillside of life, be sure you choose a "good path," for your sons are just behind, and almost certain to follow in your footsteps. If the bewitching voice of pleasure entices you into by-paths of self-indulgence and sin, remember that where you trip he will stumble, and the same foul mire that soils your raiment will engulf him. But if you choose to walk the pleasant highways of temperance, virtue and Christian manliness, he shall keep even step with you, and at last dwell in peace at your side.

IT is estimated that two billion matches are consumed every day in Europe. Assuming that each several act of ignition occupies the brief space of a second, which is less than the actual time taken, a mathematical editor has figured out that 63 years of precious time is occupied daily in the scraping process. In days this time would amount to about 23,000, or 555,000 hours.

THERE is nothing new under the sun. Whenever a reader of this paper calls another man "a brick" in a complimentary way, he is but repeating what was said thousands of years ago by a Spartan king. PLUTARCH says, an ambassador from Epirus was shown by King Agesilaus of parta over his capital, and expressed surprise at the absence of walls and fortifications. "Come to morrow," quoth the king, "and I will show you our walls." On the morrow he showed him an array of 10,000 men, remarking, "each one is a brick."

Better than $10,000.

"I spent over $10,000 in 23 years," said Major H. W. Hines, of Boston, Mass., "in being doctored for epilepsy. I employed the best physicians in New Orleans, St. Louis, N. York, Phila., Boston, London and Paris, but to no purpose. Samaritan Nervine has cured me entirely." $1.50.

Says the Index-Appeal, of Petersburg, Va.: "Miles Darden, probably the largest man on record, born in North Carolina in 1798, died in Henderson county, Tenn., January 23d, 1857. He was seven feet and six inches high, and in 1845 weighed 871 pounds. At his death his weight was a little over 1,000 pounds."

Escaped The Rope.

A THRILLING APPEAL WHICH SAVED A LIFE.

One hot day in July, 1860, a herdsman was moving his cattle to a new ranch further north, near Helena, Texas, and passing down the banks of a stream, his cattle became mixed with other cattle that were grazing in the valley, and some of them failed to be separated. The next day, about noon, a band of about a dozen mounted Texan rangers overtook the herdsman, and demanded their cattle, which they said were stolen. It was before the days of law and court-houses in Texas, and one had better kill five men than to steal a mule worth $5, and the herdsman knew it. He tried to explain, but they told him to cut it short. He offered to turn over all the cattle not his own, but they laughed at this proposition, and hinted that they usually confiscated the whole herd, and left the thief hanging on the tree as a warning to all others in like cases.

The poor fellow was completely overcome. They consulted apart a few moments, and then told him if he had any explanations to make or business to do, they would allow him ten minutes to do so and defend himself.

He turned to the rough faces and commenced: "How many of you have wives?" Two or three nodded. "How many of you have children?" They nodded again.

"Then I know who I'm talking to, and you'll hear me." And he continued: "I never stole any cattle; I have lived in these parts over three years. I came from New Hampshire; I failed there in the fall of '57, during the panic; I have been saving; I have lived on hard fare; I have slept on the ground; I have no home here, my family remain in the East, for I go from place to place; these clothes I wear are rough, and I am a hard looking customer; but this is a hard country, days seem like months to me, and the months like years; married men, you know that but for the letters from home"—here he pulled out a handful of well-worn envelopes and letters from his wife—"I should get discouraged. I have paid part of my debts. Here are my receipts," and he unfolded the letters of acknowledgment. "I expected to sell out and go home in November. Here is the testament my good mother gave me; here is my little girl's picture." And he kissed it tenderly, and continued: "Now, men, if you have concluded to kill me for what I am innocent of, send these home, and send as much as you can from the cattle when I'm dead. Can't you send half the value? My family will need it."

"Hold on, now; stop right thar," said a rough ranger. "Now, I say, boys," he continued, "I say, let him go. Give us your hand, old boy; that picture and them letters did the business. You're lucky, mind ye."

"We'll do more than that," said a man with a big heart, in Texan garb, and carrying the customary brace of pistols in his belt; "let's buy his cattle here, and let him go."

They did; and when the money was paid over, and the man about ready to start, he could not stand. The long strain of hopes and fears, being away from home under such trying circumstances, the sudden deliverance from death, had combined to render him helpless as a child. He sank to the ground completely overcome. An hour later, however, he left on horseback for the nearest stage-route; and as they shook hands and bade him good-by, they looked the happiest band of men I ever saw.

Building Air-Castles.

The prodigies of good we should accomplish under certain circumstances are something marvelous. If we possessed the money of this one, the leisure of another, the strength and talent of a third, the firm health of our neighbor, the education of our first cousin, the experience of this friend, or the happy temperament of that, mankind would be largely benefited by our example, we fondly believe. We build castles with materials belonging to others, which would be a perpetual rebuke if they could only descry the towers thereof against their mental horizon. It is a kind of amelioration of our own felicities and imbecilities to perceive how little the superior conditions of our fellows have availed them. We are not glad that they have wrapped their talent in a napkin, instead of putting it out at interest; but we fancy it excuses our own shortcomings in a degree. If they failed with such odds in their favor, what could be expected of us, already overweighted for the contest by poverty, by infirmity, or by want of proper training? If we were as rich, for instance, as our great uncle Cresus, how differently we should employ our surplus income! We should send anonymous bank-bills to genteel and indigent families we wot of; we should increase the welfare of certain clergymen; we should replenish the coal-bins of widowed washerwomen, we should order no end of water-color drawings from the young women who are trying to keep their heads above water; we should even do violence to our esthetic taste and purchase some of the crude works of artists not born to fame; we should plan pleasant surprises for poor shop-girls and teachers; we should pay seamstresses a little more than they demand, and we should remember the birthdays of our poor relations. The value of our gifts should be great in proportion to the slender means of the recipient. We should not only educate certain youths who show signs of talent, but lend a helping hand to those who gave no sign, as being in the greater need of developement, it may be. We should, moreover, have no pickets up dinners, nor wear patched garments, while the naked and hungry are always with us. What languages we should master, what sciences we should make our own, if we possessed the leisure of certain acquaintances! Does any flower blossom whose times and seasons we should not know? or any bird fly whose halts and notes we should not recognize? What acquaintances we might cultivate with the literature of the wide world, and what time might we not lend to the teachings of others! But the chief danger in thus considering the mote of our neighbor's eye lies in the fact that we are apt to become so engrossed in the analysis as to ignore the responsibilities of our own position, and leave room for others, even less favored of fortune than ourselves, to find similar causes of dissatisfaction in the use of our own advantages.

The Great Salt Lake.

Four barrels of water of the Great Salt Lake will leave, after evaporation, nearly a barrel of salt. The lake was discovered in the year 1820, and no outlet from it has yet been ascertained. Four or five large streams empty into it, and the fact of its still retaining its saline properties seems to point to the conclusion that there exists some secret bed of saline deposit over which its waters flow, and that thus they continue salt; for, although the lake may be, but the residue of an immense sea which once covered the whole of this region, yet, by its continuing so salt with the amount of fresh water poured into it constantly, the idea of the existence of some such deposit from which it receives its supply seems very probable.

For many years the lake gradually rose, but in 1879 it receded some two or three feet—a most unusual occurrence—owing to the exceptionally warm summer.

There are no fish in the lake, but myriads of small flies cover its surface. The buoyancy of the water is so great that it is not at all an easy matter to drown in it. The entire length of Salt Lake is eighty-five miles, and its breadth forty-five miles. Compared with the Dead Sea, the Great Salt Lake is longer by forty-three miles, and broader by thirty-five.

Beecher's Bad Head.

For two months in the year Henry Ward Beecher can't preach. In August and September he takes his vacation and endures the onset of the hay fever. And it is, so he says, something terrible and tremendous. A man with hay fever isn't accountable for his actions. He is merely a wild beast—frantic with snuffing, sneezing and headache. His eyes are red and so is his nose. Every nerve in his skull thrills with distress and his head is a fountain of tears. He lives only to fly from seaside to mountain-top in search of relief.

And yet, whether we call this form of Catarrh hay-fever, rose-fever, hay-cold or rose-cold, Ely's Cream Balm will cure it. This remedy is simple, pleasant and easy of application. Placed in the nostrils it penetrates and soothes the affected parts at once, restores the impaired senses and creates healthy secretions in cases of the longest standing. You cannot run away from hay fever, but you can drive it from you by using Ely's Cream Balm.

"Well, miss, said a knight of the birch rod, "can you decline a kiss?" "Yes, sir," said the girl, dropping a perplexed courtesy. "I can, but I hate to."

Scipio, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1879.

I am the pastor of the Baptist Church here, and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in many chronic cases. Over a year ago I recomended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has become thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

REV. E. R. WARREN.

In building a chimney, put a quantity of salt into the mortar with which the intercourses of brick are to be laid. The effect is that there will never be any accumulation of soot in that chimney. The philosophy is thus stated: the salt in the portion of mortar which is exposed absorbs moisture from the atmosphere every damp day. The soot thus becoming damp, falls down in the fireplace. This is an English discovery. It is used with success in Canada.

Well Rewarded.

A liberal reward will be paid to any party who will produce a case of liver, kidney or stomach complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure. Bring them along, it will cost you nothing for the medicine if it fails to cure you, and you will be well rewarded for your trouble besides. All blood disease, billiousness, jaundice, constipation and general debility are quickly cured. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. Price only 50 cts per bottle.

A QUEEN OF THE STAGE.

"Her Second Love," and the Importan Secret She Reveals for the Benefit of Women.

(New York World.)

Several years ago the American public were aroused by the entree upon the stage of a little lady who had been previously but little announced. She was one of an innumerable number of aspirants for public favor and had no instrumentality, aside from her own talents to cause recognition. In spite of this fact, however, she quickly achieved a warm place in the heart of the public which she has continued to hold ever since. When it was announced, therefore, that Miss Maude Granger would star the coming season in the play "Her Second Love," written [illegible] Stevens, it was only natural that unnatural interest should be manifested [illegible] in theatrical circles, but in other [illegible] This was specially the case, as it was known that Miss Granger had, for the past year, been in exceedingly delicate health, and the determination to star in a strong emotional play was the more surprising. One of the staff of this paper was accordingly deputized to see the popular lady and verify the rumor or announce its incorrectness.

Miss Granger's countenance is familiar to nearly every one in the United States. It is a face once seen never to be forgotten. Features remarkable in their outline and contour are surmounted by a pair of large and deep eyes indicative of the greatest soul power. It is easy to see where Miss Granger obtains the ability to portray characters of the most emotional nature. She possesses within herself the elements of feeling without which no emotion can be conveyed to an audience. The man of news found the lady at her home in this city and was accorded a quiet welcome. It was evident at once that she was in greatly improved health, which the expression and color of her countenance both indicated.

"Is it true Miss Granger that you contemplate a starring tour the coming season?"

"Yes, indeed. My season begins in Chicago on the 19th of July. From there I go to San Francisco and then play the remainder of the season thro' the eastern and western states."

"Are you confident your health will permit such an undertaking?"

A ringing laugh was the first reply to this question, after which she said:

"Certainly. It is true I have been ill for the past two years, but now I am wholly recovered. Few people can have any idea of the strain a conscientious actress undergoes in essaying an emotional part. It is necessary to put one's whole soul into the work in order to rightly portray the character. This necessitates an utter abandonment of one's personality and an assumption of the character portrayed. If this is an emotional part it is necessary to feel the same emotions the part is supposed to feel. For more than a year I actually cried each night in certain passages of a part I was playing. The audience considered it art. Probably it was, but those were none the less real tears and the effect was none the less trying upon my health."

"But do you anticipate avoiding this in the future?"

"Not in the least. I expect to have just as great a strain as before but with restored health and a knowledge of how to retain it I do not fear."

"You speak of a knowledge of how to retain health." Will you please explain what you mean by that?"

"You must be aware that women by their very natures are subject to troubles and afflictions unknown to the sterner sex. The name of these troubles is legion, but in whatever form they may come they are weaknesses which interfere with every ambition and hope in life. I believe thousands of noble women are to-day suffering agonies of which even their best friends and relatives know little or nothing, and when I reflect upon it I confess it makes me sad. Now all this misery arises largely from an ignorance of the laws of life or a neglect to carefully observe them. I speak from the depths of a bitter experience in saying this, and I am thankful I know the means of restoration, and how to remain in perfect health."

"Please explain more fully."

"Well, I have found a remedy which seems specially adopted for this very purpose. It is pure and palatable and controls the health and life as, I believe, nothing else will. It is really invaluable and if all the women in America were to use it I am quite sure most of the suffering and many deaths might be avoided."

"What is this wonderful remedy?"

"Warner's Safe Cure."

"And you use it?"

"Constantly."

"And hence believe you will be able to go through the coming season successfully?"

"I am quite certain of it."

"A few questions more, Miss Granger. Will you please give me a list of the parts you have created and the plays you have taken part in since your first appearance in public?"

"I first played for some time with the amateurs in New York and Brooklyn. I then went to the Union Square for two seasons, after that to the Boston Globe for one season and then to Booth's theater in this city. Next I supported John McCullough and afterwards starred in Juliet, Camille, Rosalind, etc. Subsequently I created the part of Cicely Blane in the Galley Slave and also starred in Two Nights in Rome, playing the part of Antonia. The past year I have been playing in the Planter's Wife and the coming season, as I have said, will be devoted to Her Second Love."

As the writer was returning home he fell into a train of musing and wondered if all the women in this land who are suffering could only know Miss Granger's experience and the remarkable results achieved by the pure remedy she used, how much suffering might be avoided and how much happiness secured.

The Home Atmosphere.

The atmosphere of the household—which either converts to Christ or perverts to fashion, folly and impiety—is commonly created by the parents. They are responsible for it. If the whole trend of household talk and thought and ambition runs toward money-making or social convivialities, or general godliness of any kind, it is the father and mother who give the pith. Nowhere is it so difficult to make the best preaching or the best Sunday-school teaching effective on character as in the miasmatic air of such a home. As soon expect to rear oranges in Lapland or grow sugar cane in Labrador as to rear plants of grace in so godless an atmosphere. The parental influence penetrates through the house with as subtile poison as escaping gas from an ill-built furnace. As Dr. Bushnell has richly said in his incomparable book on "Christian Nurture": "Whatever are the parents' humble, the children are found sulfering the wood. They help as either appendages or accessories." If the father begins the Sabbath with some secular Sunday newspaper, the family will help him read it. If the parents go irregularly to God's house, the children will hardly care to go at all. "If the mother is a scandalmonger, she will make her children tattlers and eavesdroppers. If she directs her servants to say at the door that she is 'not at home,' the children will learn to be polite liars." If the father puts a decanter on his table, the boys will soon begin to practice with the fatal glass. That rich father who disinherited a son for drunkenness, and in the same will bequeathed his wine-cellar to certain heirs, gave a very palpable proof of the home atmosphere which had poisoned the poor boy. Parental provocations and ill-temper sour the very air of many households, so that the children can hardly escape being cross, snappish and irritable. How can piety breathe in such an air? How can a family be trained up in the knowledge of God's word, when the book of books is seldom opened and the spirit of its instructions is no more known than in the house of a Mussulman? Even in the families of many professors of religion I do not look for any conversions, for I know that the influence of the most faithful discourses will be destroyed by the malaria of the home. It was the atmosphere of Elkanah's and Hannah's Godly house that produced a Samuel. It was the wretched air of Eli's house which ruined Hophni and Phineas.

This subject has a wide sweep. There are sudden changes in the circumstances that affect character as powerfully as changes in climate affect bodily health. The rapid accumulation of wealth is carrying some Christians now up into a rarefied atmosphere, where it is very hard to maintain their humility, their spiritual-mindedness and self-denial. Their new associations endanger their piety; but they need not destroy it. Some Christians grow rich and grow in grace at the same time.

Some civillians go into the foul atmosphere of politics, and preserve their Christian purity. Good men ought to go into political stations and make themselves felt in all our civil affairs. They ought to purify unclean atmospheres. Daniel was Prime Minister in idolotrous and voluptuous Babylon. Prayer was his protector. So may a pure child go into the heated atmosphere of trade, or the highly rarefied air of wealth, or the sin-polluted air of city life, or anywhere else, safely, if he only carry Christ in his heart and keep the honor of Christ ever before his eyes. Jesus does not mean to take his disciples out of the world; but he is able to keep them from the world's contamination.—New York Independent.

Do Your Own Fishing.

There was a volume of wisdom in the advice of the elder man to the younger, when wishing for fish, not to stand idly looking at others, but get a line, cut a pole, dig bait and "pitch in."

No man ever got ahead in life by standing with starting eyes and gaping mouth and hands deeply thrust in pockets, watching others. Cutting bait and stringing fish after they are caught, and wishing, never yet amounted to anything. You have got to hold the pole yourself and angle for the best fish. The scaly swimmers wont come on shore to be caught. You must "go for them" in the most seductive fashion, and endure the labor and sweat of taking them in. Lolling on the banks in the shade will never fill your basket, and you will be certain to grow hungry for the breakfast you will gain in this manner, see if you don't.

Get up early and catch the worm and tickle the fish. Don't be everlastingly the sluggard. There is no sense in the plea that if the worm didn't make a fool of itself, and indulged in a later nap, it couldn't be caught, and the ambitious bird would return to its nest minus. The theory is comforting, no doubt, but the practice is starvation. Some worm will be out, and some bird will catch it. If one particular squirmer escape one swift darting songster, it will become the food of a second. That is a fixed fact in nature. Somebody has got to secure the prize; and one who is earliest and most intent upon the search will be the man.

Do your own fishing. Trusting to another will give you a very small share of the spoils. No such division of labor ever resulted in satisfaction or in fortune. You remember the story of the white man and the Indian and the turkey and the buzzard? Well, that's about how it will be. He who gains the prize will be likely to retain it, and he should. The mere watcher has no rightful claim. It is the catcher, who has the best title, and possession is—you know what the law says of it. Rig up your own tackle and attend to your own line. Don't be forever following the miserable example of old Rip Van Winkle, and "doing chores" for others. It don't pay. Bait your own hook and throw in your own flies. If the stream is deep, don't fear to wade; if you fear a fall. Then what you get will be your own, and there will be no grumbling about fair play.

Travelers in Egypt are surprised at the large amount of ophthalmia and blindness prevalent among the inhabitants. Want of cleanliness is the cause. An Egyptian mother, under the influence of a widely prevalent superstition, does not wash her child's eyes until eight days after birth. By that time the organ is frequently ruined. The teachers in the American and British mission schools of Cairo say that Egyptian mothers become invariably angry when urged to wash the eyes of their newly-born infants, and can rarely be persuaded to comply with a request of the kind.

An architect who built a new city hall for a western town made a botch of it, and fled to Canada, as he left word with his friends, "to remain until the affair should blow over." Next day a high wind struck the town, and his friends telegraphed him: "Come back. The affair was blown over last night."

Sickness in the Cars.

Many persons, especially ladies, are great sufferers from that form of nausea and headache known as "car sickness." A journey by rail has for them all the discomfort and suffering that an ocean voyage has to a majority of travelers. The effect of the motion of the car ranges from a mild disturbance of the stomach and an accompanying headache, to "deathly sickness," with intense nausea and complete prostration, according to the condition and sensitiveness of the victim. In the lightest form the sensation is sufficiently unpleasant to make travel by rail thoroughly disagreeable; in its worst, and by no means uncommon type, it invests this convenient method of journeying with dread and despair.

A simple and harmless preventive of car sickness has recently come to the knowledge of the writer, under circumstances that leave no doubt of its efficacy with some persons; and if the device will work equally well in other cases, a knowledge of it certainly ought to be spread abroad. It is at least worth a trial by all who suffer inconvenience in traveling. A lady who had occasion to take a short trip on the Lowell road—and she never travels by rail for pleasure—was, as is usual with her, as thoroughly sick as ever a landsman is on the "heaving deep" by the time she had ridden a dozen miles. The conductor of the palace car, who was apparently very familiar with such cases, told the sufferer's companion that a sheet of writing paper, worn next to the person, directly over the chest, was a sure preventive of the trouble, in nine cases out of ten. He had recommended it to hundreds of travelers, and rarely knew it to fail. The prescription seemed very much like a "charm"—a horse chestnut carried in the pocket to ward off rheumatism, or a red string around the neck to prevent bleeding at the nose. But it was simple and at least could do no harm. For the return trip, a sheet of common writing note paper was fastened inside the clothing, as directed. Result—a perfectly comfortable journey, without a hint of the old sickness that had for years made travel by rail a terror. It was so like a superstition, or a happy accident, however, that the lady would not accept it as real until subjected to a more severe test. This came in a day journey to New York, and that hardest trip of all—a night trip in an "alleged" sleeping car. Both were taken in triumph. The "charm" worked. And the lady writes:

"The day journey was a perpetual wonder and delight to me. I could sit up and read, and look at the landscape through which we whirled, and act as other people do. And still I didn't feel ready to confess to a cure until I had tried the sleeping car, which has always been a horror to me. But even here the 'spell' worked. I ate a hearty supper in the dining car—and kept it! Slept soundly all night, got up as comfortable, and dressed with as level a head and as steady a hand as though I had been in my own room. Read until breakfast time—a thing I had never before done on the cars—and I was hungry for my morning meal. It is really wonderful, almost too good to be real. For the first time in my life I experienced the pleasure of traveling. I wish that conductor to be specially thanked. I wish also that I knew his name. I would like to call the Lord's particular attention to his case, and don't want any mistake and have the blessing descend upon the wrong man. If this should meet the eye of the official in question, will he please consider himself thanked?"

To the scientific guessers is left the explanation of this peculiar potency of a sheet of paper. And, as a further possible contribution to the welfare of squalmish travelers, it is suggested whether the charm would not work equally well in preventing sea sickness. The experiment is certainly worth trying.

A Yankee in England.

At Liverpool, when I landed, I wanted to get on to Cardiff, so I asked my way of a gentleman in the street, and he says: "By Birkenhead;" but another comes up and he says, "That track is blocked with snow," and he gives me another direction, and in a quick nice way. I shall have some funny things to tell them home. I see a notice about tickets, and I ask for one to Cardiff and he says, "It's a pound and two." I give him two and he hands me the change. When I got into the depot I says "Where's the train?" "Here," says a sort of policeman, pointing to a row of things like large coffins. "The cars, I mean," I answers, and he says, "There's them." So I says, "Which for Cardiff?" and he says, "This; are you booked?" And I says No. "Then you can't go in unless you're booked," he says; and I began to think I had neglected something in the way of papers, and would have to go to the American consul about it. "That is very awkward," I says. "It would be very awkward for you if you got on without being booked," he answered in a way that made me feel timid; and I began to think of the high-handed style British officers have of dealing with foreigners, and so I thought I would make a clean breast of the affair and tell him I didn't know what I meant, and he says: "Come this way and I'll show you," which he being a big fellow and me a little one, and a stranger, rather increased my trepidation, and the weather so bad and all; but he only took me to the place where I had bought my ticket, and he says, "There, that's the booking-office," and I says, "What shall I do?" "Why, take your ticket," he says; and I answered that I had bought a ticket. "Why didn you say so afore?" he says; and I said, Why didn't you say so before?" and he say, "I did ask you if you was booked" and you said no;" and then I laughed, and tol him I was an American and didn't understand, and then he laughed and we had a time.—(Correspondence New York Times.

Laughing off a Duel.

Speaking of the Cash-Shannon affair, said the exchange dead, putting his feet in the waste-basket, "we need a few men like Judge Doole. He laughed out of duels with an audacious wit that compelled even the admiration of his enemies. You remember he said, when they threatened that if he didn't flat his nose would fill the columns of a newspaper, that he would offer fill ten newspapers if I put one coffin. Once he went to the field with a man who had St. Vitus's dance. His opponent was standing at his post, his whole frame jerking nervously from his malady. Dooley in the soberest manner, left his post and cutting a forked stick stuck it in the ground in front of his opponent.

"What does this mean?" asked his opponent.

"Why," says Dooley, "I want you to rest your pistol in that fork, so that you can steady your aim. If you shoot at me with that hand jerking so, you'll pepper me full of holes at the first fire!"

"Then there was a laugh all around, and the duel was put off without a day."

Opinion of Dr. Mott, late Government Chemist, on Allcock's Porous Plaster.

My investigation of Allcock's Porous Plaster shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plaster. These ingredients are so proportioned that the Allcock's Porous Plaster will not cause blisters or excessive irritation, and I find it superior to and more efficient than any other plaster.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Since the recent abatement of rain storms farmers have been unusually busy securing the hay and wheat crops.

The average Addisonian enjoys health and secular prosperity to a goodly degree of late.

Business of all kinds becomes more brisk as the season advances, and fate seems to indicate better days for our heretofore comparatively extinct villa.

Swartout's new building on the same side of the creek will be ready for "biz" in a few weeks, while others are in process of construction.

The arrivals, departures, fights and feuds of the laborers employed here by the railroad have become so numerous and varied of late that we desist from noticing them. However the work is pushing steadily forward, both at the diggings and bridge building. An old country man says, "The leetle thing rally begins to look ziph the smouk cart wuz cummin."

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

Too much business for a letter every week lately.

Work is progressing finely on the M. & O. road. Iron is being laid very lively and the locomotive whistle will wake up the Tecumseh people by the last of the week.

By the way, Tecumseh folks might enjoy a ride on the new road every day now if they would take the trouble to come down here to jump on.

An Italian had a finger so badly mutilated last week, handling iron on the new road, that amputation became necessary.

This is fine weather for garnering the wheat crop, and the farmers are improving it. The steam thresher is abroad in the land taking the wheat from the shock thereby saving the farmer the long job of stacking.

Miss Susan Covert, of Farmer Village, N. Y., died at T. H. Montgomery's last week of consumption. She came west for her health and to make a visit. The remains were taken east for interment.

MACON MUSIC.

Quarterly meeting at the Baptist church next Sunday.

Mrs. Ann Biddle died last Thursday. Notwithstanding her poor health for some time past her death was very sudden. The funeral services, conducted by Rev. J. A. De Spelder, were held at the Baptist church, Saturday.

There will be no morning services in the Reformed church for the next three Sundays; as the pastor is taking his yearly vacation. He expects to spend most of his time at his home in Holland City.

A perfect bevy of Music School ma'ams will attend the Institute. Is there not at least one "Lord of Creation" who will go with them, so that our little village will not be entirely represented by the "weaker sex?"

Peck's Sun says: "A hog drover in a Michigan town was taken in and fleeced out of nearly a thousand dollars by three-card monte sharps, and the railroad company gave him a pass home. It would seem that there are times when a railroad company does an act of kindness that would be almost as well undone. In this day and age of the world, a man who allows himself to be bilked out of that much money at gambling, ought to be compelled to work his way home. It is almost time for railroad companies, as well as every one else, to become out of patience with such men."

Michigan is getting its share of the cyclone crop this season.

FROM HARTFORD, CONN.

DEAR HERALD:

Allow me to say a few things to the many Tecumsehites whom we have learned to love, and whom we remember with so many pleasant emotions. Never did a people treat more kindly a minister and his family, and this not simply as a personal matter, but out of respect for the position. For in this age of widespread skepticism and indifference, there is yet remaining respect for the office of the ministry. Our three years in the beautiful village of Tecumseh were years of great pleasure and uniform kindness, and Tecumseh shall ever be remembered as one of the most charming towns of our Michigan. Its fine school buildings, its beautiful and well-filled churches, its magnificent drives and cheerful homes have made a picture in our minds that shall be indelible.

We are pleasantly situated in this beautiful city. It is indeed a beautiful city. Its Bushnell Park right in the center of the city furnishes a fine breathing place and is a popular resort. Band concerts are given through the summer and thousands gather to listen and promenade. Overlooking the park is the state capitol building, one of the most elaborate I ever saw. The site cost $600,000 and the building itself exceeded $2,000,000. Its dome is gilded and can be seen for miles in any direction. This is an enterprising city; the activity and push of the people is more western than eastern. It numbers about 45,000. It has many historic places. The old center church dates its organization back 250 years. Its cemetery in the rear of the church rewarded me for the time spent there the other day. Its tombstones are very antique. Some of the epitaphs are peculiar. The first white person born in the state of Connecticut is buried there. But more of this perhaps in a future letter. It is a city of churches and church goers. The churches here are well filled on the Sabbath as in Tecumseh, which speaks well for both places. Congregationalism and Episcopalianism are the strong religious ideas. Presbyterianism is feeble here comparatively, having only one church, while the Methodists have three. The time was when old Dr. Lyman Beecher was invited to come to Hartford and preach the Methodist out of the city. An invitation was once given to the dedication of a church near the city with the express understanding that no Methodists should be invited. But the world moves. The bigots are less in size and number. A few of them will be preserved for future museums. The world lives and still others flourish. The different churches fraternize and we are all glad. We shall be more glad when no barriers exist to the promotion of perfect fraternization.

We went to the sea shore last week, Sag Harbor on Long Island being made by us headquarters. This is a place of 3000 inhabitants. Originally a large number of whaling ships made this their depot, but not a whaler enters this port now. New Bedford is the rendezvous now. Sag Harbor was a port of entry before New York. We drove over to Bridgehampton to the ocean, and as we stood and looked at old ocean in his purity, and as we bathed beneath the rolling surf and filled our lungs with his invigorating air we enjoyed, and we wished that the good friends of Tecumseh could be with us. But as you were not present, we snifted and plunged for you, and carried some away for you, and bye-and-bye we will shake hands with you, and let you get a little of the vitality we gathered from the ocean, through our finger tips and in the flash of our eyes. It has been hot here as everywhere else this summer, though there has been very little sickness and few deaths comparatively. The doctors say "it is dreadfully healthy." We are all well. George is improving steadily. He walks a long distance daily with very little fatigue, and is hopeful of final recovery. This letter is long enough now and I will close by sending greetings to the boys of the HERALD office and to all our friends. Call and see us dear friends at 214 High St., Hartford, Conn.

The great wants at Michigan summer resorts are boats that will not capsize or visitors who know enough not to monkey about in a boat.

FROM NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

OTSEGO LAKE, July 26, 1883.

EDITOR HERALD:

I trust you will excuse me for trespass for a few moments upon your time, for the purpose of giving the readers of the HERALD a brief sketch of my experience for a few days. It has been my custom each year to pay my old friend, O. H. Kellogg, and his good wife, at Otsego Lake, a visit: first to please them but more particularly, to please myself.—Not being born a correspondent, nor compensating the want by any acquired capacity, if I should chance to bore your readers a little I hope they will pardon me.

Otsego Lake is a pleasant little village situated in Otsego county, on the Mackinac division of the Mich. Cen. railroad, on the eastern shore of a beautiful lake bearing the same name, and on the western slope of a range of hills running north and south, commanding a fine view of the lake. Its inhabitants number, as our friend Kellogg says: "300 big ones," (not as big as your correspondent,) "and 250 little ones." This last part of the inhabitants you will find prominent in most northern towns, and to my mind shows a commendable judgment in regard to those things that make life joyful. God bless the little ones.

But I started to give you the account of a fishing excursion to what is known as Chub Creek lakes. There are 13 of them in a row, and all abounding with the finest specimen of pickerel and bass that you ever saw. Perhaps, Mr. Editor, you have read sometime in your life, of lakes nestling at the foot of the mountains, where the foot of the pale face has never trod the soil, and where nature sports in her native loveliness, &c.; this is that very spot. Having first built us a boat, after the most modern style of the clipper, with her full name "The Mamie of Tecumseh," inscribed on her stern, and having obtained a tent suited to our purpose, my friend Kellogg, his son Frank, and his son-in-law, Frank Buell, together with your frail built correspondent, mounted our boat upon the running gear of a "tote wagon" and started for the scene of action, Chub Creek lakes, about six miles east of Otsego Lake. We reached the ground about 6 P. M. and pitched our tent. It being somewhat late, and wishing to refresh the inner man, we did not do much fishing that night, only five pickerel were taken; but the next morning found us bright and early at our work. We remained from Monday eve. until Wednesday afternoon, and when we returned we had caught with us forty-three pickerel and three bass, as fine fellows as you often see. I do not exaggerate when I say that thirty out of the forty-three pickerel would measure from 2½ to 3 feet in length and weighing 5 to 6 pounds. I think I never saw fish so uniform in size as these. We did not loose a hook, neither did we hook a fish that we did not bring to land. One feature of the fishing in these lakes is, that while you are catching pickerel and bass out of one end of the boat, you catch your minnows for bait out of the other end of the boat. This is done by anchoring the boat to the shore, as the shallow waters of the lakes are alive with minnows, and the large fish are never taken in the middle of the lakes.

If any of our fishermen in Tecumseh want to know where they can take fish to their heart's content I would recommend them to the waters of Chub Creek lakes. I shall take leave of Otsego Lake this eve. at 6:20, go to Cheboygan, Mackinac Island, Point St. Ignace, Mackinaw City, thence to Bay View where I propose to spend next Sabbath. On Monday I shall visit Petoskey, thence by steamer to Charlevoix, East Jordan, Ludington, and home again, to the best place of all for a boy of my size.

J. H. OSBORN.

RAILROAD NOTES.

Track laying on the M. & O. is progressing rapidly in this direction from Britton.

The Marshall Statesman of last week has these items:

J. A. Latcha, chief engineer of the M. & O. was in the city this week and on Wednesday in company with Wm. Boeh, drove to Hanover on business.

The pay car on the M. & O. road went from Marshall to Allegan last week.

Ironing on the M. & O. has been steadily pushing this week and the force has reached Wm. Richfield's in Eckford. It will be continued on to Homer, thence to Hanover. The ballasting is completed up to a point two miles this side of Battle Creek.

An exchange says that the mosquitoes, the house fly and the wicked flea, may be calmly and quickly murdered by simply burning a little powdered Persian chamomile in the rooms where these pests abound.

HOPE.

men speak and dream with keen delig
Of some sure-coming better day;
To gain the happy golden height
All madly press the crowded way.
The world grows old and young by turns,
But human hope unchanging burns.

Hope leads the infant forth to life,
And gaily plumes the boyish head;
Her spell lures youth to manly strife,
Nor leaves the veteran's dying bed;
And when life's over, even from the bier
Hope springs to shed her bright last blooms.

All is not vain illusion—no
Mere fancy, sprung from error's loom
The well proclaims the life we know
A higher life man shall attain,
And what those inward voices say
Shall not the hopeful soul betray.

TO-DAY.

[illegible] let me of to-morrow!

How, alas! that we have left to do
We cannot do at last.
[illegible] It is the only time

AN EXCITING RIDE.

When blasting was discontinued at the Wistar mine on the Zintop Mountain, Idaho, the writer was for the time left in charge of the mill, containing the engine, stamps, battery, etc. With the exception of Print Elverson, the "powder boy," all the other workmen were discharged.

Print remained to keep me company. The foreman and chemist in charge of the amalgamating process also left. But it was necessary that some one should stay to guard the property until it should be removed; and, as I had been engineer, I was asked to do so through the winter.

This was in November, 1874. The open sheds and bunkers of the mill were boarded up, and everything made as snug as possible, to keep out the rain and snow. Thus it happened that Print and I lived there week after week, keeping a sort of "bachelor's hall."

That is to say we done our own cooking over a small stove in the mill, and boarded ourselves. Having plenty of time, we watched for deer occasionally in the ravines and along the mountain sides to the north of the ridge, where the mine was located; and Print began trapping martens, the sharp squeaks of which we now heard early every morning around the mill.

As powder-boy, it had been Print's business to carry the cans of powder and nitro glycerine in and out of the "drift." The latter explosive was purchased and received there, made up in cartridges, put in long tin cases, containing each a safety fuse and a small charge of gunpowder for firing the mightier rackrender.

From the mine down to the stage-house, or station, the distance was five miles, over a bare stony slope, in some places somewhat steep in others nearly level, and too barren for trees and bushes. Nothing, in fact, grew on it save tufts of wire-grass.

The station building with its sheds was in plain sight, seemingly far below. The mine was said to be thirteen hundred feet above Nimm's Creek, along which the stage road runs. We were in the habit of going to the station every second or third day after such supplies as we needed.

With a glass however, objects at the station and along the road could be plainly observed. In our idle moments we used to sit and watch the teams coming and going.

Snow fell at times during November and December, and on the 3d or 4th of January there came a great snow storm. For thirty-six hours the wind blew terrifically, and the whirling clouds of fine snow flew in at every crack and chink of the mill.

The only place into which it did not drift was the engine-room and into this we moved our stove; but even here had no easy task to keep warm. Luckily, we had dry pine wood enough left from the fuel for the engine else we should assuredly have frozen to death.

The gale did not fairly abate till the third day, when the whole country looked white and wintry indeed. Not less than four feet of snow had come. Down in the valley there seemed to be even more of it than on the mountain.

The station and its sheds looked as though they were nearly buried. A great many teams had put in there for shelter, and we could see a number of snow-laden wagons standing outside, for which there was no room in the sheds. The teamsters were shoveling paths for taking the mules down to the creek to water.

Meantime the stock of provisions which we had brought up on our backs five days before, was exhausted; we had only a dozen frozen potatoes left in the mill.

Some snow-shoes were hastily rigged from strips of thin cottonwood boards, with bands of leather nailed on for the straps, with bands of leather nailed on for the straps, and we were about setting off to go down to the station, when Print, who had been outside the mill, came excitedly back, exclaiming.—

"The redskins have come down on the stage-house! There's an awful battle! I can hear the guns goin' pop—pop—pop!"

I seized the glass and ran out of the mill. Plainly enough I could hear the distant crack of rifles, and even see a faint blue wreath of powder-smoke hanging over the station. With the glass I counted seventeen or eighteen Indians, who could be seen dodging about the bluffs on the opposite side of the creek on snow-shoes.

We had heard a rumor of hostile Indians several weeks before, when "Gray Eagle's band was said to be on a marauding expedition. Such reports, in fact, are always going at frontier settlements. The plunder of so many teams, snow-bound there at the stage-house, was probably the object the savages had in view.

For us this, of course was a most alarming matter. We knew not how soon the redskins might see our smoke and come up to the mine. There was nothing to prevent their seeing it; indeed, we had no doubt they had seen it all the morning.

Setting Print to watch their movements, I fell to work and barricaded the entrances to the mill as effectively as possible, with logs and uncrushed lumps of ore.

In the course of an hour, Print called out that the Indians had drawn off from the station and gone up to the timber, at the "bend" of the creek. Here they camped. The teamsters and Hawkins at the station had given them so hot a reception that they had given up the attack, it seemed, but had camped near by, to be on the lookout for the teams. We could see their smoke. The bend was nearly a mile nearer the mine than the stage house. The creek there bent back to the northwest while the stage-house lay down a little north east from the mine.

We had proof, only a little after noon, that the savages knew where we were at the mine. I was cleaning out one of two old carbines, when Print rushed in saying that three Indians were coming up the mountain.

These were, however, merely scouts, who had come out to reconnoitre us. They circled entirely round the the crest of the ridge where the mine was located, but Print began trapping martens, the sharp squeaks of which we now heard early every morning around the mill. kept at a respectful distance. I sent two bullets whizzing past their heads, to let them know we were ready for them; and Print had a nitro-glycerine cartridge ready to fling at them if they ventured nearer. After peeping at the mills from all sides, they went away.

Meantime, the sky had darkened again. The weather was growing cold by four o'clock [illegible] We made [illegible] and boiled and ate a few of our frozen potatoes; not very nourishing fare. I kept watch through the night, but let Print sleep a part of the time.

About midnight the sky cleared and the air became colder, with the wind from the north. By sunrise it was freezing sharply. The whole slope to the east and far onward over the bare peaks, beyond the creek, shone like ice.

A sharp crust had formed over the deep snow, not hard or thick enough to bear up a man, though a coyote might have run on it. There was no stirring out from the station, and the Indians were still up at their camp in the timber, as we saw by their smoke.

By this time we were both getting hungry enough. We were actually suffering for want of food, and should the savages remain there long we should be starved out. Had the nights been dark, I should have been hopeful of reaching the station under cover of the darkness; but there was a nearly full moon at the time, which on that snow-crust would render all objects plainly visible.

The savages were beyond doubt keeping a close watch, and would be almost certain to cut us off. The rascals would have less than three-fourths of a mile to run to our door. Yet in the famishing condition in which we were, and growing hungrier every hour, I had almost concluded that we must both risk endeavoring to get to the stage-house, when Print suggested sliding down to the station on a hand-sled.

"But where's your hand-sled?" I asked.

"I can make one," he said. "It will be a fearfully long slide, but I believe we can do it."

"Well, but won't the redskins head us off all the same?" said I.

"They'll have hard work to do it, when once we get a goin'," cried Print so confidently that I began to enter into his scheme.

Print, in fact, was from one of the Eastern states, where the boys are used to coasting. For myself, it was a matter I knew next to nothing of, snow being a rarity, indeed, in my native state of Louisiana.

So Print set to work to make a hand-sled—after a plan of his own. The "runners," as he called them, were fashioned from two wide pieces of ash plank, shaved off to a point at the front ends. While he was chantering these, he bade me take off two hoops of broad sheet-iron from an empty tierce that stood in the store-room.

The hoops he straightened, smoothed and nailed to the bottoms of his runners, for shoes. So broad were the pieces of plank that the runners stood nearly a foot high; and they were coupled together with four or five stout ash cross-pieces, or bars.

A wide bit of board was nailed top of these to sit on; and this, with two or three cleats to hold on by, completed the vehicle. It was eight feet long by two and a half feet wide.

I advised putting up side-pieces to hold us on; but Print said no, we must cling by the cleats. He expressed regret he had made it longer than ordinary coasting sleds, in order that it might be sure not to cut into the snow-crust. In short, Print seemed to understand the business so well that I had merely to keep quiet and let him go ahead his own way.

I should say he was from three to four hours making his sled, with what aid I could give him; and the moment it was done he was for starting off. My own faith was not so strong as was his, and for some minutes I hesitated.

"Get on!" exclaimed Print. "We'll be there in ten minutes, or less time."

The sun was sinking low; but the whole broad, snowy slope shone and glistened like glass. From the north a cold wind blew in long, heavy gusts. It seemed a fearful ride and a fearful risk. I went back to get one of the carbines.

"Better leave it," Print said. "You'll have all you can do to hold on, without that." Get pretty well forward and hang to them cleats like a sheep-tick. I'll ride behind and steer her down."

He pushed the sled along to the verge of the slope—and an instant later, we were gliding down the first of the steep inclines.

Faster—faster—faster!

How the cold wind cut our faces. The tears flew into my eyes. Jump—jump—jump we went, over hummocks and hollows.

Then came a wide level stretch across which the sled darted like a shuttle bouncing from knoll to knoll; and ere I had hardly time to catch my breath, we were shooting down another steep ridge-side, fairly throwing up a spray from the icy snow-crust.

"Hold fast!" Print yelled; and next instant we were rocketting over a frightfully rough place, where the snow scarcely filled the hollows betwixt the rocks. Bound—thump—grind! and we were capsized and went headlong.

But Print was up again in a moment—dragging the sled along to the crest of another steep descent. Save for a few bruises, we were uninjured.

"It's all plain sailing now," cried Print. "The roughest is past. But hold on tight. For we shall go like a lightning express down here!"

Already we were half way down to the station, with no Indians in sight. But we had hardly shoved off when a distant yell came to our ears, from up towards the timber-belt.

"There they are! They've seen us!" exclaimed Print. "Quick now!"

But before we had got well going, we saw three—four—FIVE redskins skimming along the crust on their raquettes, far down [illegible]

'Twas too late to recede, even if we had decided to do so. Forward was the only chance for us—and the faster the better. "Hang hard!" Print exclaimed. "I don't believe they can hit us!"

The sled gathered headway and shot down the long, glittering incline, Print keeping it headed straight for the station with an occasional jab of his heel. But those redskins were skating along on their raquettes as fast as a man could run; and they had but a comparatively short distance to go.

One was some distance in advance of the other four. I saw he had a gun. He intended to get very near us before we passed. I honestly think we were going a mile a minute. I could scarcely draw breath. The Indians raised a yell and rushed forward.

We were close on them now. The forward one stopped. I saw him cocking his gun—to let us have it when we dashed past. But he didn't get the chance for that. "Bang!" Print shouted to me, and gave a hard kick to the right, sending the sled straight on to the savage.

It was all done in a second of time, and my eyes were nearly blinded with the keen air; but I felt a shock, and heard instantly the Indian going heels over head—over and over.

Bang—bang—bang! went three or four guns at close quarters, but fortunately [illegible]

Next moment we dashed up a big drift clean over the roof of one of the stage-sheds—struck whack in the crust of the other side, bounded on twice or three times more, and brought up down in the bed of the creek.

The teamsters gave a "hurrah," and running out picked us up and helped us in.

We saw the redskin we had run down crawling slowly away; and presently the others carried him off to their camp.

We were blockaded there at the stage-house for over a fortnight, before a thaw came, when a company of cavalry arrived from the fort below, and cleared the road of Indians.—Youth's Companion.

Whalebone [illegible] t a very high price, especially [illegible] eskirts were more in fashion [illegible] to-day. The Dutch formerly [illegible] 500 for a ton of whalebone, but [illegible] 1763 it has never brought anything like that price. In 1818 it brought $450 a ton, in 1834 from $530 to $545; and in 1844 it varied from $1,080 for southern to $1,550 for northern bone. As the whale becomes scarce, of course whalebone will rise in the market, and at present the Dutch and the Scotch whalers are doing a very poor business. The Americans also complain, and now that this is the case, the inventive genius of man is trying hard to find a substitute for whalebone, and so far thy have met with some success. Buffalo horn has given great satisfaction, and there is quite a similarity between the two substances. The horns, after undergoing a special process, are cut into strips which are compressed, and straightened and rendered suitable for any purpose by the dressmaker. Compressed cane has also been resorted to as a substitute for whalebone, but does not answer the purpose as well as buffalo horn. In France whalebone is 15 francs the kilogram; that it to say, it has tripled in price during the last quarter of a century. In 1853 the quantity of bone brought into the United States was 6,652,300 pounds; in 1873 it was 190,000 pounds; in 1880, 100,000 pounds. In 1853 whalebone was worth 35 cents a pound; in 1876, $2.50; and at the present time it is said to be selling at $2 per pound. In 1857, 143 vessels comprised the Greenland fleet, and in 1877 only sixteen were sent out. It will be observed that the business varies considerably from time to time, and it seems pretty certain that the best days of whaling are over for the present. It is said that nearly one-half of our whalebone is exported to France and Germany. There is no doubt that there is more whalebone consumed in Paris than in any other city in the world, for Paris carries off the palm in the manufacture of parasols and articles in the making of which whalebone forms a very material part. Then there are walking sticks and riding and driving whips, canes, corset bones, corset clasps, busks, hat bone, suspender bone, fishing rods and tips, landing rods for nets, drill lower, ferules, splints, probangs, paper cutters and folders, graining combs, boot shanks, shoe horns, policemen's loaded clubs, that require whalebone in their composition.

The best whalebone is obtained from the Greenland whale. From the mouth of one of those monsters from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds are often taken. The manufacture of whalebone into articles of use and ornament is not so extensive as one might imagine. It is principally confined to New York and Boston, four manufactories being in the former and three in the latter. When the raw whalebone is first received at the factory the hair is cut off in slabs. They are then soaked in water until they are soft, after which they are scraped of all the gum that adheres to them. They are next put in a steam-box, where a workman straightens them with a knife; they are finally polished, and are then ready to be made use of for any purpose that the dresser may see fit. Whalebone is principally used, nowadays, in the manufacture of whips and corsets. Umbrella frames used to be made altogether of whalebone, but since its scarcity and high price, steel is mostly used for this purpose. Whalebone hats and whalebone ribbon have just come into vogue. The former look very beautiful and are very comfortable on the head.—Boston Transcript.

In 1852 the United States produced only 2,000,000 tons of coal, while in 1880 about 70,000,000 tons were produced.

By means of a French patent process, an excellent substitute for coffee is made out of dates. It is said to taste so much like the genuine article that only by analysis can the difference be detected.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Harvest Soup.—Cut in small pieces one pound of good beef, cover with cold water, and boil gently for three hours; let it stand over night; remove all the fat; bring to a boil and add a can of lobster, cut fine; prepare one cauliflower sliced, cut the corn from one dozen ears, break in small pieces one quart of butter-beans, slice one onion, cut fine three or four radishes, add all to the soup, with one whole green pod pepper, one teaspoonful black pepper, one teaspoonful salt; in one hour add one quart of tomatoes sliced; when tender, carefully remove without breaking on the skimmer the pod pepper; simmer the rest four hours longer, add no more water before the tomatoes are put in than necessary to keep from burning; after they are in none will be needed. Half the above quantities can be used. Some like potato with the other vegetables. Add salt to taste before dishing. A little rice can be used if liked, in the soup.

Chicken with Okra.—Singe and draw a large, tender chicken, cut in small pieces, put in a saucepan with two ounces of butter, two ounces of lean ham, and an onion [illegible] moisture is evaporated, drain the butter off, wet with two quarts of beef broth, add a quart of peeled and seedless tomatoes (cut in small pieces,) half a green pepper, (cut small,) four ounces of rice, and about 50 tender okras, (pared at both ends and cut in rounds;) season with salt, pepper, nutmeg, a bunch of parsley with aromats, also a leek, and celery, pour it into a soup-tureen and serve.

Muffins.—One quart sifted flour, two eggs one tablespoonful melted butter, one tablespoonful sugar one teaspoonful salt, (not heaped,) quarter yeast-cake dissolved in a little water; mix with sufficient sweet milk to make a medium stiff batter; beat the eggs very light, stir all together, set to rise over night, add one small teaspoonful soda just before baking; bake in gem-pans on top of stove to set the bottom, finish in quick oven; not to be turned over.

Quickly-Made Beef Tea.—Take any desired quantity of steak from the top part of the round, as this has less fat and more juice than any other part; remove all the fat and divide the meat into small pieces, cutting across the grain; put the meat in a dry saucepan and allow it to sweat for five minutes over a slow fire, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. After sweating for five minutes, you will find the meat white in color, and surrounded by a rich, nourishing gravy, which, in case of great exhaustion, may be given in this form. But ordinarily we next pour over the meat its weight in cold water, allowing a pint of water to a pound of beef. Stir until the water boils; it must not boil again but simmer gently for five or ten minutes until the sauce is drawn out, then strain carefully into a bowl, and if there is a particle of fat on the top, remove it with a piece of brown, unsized paper. By this method you may take off every star of fat without wasting any of the beef tea, as is done when using a ladle or spoon. Salt according to taste, but always lightly.

Horse-Radish Vinegar (English.)—Quarter of a pound of scraped horse-radish, one ounce minced chalot, one drachm cayenne, one quart vinegar; put all in a bottle, shake well every day for two weeks; when thoroughly steeped, strain and bottle, and it is ready for use. This is made best in September or October, as horse-radish is best then, and it is a nice relish for meat.

Need of Higher Culture in Home Life.

Nothing is more painful to one who knows what mothers may do for their children, or wives for their husbands, than to see the idleness of young women who are not compelled to work for a living, and to find how empty-headed they are. This may seem a small matter in itself, but the moment a woman is married she has to learn how to be interesting in her home to her husband, and as soon as she is a mother, the training of her children is the foremost duty of the home. In these two spheres of life, which are essentially the goal of woman's existence, everything depends upon what the wife and mother brings to her several positions, everything for her own, her husband's and her children's happiness. Women are perpetually losing their husbands because they rely upon evanescent personal charms to uphold affection, but the surest way to provide against the decay of the enthusiasm of the early married life is to cultivate those mental and moral qualities which make women always charming and attractive.

Nothing is any surer to do this, aside from personal manners, than the improvement of one's mind, the growth of literary tastes, the interest of what imports new and wholesome attractions into one's home. It may be the microscope, or French or German translation, or botany or English literature, or history, or music, but whatever it is, the stimulus of knowing one thing thoroughly is worth immensely more than the knowledge itself, because it gives one the power to know more and to enjoy more. These studies, even in themselves, are refining, but pursued in the genial atmosphere of home, they are more than simply refining; they are agencies by which the spirit of the home is chastened, made moral, even made religious. Religion in one's home is the best when it is the least insisted upon, when its life is the unconscious poetry of the household, when it seems to be the natural culmination of the amenities of life; and religion and culture go together in the well-ordered life of every woman. But it is when the wife becomes a mother, when the religion and culture find a congenial sphere for development within the sanctities of home, when among children and among friends and neighbors the tone is always uplifting and inspiring, that literary culture and the genial development of a woman's mind and heart seem to make life sweetest and best. Fortunate is the boy or girl who has such a home. It is from such quarters, be they the log cabin or the house with brown stone front, that men and women go forth with the idea that conquers the world. Every leading person has had a start somewhere, and usually it is traced to one of these mothers whose native or acquired culture has been imparted to her bright children. Here is the true importance of literature at home. It pays for itself hundreds of times over in its influence upon parents, and in the early direction it gives to their children.

Fruit Canning

It is not many years since every good housewife felt called upon at least once a year to take a great deal of trouble in preserving a supply of fruit for use during the winter months. The purchase of fruit-jars, the picking, or purchase, and sorting of fruit, the purchase of sugar, the boiling and preparation of the syrup, oftentimes in the hottest weather, was a task which many a good housewife looked forward to with some trepidation, while the uncertainties attending the keeping qualities of the preserves, after they were manufactured, made this a rather undesirable feature in housekeeping.

Within a few years, however, all this has become unnecessary, the manufacture of preserves on a large scale, with skilled labor and improved appliances, has proven, as in many other branches of manufacture a great success, and while there are some thrifty housewives who still think their "home-made" preserves are better than the "store" article, it is undoubtedly true that high-class preserves are decidedly fine, and in a number of cases are more appetizing and delicate than the home-made article. I say this with all due respect for the skill shown by many careful, conscientious housewives throughout the land, but in this case the doctrine "survival of the fittest," I think, is quite applicable. Too many people are apt to sit down, fold their hands, and disclaim against anything not made at home, at least as far as preserves and candied fruits are concerned. The sword, I must admit, cuts both ways. While I have wrestled carefully and conscientiously at many houses with alleged preserves made at home, I have suffered the "pangs of Tantalus" from atrocious compounds put on the market by conscienceless manufacturers. For the benefit of those who desire to "do up" their own fruits I append a few trustworthy receipts:

Fill the jar with the desired fruit while cold. Make a syrup of sugar (quantity as given below) by boiling well to prevent fermentation, or it can be put on fruit dry. Fill jar with fruit, pour sugar over it until jar is full half-way up the neck; screw on covers of jars without rubber rings; put a board indented with holes in bottom of wash-boiler and stand jars on it; fill boiler with cold water up to neck of jars; boil (time necessary for different fruits is given below,) then remove jars one by one, take off covers, fill with boiling water, put on rubber rings and screw covers on tightly as possible. The same process is used in preserving all kinds of fruits.

Wholesome Food.

The earliest agitator in the matter, say a writer in the Nineteenth Century, observes, when traveling in Sicily, that the laboring classes there live healthily and work well upon a vegetable diet, the staple article of which bread is made of well-ground wheat meal. Nor are the Sicilians by any means the only people so supported. "The Hindoos of the Northwestern Provinces can walk fifty or sixty miles a day with no other food than 'chapatties,' made of the whole meal, with a little 'ghee,' or Galam butter." Turkish and Arab porters capable of carrying burdens of from 400 to 600 pounds, live on bread only, with the occasional addition of fruit and vegetables. The Spartans and Romans of the old time lived their vigorous lives on bread made of wheaten meal. In Northern, as well as Southern climates, we find the same thing. In Russia, Sweden, Scotland, and elsewhere, the poor live chiefly on bread, always made from some whole meal—wheat, oats, or rye—and the peasantry, of whatever climate, so fed, always compare favorably with our South English poor, who, in conditions of indigence precluding them from obtaining sufficient meat food, starve, if not to death, at least into sickliness, on the white bread it is our modern English habit to prefer. White bread alone will not support animal life. Bread made of whole grain will. The experiment has been tried in France by Magendie. Dogs were the subjects of the trial, and every care was taken to equalize all the conditions—to proportion the quantity of food given in each case to the weight of the animal experimented upon, and so forth. The result was sufficiently marked. At the end of forty days the dogs fed soley on white bread died. The dogs fed on bread made of the whole grain remained vigorous, healthy and well nourished. Whether an originally healthy human being, if fed solely on white bread for forty days, would likewise die at the end of that time, remains, of course a question. The tenacity of life exhibited by Magendie's dogs will not evidently bear comparison with that of the scarcely yet forgotten forty days wonder—Dr. Tanner. Nor is it by any means asserted that any given man or any given child would certainly remain in vigorous health for an indefinite length of time if fed solely on wheat-meal bread. Not a single piece of strong evidence has been produced, however, to show that he would not; and in the only case in which whole-meal bread has been tried with any persistency or on any considerable scale among us—to wit, in jails—facts go to show such bread to be an excellent and wholesome substitute for more costly forms of nutritious food.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by impure condition of the blood when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is, indeed, a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has often proven itself to be the best Blood Purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, Weakness of the Kidneys, Erysipelas, Malaria, all Nervous disorders and Debility, Bilious Complaints and all diseases indicating an impure condition of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach, etc. It corrects indigestion. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to weaken the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

A Voice from the Press.

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Hop Bitters." Expecting to find them nauseous and bitter and composed of bad whiskey, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. A Mrs. Cresswell and a Mrs. Connor, friends, have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir.—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MISS C. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir.—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler,

No. 28 Wilt St, Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

SECRET.

THE ONLY DISCOVERY OF THE POISONOUS LACTIC ACID WHICH EXISTS IN THE BLOOD OF RHEUMATIC AND GOUTY PATIENTS.

SALICYLICA is known as a common-sense remedy, because it strikes directly at the cause of Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia, while so many so-called specifics and supposed panaceas only treat locally the effects.

It has been conceded by eminent scientists that outward applications, such as rubbing with oils, ointments, liniments and soothing lotions will not cure rheumatism, which is the result of the poisoning of the blood with lactic acid.

SALICYLICA works with marvelous effect on this acid, and so removes the disorder. It is now exclusively used by all celebrated physicians of America and Europe. Highest Medical Academy of Paris reports 95 per cent. cures in three days.

REMEMBER

that SALICYLICA is a certain cure for Rheumatism, Gout and Neuralgia. The most intense pains are subdued almost instantly.

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If you sit down at set of sun
And count the acts that you have done,
And counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard,
One glance most kind
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that day well spent.

But if through all the livelong day
You've cheered no heart by yea or nay
If through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace,
That brought the sunshine to one face;
No act most small
That helped some soul, and nothing cost
Then count that day as worse than lost.

Father and Sons.

"If you wish to train up your child in the way he should go, just skirmish ahead on that line yourself," said Wise Josh Billings, and if he was not addressing fathers or thinking of boys, he ought to have been. The writer was present once at a social religious meeting, when a very large man with a very large nose, and no doubt a very large heart, arose and used his space of time to tell what a good mother he had, and how her influence had guided him, and finished with an exortation to all mothers to make good men of their boys.

The divines followed in a similar strain and ended with the same exhortation, and all the brethren settled themselves more comfortably into their seats, and all the sisters bowed their heads with meek faces as if sweetly taking up the heavy burden thus flatteringly laid upon their frail shoulders. No, not all; for one sat bolt upright, too indignant for speech, to see those great broad-shouldered men thus calmly shirking the greatest responsibility God ever called them to bear.

Because some mothers blessed with mighty faith and powerful will, have borne their sons triumphantly over the quicksands of youthful temptations and planted their feet firmly on the pleasant upland of righteous manhood, shall it be demanded of every frail woman to whom God has given a son, that she do the same? No; with equal justice it might be demanded of every woman that she write books like Mrs. Stowe, entrance large audiences like Miss Willard and Anna Dickenson, or be a brilliant newspaper correspondent like Mary Clemmer.

What weight has a mother's word when weighed against a father's example? The mother says: 'My son, do not smoke; it is bad for your health, bad for the purse, bad for the morals, and the pleasure it affords is trifling compared to the evil it works."

"What does mother know about smoking?" reasons the boy; "she never smokes; father smokes, and I am going to too."

"Don't spend your evenings about the bar-room and village store," pleads the troubled mother; "the conversation there is not such as I wish you to listen to."

"What does mother know about bar-room talk?" questions the boy; "she is at home rocking the baby or darning stockings; father is there, and I'm going."

One out-spoken ten-year-old boy said: "I like my mother well enough; but I think father is a great deal smarter;" and he expressed the feeling of the average boy when he enters his teens. Now, which parent is likely to have most influence in forming the character of that son?

"I'll take what father takes," said the boy at the hotel dinner table, and boys are taking what their fathers take all the world over.

A father and son were clambering up the rough, steep sides of a mountain, when the father paused to decide which of many paths to take; the boy said: "Be sure to choose a good path, father, for I am coming right behind you."

Fathers, upon the hillside of life, be sure you choose a "good path," for your sons are just behind, and almost certain to follow in your footsteps. If the bewitching voice of pleasure entices you into by-paths of self-indulgence and sin, remember that where you trip he will stumble, and the same foul mire that soils your raiment will engulf him. But if you choose to walk the pleasant highways of temperance, virtue and Christian manliness, he shall keep even step with you, and at last dwell in peace at your side.

Remarkable Escape.

John Kuhn, of Lafayette, Ind., had a very narrow escape from death.—This is his own story: "One year ago I was in the last stages of Consumption. Our best physicians gave up my case. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, which benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health having used no other medicine.

Astronomers do not know whether it is an old comet or a new comet, one comet or two comets; but these are matters of little consequence. What the people really want to know is whether a period of fearful lights that never glimmer save when kings and heroes die is a good time to sow turnips.—Courier Journal.

"Spent Fifty Dollars.

In doctoring for rheumatism before I tried Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Used a 50-cent bottle of this medicine and got out in one week. For burns and sprains it is excellent." James Durham, East Pembroke, N. Y.

Miscellaneous Recipe.

Mead.—One gallon of water, one pound of loaf sugar, one-half ounce of ginger, one lemon sliced, take out the seeds; one teacupful of yeast. Let it stand over night to ferment, then pour off without stirring; add to each bottle one raisin; cork tight.

Watermelon Rind Pickle.—Ten pounds of melon, half small tender, drain the water off; make a syrup of two pounds of sugar, one quart of vinegar, one-half ounce of cloves, one ounce of cinnamon; boil all this, and pour over the rind boiling hot; drain off the syrup and let it come to a boil; then pour it over the melons.

Cittabill Milk Potatoes.—Take good, sound potatoes, cut them in slices (raw,) and put the milk, according to the quantity you wish to make, in a pudding dish; then, after you have put the potatoes in the milk, put it in the oven for about twenty minutes, then take out and put the potatoes with the same milk into a saucepan to boil until done; season before boiling.

Hash.—Chop into hash some cold meat (corned beef, mutton or fowl;) season with salt and a little pepper, also a little butter if liked; boil enough potatoes to make, when mashed, twice the quantity of the hash; mash the potatoes to a cream, adding before the mashing a tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of salt; fill an earthen baking dish with the potatoes, rounding it handsomely; in the center of the potatoes make a deep hole large enough to contain the hash; round it all nicely and bake a light brown; garnish with celery tops.

Ginger Pudding.—One cup of butter, two of sugar, one of milk, four of flour, one tablespoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of saleratus, two of cream of tartar, four eggs. Beat the sugar and butter to a cream; then stir in the eggs, which are to be well beaten; then the milk, and last the flour, in which the saleratus, ginger and cream of tartar are well mixed. Bake in a pudding-dish for forty-five minutes. Serve with lemon or vinegar sauce. After adding the flour, beat but little. Measure the butter not very solid. Flour should be sifted only a short time before it is used.

Cocoanut Pie.—One-half pound grated cocoanut; three quarters of a pound white sugar (powdered;) six ounces butter; five eggs, the whites only; one glass white wine; two tablespoonfuls rose water; one teaspoonful nutmeg. Cream the butter and sugar, and when well mixed, beat very light with the wine and rose-water. Add the cocoanut with as little and as light beating as possible; finally, whip in the stiffened whites of the eggs with a few skillful strokes, and bake at once in open shells. Eat cold, with powdered sugar sifted over them. These are delightful pies.

Orange Pie.—Rub a teacupful of powdered sugar and a tablespoonful of butter to a cream. Mix a tablespoonful of corn starch with a little cold water; and add a teacupful of boiling water; let it cook long enough to thicken, stirring constantly, then pour the mixture on to the butter and sugar. Grate the peel from half an orange, and chop the other half fine—first removing all the inner white skin. Add this to the former ingredients, also a beaten egg and the juice of an orange. Peel another orange, and slice it in little thin bits, being careful to remove all the seeds and the white tough skin. Line a pie plate with nice paste and bake it until just done, then fill with the custard and orange slices, and bake long enough to cook the egg. A meringue made with the whites of two eggs, a pinch of salt and two tablespoons of powdered sugar beaten to a stiff froth, will be an improvement. Spread it over the pie; sift powdered sugar on the top and set it again in the oven until slightly colored.

Roast Forequarter of Lamb.—Ingredients: lamb, a little salt. Mode—To obtain the flavor of lamb in perfection, it should not be long kept; time to cool is all that it requires, and though the meat may be somewhat tough, the juices and flavor will be infinitely superior to that of lamb that has been killed two or three days; have a brisk fire when the joint is put down; baste it constantly until the moment of serving. Lamb should be thoroughly done without being dried up, and not the slightest appearance of red gravy should be visible as in roast mutton; this rule is applicable to all young roast white meats; serve with a little gravy made in the dripping-pan and send to table with a tureen of mint sauce, a fresh salad, a cut lemon, a small piece of butter and a little cayenne; should also be placed on the table so that when the carver separates the shoulder from the ribs they may be ready for his use.

Pie-Plant Jelly.—Pick the plants and wash, but do not peel it; cut in strips put in the kettle, and to each pound water to cook until soft, strain the juice off and weigh, and sugar pound for pound; cook ten minutes or until it looks as you wish it.

Meerschaum.

The word Meerschaum in the German means sea-foam, and the material was so named because of its lightness and whitish appearance. It is a mineral of soft earthy texture, somewhat resembling chalk. It is found in Greece and Turkey, as well as in Spain, occurring in the form of veins and likewise. In Turkey it is used extensively as fuller's earth. The custom is to roughly shape it into blocks or rude forms of pipes for exportation. Pesth and Vienna are famous cities for the manufacture of meerschaum pipes, and at Geneva quite a number of the elegant smokers are to be seen. The manufacture of the spurious article is extensive, Paris leading in the newer imitations. To produce the yellow and brown colors, so much admired in the real meerschaum pipe, and which come only after they are smoked some time, the blocks are long kept in a mixture of wax and fatty matter. These are in part absorbed, and, afterward, being acted on by heat from the tobacco, the meerschaum assumes various shades of colors. What are known as artifical meerschaums—made from the parings of the genuine material, reduced to fine powder, boiled in water, and molded into blocks—cannot easily be distinguished from the real, but they are generally heavier and more free from blemishes.

How many hard working ministers and lawyers sit at their desks and in their studies, who are suffering from over-work or indigestion, dyspepsia, nervousness, sleeplessness and irritability, who might by the use of Rheumatic Syrup regulate their digestive organs, cure that dyspepsia, sleep soundly and thus rest their nerves and be better fitted for their daily labors. Try it and you will be convinced of its merits.

Probably more horses are lost by colic than all other diseases combined, and one chief trouble in treating the disease is that many of the so-called remedies are either absurd or the ingredients are not available. A few weeks since we had a horse taken violently with flatulent colic, and I started for a "horse doctor" a mile distant. On my way I recollected having read in the Michigan Farmer, I think it was, of applying blankets wrung out of hot water, and I wished I had tried it before starting. My wife it seems, had read the same article, and after I had gone went to work in good "woman" earnest and applied the hot blankets, and when I returned in about half an hour she came to the door laughing, saying: "Your horse is all right now," and sure enough he was walking around the yard entirely relieved.

The True Test.

If a man is hungry within an hour more or less after a meal he is a dyspeptic. It shows his stomach is not able to digest what he has eaten, but to eat again, and thus impose more work, is absurdity. Take Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic which cures dyspepsia, and all stomach, liver, kidney and bladder troubles. It is a perfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, a sure cure for ague and malaria diseases. Price 50 cents, of Baker and Hall.

Origin of the Story of Santa Claus

Santa Claus is the Dutch name for St. Nicholas, the patron saint of boys. He is also said to have been the Bishop of Myra, and to have died in the year 625. He is also said to have supplied three destitute maidens with their marriage portions by secretly leaving money in their windows, and as his day occurred just before Christmas, he was thus made the purveyor of the season to all children in Holland and Flanders, who put out their shoe or stocking in the hope that he would put a prize in them before morning.

No cure, no pay. For sale by druggists. Prices $1 and $1.50 per bottle. Send to Dr. J. B. Marchisi, Utica, N. Y., pamphlet free. For sale by Waldo & Doty.

Bishop Clark is right when he says the ablest works are not always such as sell best. The most edifying speakers are not always those who draw the largest audiences. But when a man is able to sway the mind and heart of the multitude, it may be assumed that he does it by virtue of some power which is peculiar to himself. It may not be the highest kind of power, and still is a power that deserves to be recognized.

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving calling one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, bones ache and fever symptoms. 25c sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

A man should scorn to place his wife in a position that he himself would refuse to occupy. The joint accumulations of wedded life are legally secured to the husband if the wife dies, as she cannot make a will. But no matter how much the wife may have labored and saved, working early and late, doing without money, because of the querying and fault-finding she had to encounter, if she outlives her husband she must submit to the terms of a legal reminder of her inequality before an unjust law.

Nearer to Nature.

Nature has made her laws with us, which we must obey or suffer the penalty. This penalty is often lung or throat trouble, which leads on to consumption. Every man believes consumption incurable. People have been educated to this belief which is proven incorrect by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which is nature's great helpmate, and it cures consumption and and all throat and lung diseases speedily and permanently. Trial bottles free, of Baker and Hall.

To ROAST GEESE AND DUCKS.—Boiling water should be poured all over and inside of a goose or duck, before you prepare them for cooking, to take out the strong oil taste. Let the fowl be picked clean, and wiped dry with a cloth, inside and out; fill the body and crop with stuffing; if you prefer not to stuff it, put an onion inside, and roast it brown. It will take about two hours and a half.

These fowls always require a brisk fire, and should be roasted until they are a light brown, but not too much, otherwise they lose their flavor by letting the gravy run out.

Griggs' Glycerine Salve.

A PAPER FOR THE TIMES.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is the pioneer of cheap journalism in the West. It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 3 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 38,314 copies; in 1879, 54,104 copies; in 1880, 54,801 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,019 copies, or a daily average of 16,646 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON and EVENING issues known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To appreciate the exceptional extent of this vast circulation it is only necessary to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers so that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the North. Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic facilities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

Rheumatic SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months, been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains, and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup," which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours.

Inside of three years the telephone will almost wholly supersede the telegraph for short distances.

August is the vacation month.—Everybody who can get away is off to some watering place now.

Ohio politics are warming up to fever heat. Even the dog days will witness no cessation of hostilities.

Though the winds blow and the earthquakes tremble, the base ball campaign pursues the even tenor of its way.

The drowning of Capt. Webb, in the Niagara whirlpool, was as clear a case of suicide as though he had tied a halter around his neck and hung himself in the barn.

The wheat crop of 1883 is estimated at fifty million bushels less than that of last year. Still there will be nine bushels for every man, woman and child in the country.

Storms and floods, whirlwinds and waterspouts, earthquakes and railroad disasters continue to darken the record of 1883. May we not soon see another such a year.

The strike of the telegraphers still continues. People who are in a hurry send their messages by mail. As this is a slack season of the year for business the inconvenience is not greatly felt, but wait until the fall trade opens and then see the result.

The movement for the nomination of Arthur seems to be gathering strength. Blaine and Conkling are out of the question. Edmunds has no following. Logan has no strength in the east. Arthur's chances are improving every day.

"Is this weather caused by the spots on the sun?" asked one Tecumsehite of his neighbor yesterday. "Perhaps that has something to do with it," was the reply. "but I am inclined to believe Guiteau is at the bottom of it. You know he said something awful would happen in case he was hung."

Conkling is going to the Yellowstone too, as well as President Arthur. A Washington dispatch says,

Mr. Conkling's train may not be as extensive as Gen. Arthur's, but it will be composed of friends as sincere and disinterested as any who follow the President. It includes many Republicans who, like Mr. Conkling, contributed greatly to Mr. Arthur's election, but who feel that they have been driven out of politics by him. When told that Arthur has set up for himself, and intends to run for a second term, they nod their heads, say they understand so, and walk away.

The Western Union telegraph company issued this bulletin last week:

East, every wire O. K.; north, O. K. on all points; south, way wires all O. K.; through wires also O. K. to all points west; at West, all routes O. K.; business clear for all points this morning, and to-day's business moving in good time. Chicago reports overland wires O. K. and business about clear.

This has a decidedly "O.K." appearance, that is true. The wires are generally O. K. and so are the poles, but how is it with the operators? The company is putting the best face possible upon a very bad situation.

They have a very matter of fact way of committing matrimony down in Kentucky. Two brothers became engaged to sisters of a neighboring family. The parents sanctioned the first engagement, but objected to the second. The younger of the couples determined to elope. One night the young man met a veiled girl whom he supposed to be his affianced in a picturesque grove and drove off with her in a buggy. He had not gone very far when he discovered that his companion was the desired one's sister, who had overheard them when they planned the elopement, and had come before the appointed time to perpetrate a joke. Appreciating the humor of the situation, the young lover proposed to marry her, and she consenting they were united. When the brother heard of the escapade he offered himself to his sister-in-law, who accepted him.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, July 31, 1883.

The telegraphers strike remains practically unchanged, each party claiming that it can hold out as long as the other remains obstinate. After a careful review of the state of affairs it strikes me that the matter will end in a compromise. The Western Union is certainly doing better than the strikers anticipated, but it is at an enormous expense both of money and labor. The best of the operators are nearly fagged out from overwork. One of them dropped senseless from his chair last Tuesday morning from sheer exhaustion and want of sleep. The strikers, it must be said, are behaving admirably, and if it is true that the Knights of Labor shoved this division of their Brotherhood forward to do pioneer duty for made a better selection. All that they want to do is to keep out the outside demagogues who are always ready to shove themselves forward to inflame, and then to retire when the mischief has been done.

The Jersey Lily's departure and the decision in the Tearle divorce suit formed the topics of conversation in theatrical circles this week. So far as the former is concerned it is safe to assume that Freddie will not break his neck, for now that he has been removed from beyond the charms of the beautiful English woman, his married sister will take him in hand and try to bring him back to his senses. He accompanies her to Saratoga this week where his horse Bole will probably start for the Cup on Saturday. So far as the Tearle decision goes, in which the court fixes the alimony at $2,000 a year, and allows $500 additional for the support of the children, it gives general satisfaction.

Some years ago the cry used to be that it cost a fortune to keep one's wife or other female relatives at a seaside resort for a month, on account of the dresses they were obliged to wear. Now we have changed all that. The materials used are of the cheapest kind as a rule. That they look light and cool seems to be the sole requisite. A lady of my acquaintance who has been migrating between Saratoga and Long Branch, tells me that during this whole season, she had scarcely seen a dress which could not have been furnished for $100. A very few she had seen which might have cost $300, but this was the very extreme outside limit. As regards jewelry, cheapness added to lightness, and tastefulness prevails in it as well. It is only the wives and daughters of rich Hebrews who wear diamonds.

Are the days of the Salvation Army numbered. It looks very much that way. First they drove them from the steps of the City Hall, where they used to hold afternoon sessions and exhortations. Next they stopped them from parading through the streets with their big base drum, singing and shouting. Now they are even prevented from exhorting in the street near their own barracks, but are obliged to confine themselves to the house. Verily, no end of obstructions seem to be thrown in their way to prevent them from saving sinners. But, raillery aside, the authorities could do no better than to put a stop to practices which make a circus of religion. In Europe the Salvationists have been the direct cause of a great deal of trouble. Here, fortunately, we are clearer headed and cooler hearted, but even at that their wild and frantic methods cannot but exert a very bad influence on easily impressioned minds, making them liable to commit actions which they otherwise would not be guilty of.

The Trade Dollar is gradually finding its way back into circulation. When the scare first begun a number of Jewish clothing houses to draw trade announced that they would take the betrayed coin at par. This brought them a run of custom until houses in the same line did likewise, and then the trick lost its value. Then saloon keepers began first by agreeing to take them if a certain number of drinks were taken. From this they soon retreated to accepting them without stipulation. Grocers and dealers in fancy goods next followed. In a few weeks the trade dollar will be as well off as foreign coins. When the hue and cry was raised against them nobody wanted them. Now, one can get rid of them almost anywhere except in street cars and at banks.

A dog fancier tells me that the fashionable dog of the near future will be the black poodle, neatly shaved up to the neck so as to give him a lionine appearance. There have been numerous demands for dogs of this kind. It was at one time attempted to force the Caniche poodle into circulation as financial men would say, but it failed, for the dog though clever and affectionate was too big and acted too much like an overgrown boy to be a lady's pet. A pretty cross between a poodle and a Yorkshire terrier, is being sold by a fancier which is creating some talk. The day of the pug are therefore evidently numbered, for in view of such opposition he can scarcely be expected to hold his grip on the public taste

Last week a young son of Schuyler Georgia, a farmer living near St. Johns, was standing near a reaper, when in some way he was caught by the reel, thrown upon the knives, and both legs were nearly severed from his body.

The Osceola county driving park association have lately clayed their track at Evart, and will stump the ground and make other improvements and they claim now to have as good a half mile track as any in northern Michigan.

Fifty-two years ago Allen Tibbits preached the first sermon ever delivered at Coldwater. The audience was gathered in a log hut, situated where the elegant home of H. C. Lewis now stands. Last week Sunday Mr. Tibbits lectured in the elegant opera house, owned by his son, in the same place.

When Barnum's circus was at Ann Arbor Davis Weller, of Birkette, went to town to see the show. He sold his team there and has not been seen since. It is supposed he went to Canada and got a little off, and it is considered about time for him to brace up and return to the bosom of his family.

DR. B. MINCER,
Scientific Optician!

I have devoted 25 years wholly to a study of the eye, and how to aid vision properly, and I make a specialty of fitting glasses to the eyes that have been injured by cheap, inferior glasses. I manufacture every kind of glasses, and guarantee satisfaction. Read what prominent physicians of Adrian say:

Having for some time past used glasses to improve my sight, without satisfactorily gaining my object, I called on Mr. Mincer, optician, of Detroit, who readily adapted glasses to my eyes, with which I am so well pleased, that I cheerfully speak in his favor. His method of examining and its application in selecting glasses to fit the eye can only be acquired by a knowledge of the useful organ to which must be added extensive experience. He has also adapted glasses to Mrs. Baker's eyes with which she is well pleased. I recommend him to all who need glasses adapted to their wants; poor glasses are an abomination.
V. A. BAKER, M.D.

ADRIAN, Nov. 18, 1882.
I have used spectacles bought of Mr. B. Mincer for the past three months, and find them superior to any I have ever used, and can cheerfully recommend him to any one in need of glasses, and the benefit of his experience in the science of optics to adjust proper lenses.
DANIEL TODD, M.D.

I have investigated the work of Mr. B. Mincer, optician. I have reason to believe that he understands his profession, and adjusts excellent glasses on scientific principles.

TIRED ALL OVER,
What Rested and Refreshed a Weary Man in Memphis.

"No, it never amounted to an acute pain, but continued to be a dull weary ache in the small of my back," writes Mr. James Thomas, of No. 59, Madison st., Memphis, Tenn. "This was an old experience, and life became dull music. I was tired all over, with pain in the lower limbs, and a habit of lying awake of nights. Recently I tried one of Benson's Capcine Porous Plasters and was decidedly relieved within twenty-four hours. It may have been Providence that did the work, but I give the credit to Benson's porous plaster." Mr. Thomas' reverential idea does him credit, but Providence works by agents, and among them Benson's plaster ranks first as an external remedy. It acts quickly in relief and healing, and renders life better worth living. Price 25c. Look in the middle of the plaster for the word Capcine. Ask your physicians about it. BASE BALL BATS.

Remember the game between Quincy and Tecumseh to-morrow afternoon.

The Clinton News gives its ball players this sensible advice.: "We are sorry to learn that there has been considerable ill feeling and jealousy existing between the first and second nines of our club. This ought not to be the case. If the club wish to do themselves credit, they should pick out the best players, and all work harmoniously together for the success of Clinton against the world.

Adrian Press: Tecumseh hired a special car for its base ball club (which the Post avers was "stuffed with professionals") and one day last week went to Hudson, and pounded the Chaffs out of the championship by a score of seventeen to eight. It was spleen that led the Post to charge the Tecumseh's with importing professionals. They never did such a thing in the world—neither did Adrian. It is unkind to intimate any thing of this nature whenever a club gets cleaned out. Tecumseh's players are all home made, and when they get down to business Chaffs loose the belt.

The Manchester Enterprise: The Tecumseh base ball club are said to have done some very good playing this season. They ought to tackle the Manchester club and experience some of the reverses of fortune.

THE LAST RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

A terrible railroad accident occurred last Friday night on the Rome and Watertown railroad near Carlton, N. Y. The train was filled with tourists going to the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec and other eastern points. The train collided with a freight car which the wind had tipped over on the main track from a side track. Among the passengers were several Michigan people, some of whom were killed. Among the victims were Mrs. Wortley, of Saline, and A. B. Bostwick, formerly of Adrian. Dr. & Mrs. Kimball and E. I. Waldby and daughter, of Adrian, were also on the train, but they escaped uninjured. A private letter from Mr. Waldby contains the following particulars of the sad affair, which we clip from the Times:

Mr. Waldby, who, with his daughter and Dr. and Mrs. N. H. Kimball, were in the rear coach at the time of the accident, says that Mr. Bostwick boarded the train at Albion, the first station west of Carlton, occupying a seat in the forward car, and that he was almost instantly killed by the collision. He was conscious, however to the last, living a little more than an hour. Dr. Kimball and Mr. Waldby were with him to the end.

Dr. and Mrs. Kimball and Mr. Waldby and daughter escaped without injury. The coach which they occupied had, until the day of the accident, been placed next the baggage car, but its position was reversed on that afternoon, and it was placed on the end of the train. As the two forward coaches were utterly demolished, the change in position probably saved the lives of our townspeople.

I shall be most happy to introduce this beautiful book to the lovers of music in Tecumseh.

H. M. GAMON.

Five years and four months ago the fourth of August Mr. W. H. Sink came to Tecumseh and rented the old Exchange hotel, and run the house nearly two years under the name of the Pioneer hotel. He then moved up to the Merchants' block house and until yesterday run the house under the name of Sink's Hotel. Yesterday Mr. Sink left for Monroe, having traded houses with Mr. Passmore, late proprietor of the Park Hotel of that city. We are sorry to have Mr. Sink leave Tecumseh. He has kept the best hotel ever in the place; has been honorable and square in all his dealings, and we can but commend him to the people of Monroe and assure them that Monroe will have, while Mr. Sink stays, a first-class hotel. Mr. W. H. Passmore, of Monroe, will be landlord of the old Merchants' Hotel, and we trust he will keep as good a house as his predecessor.

M. P. Brown will attend the National Convention of photgraphers at Milwaukee next week.

Thos. Adamson, of San Francisco, Cal., sent to Mrs. Geo. Adamson, of this place, two large hand painted banners which surpass anything for handiwork and fine art we have seen in the line of wall decorations.

The management of the T. B. B. A. have been to a large expense in securing the Bay City's, and will have to charge an admission fee of 25 cents to the game. As this is the only strictly professional nine that [illegible] have ever played here no doubt that there will be a large crowd.

Adrian Record: There is nothing about William Moore, a colored lad employed in the Press office, to indicate unusual capacity, and yet that boy is a hero of no mean order. William loves watermelons almost to idolatry, and when the other day the composing force of the Press and Record, who had clubbed together and bought an 18 pound watermelon, proposed to William that if he would eat the entire melon at one sitting they would buy him ten bananas and a quart of peanuts, the brave lad at once tackled the job and finished it with composure, to the utter dismay of the stock company, who had paid 75 cents for the melon. William merely remarked, as he rose up and calmly wiped his mouth on his sleeve, "Wish I had a dozen o'nges foh a dessert," and then he went out into the press room and worked off the regular edition of the Record.

Silver Wedding.

Our pastor, (Rev. B. F. Rapp:) and his wife, will, Providence permitting, celebrate their 25th marriage anniversary, Aug. 10th, at 8:30 P. M., in the church of Christ, East Ridgeway, Lenawee County, Michigan.

All friends and well wishers of our brother and his wife, who may feel so disposed, are respectfully invited to either be present on that occasion, or represent themselves by letter.

Mr. Rapp's P. O. address is Balch, Lenawee Co., Michigan. His express office is Britton, Lenawee Co., Michigan, on the St. Louis, Wabash and Pacific R. R., 15 miles north from Adrian. Persons from the East and South wishing to be in attendance upon said anniversary, will find their way to Toledo, then via. Southern Michigan R. R., to Adrian, at which they will change cars for Brittor.

We bespeak for our worthy pastor and wife, a large and substantial representation upon that occasion. By order of committee of arrangements and reception.

BASE BALL.

Ypsilanti vs. Tecumseh, Thursday—Clinton vs. Ypsilanti, Friday.

Base ball was lively last week in Tecumseh. Thursday the Ypsilanti club played the home nine and the score stood at the wind up 18 to 2 in favor of Tecumseh. Our boys played splendidly, making only five errors during the game. Heidenrich did not have a single passed ball and caught as well as any man could. In fact, with Tray as pitcher and Heidenrich catcher, the Tecumseh nine has as strong a battery as any amateur nine in the state. The "Ypsi" team was nowhere, and had it not got dark, would never have scored a tally.

The game between Clinton and Ypsi. Friday did not amount to much, so far as playing was concerned. Errors without number were made on both sides, and the game dragged on until after 7 o'clock, when the score footed 22 to 12 in favor of Ypsi.

To-morrow (Friday) a game will be called at 3 P.M., instead of 4 as advertised, between Quincy and the home nine. It is reported that the Quincy team is a strong one, and we anticipate a good game.

Next Wednesday is announced, a game between Bay City and Tecumseh at base ball park, game called at 2 P.M. The Bay City club belongs to the Northwestern League, and this will be the only League game here this season. It will be no exhibition game. Our battery will be Will Tray pitcher, and James Tray catcher, and with this team our boys will be able to hold them a pretty good row. The club has been brought here at a large expense, and we trust our people will turn out to see the game and give the Base Ball Association a benefit.

The association have rented the Bills ground for three years, and no expense has been spared to put the diamond in the best of shape. In addition to this a new grand stand is being put up in a place where people can get a good view of the game, and yet be out of danger. All this work is being completed as rapidly as possible, and when done Tecumseh will have the finest base ball park of any amateur club in the state.

Following is the score by innings for the Ypsilanti and Tecumseh game:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.	B.H.	P.O.	A.	E.
Tecumseh...	0	3	1	2	3	2	2	5	0	18	12	13	5
Ypsilanti....	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	1	2	1	1	12

The township school inspectors will meet in Adrian on the 7th of August to elect a county examiner to succeed Prof. Hammond.

Sid Clarkson, who has been for several years cashier of the People's Bank at Manchester, has accepted a similar position in the 1st National Bank of Ann Arbor.

Adrian Press: A plank fell upon the hand of Geo. Corbett, of Ogden, while at work in Higgin's last week, and mashed some of the bones, compelling him to take a vacation.

A meeting of the citizens interested is called for Aug. 10, at 1 P. M., at Sand Creek to take measures for the permanent care and preservation of the historic Ten Brook cemetery, where repose the remains of a large number of the early pioneers of the county.

Mr. W. H. Hood, of Deerfield, who is the inventor and patentee of a metal cover for barrels, which is receiving flattering commendations from all parts of the country, has sold the territory of Canada on the patent at a good round figure.

The victims to hay fever in this county are preparing to make their annual pilgrimage to the cool and refreshing breezes of Petoskey, to exchange hay fever notes with other members of the State Hay Fever association, which holds its annual meeting there soon.

Hudson Gazette: The telegraph line men who were arrested for lopping away branches of cemetery shade trees projecting and interfering with the telegraph wires, had their examination on Wednesday, and were held for trial at the circuit giving ball in the sum of $400 each.

Deerfield Record: A picked up nine of which Deerfield furnished the battery, went to Blissfield, Thursday afternoon, and vanquished that village's crack club in probably the hotest contested and best amateur game ever played in the county. The score resulted 6 to 4 in favor of Deerfield.

Adrian Times: Abram Paulling's house in Madison took fire, last week Sunday, rather strangely. A new milk can had been placed near the the house, and the hot sun shone upon it in such a way as to reflect the rays upon the house, setting it on fire. Had it not been discovered in time, the house would have been consumed.

Morenci Observer: Mr. A. B. Bowen, the "crooked" lumberagent of the Pratt Bros., having just finished his ninety days' term in the county jail, goes again behind the bars—this time being arrested on a complaint of getting money under false pretences.—The amount was thirty dollars, which he obtained of H. E. Green & Co. averring it was for the Pratts.

The old men of Deerfield have gone into the ball business. The Record says, "An old fashioned game of ball is announced for Saturday of next week, on the ball park. No man under fifty years of age will be allowed to play, and the losing club to pay for the supper after the game. Come and see how our grandfathers played ball in 'auld lang syne.'"

Deerfield Record: The Michigan & Ohio railway surveying gangs have completed the work of running the new line through this village. Without a doubt the road will be built on this line, and it is expected that the grading will be commenced at once.—The route by way of this village, from Britton to Toledo, is four miles shorter than by the Dundee route.

Deerfield Record: A railroad meeting was held at the council room, last evening, to take action in regard to the line of the M. & O. road, recently surveyed through this village. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Garner, Eong, Manning, Burnham and Yale, was appointed to visit Toledo and confer with the officers of the road and learn what propositions they wish to make our people.

FROM THE "BAPTIST ITEMS."

May and Bertha DeWolf are visiting friends in the east.

Bro. J. O. Heck has decided to go to Kalamazoo College in September.

Mary Herring and Ella Webster start for Chautauqua Monday 6th inst.

Mr. P. R. Adams has been quite sick during a part of the month of July.

Bro. Wm. Loyster, of Hudson, is Associational Superintendent this year.

Out of the two hundred and twenty-five members reported to the Association just twenty were at the July Covenant meeting.

Dr. Hamilton and wife have enjoyed a visit from Rev. V. L. Garrett and daughter, of Middleville. Bro. G. is [illegible]

Dr. L. G. North was taken severely ill Friday morning, July 27th. For some hours his physians were much alarmed, but skill baffled disease and he is recovering.

The many friends of Mrs. W. J. Reckord, of Cleveland, formerly Miss Jennie Jones, of this place, have enjoyed a visit from her during the past two or three weeks. She has returned to her home.

The Ladies' Social was held at Wm. Bresie's on the afternoon of July 12th. The attendance, for a harvest social, was very large. The receipts were something over six dollars. It was voted to discontinue the meetings until September 1st.

The pastor has been invited to address the monthly temperance meeting at Hudson Sunday eve. Aug. 5th. Accordingly he has arranged an exchange of pulpits with the pastor of the Baptist church of that city for that day. He also has arranged an exchange with Rev. P. VanWinkle, of Troy, for August 12th.

Mr. Asa Stevens of Chicago, has been visiting his Tecumseh friends for a couple of weeks. He returned to Chicago July 25th. He is with Marshal, Field & Co. He sells nothing but velvets, and has the satisfaction of knowing, that he last winter, made the largest weekly sale ever made in that department. He is doing well, and deserves his success.

Several young ladies have been practicing on the organ. Opportunities for pipe-organ practice have not been common in our village. In consequence people who can play that kind of an instrument are rare in Tecumseh. Could we have a larger number it would be no discredit to the town and would often be a great convenience to the churches.

The Chautauqua Class is slowly pursuing the even tenor of its way. Because of the difficulty of the reading, a few have dropped out, thinking they have no aptitude for such studies. They have made a mistake. To pursue any line of study with ease is the result of discipline, which can be obtained through patient and presistent labor only. That natural science or history is difficult, is the very reason why it should be studied—to give the mind discipline in that direction.

Mrs. Dr. H. F. Aten, of 34 Hanson Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., reached Tecumseh July 26th, and is stopping with Mrs. Abbie Fisher. She is accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marion, and her son, Master Arthur.—They will visit in this vicinity for a few weeks. They report the graduation recently from Long Island Hospital College, of our friend Willie Aten, son of Mr. Charles Aten, of this village. Years ago, Willie belonged to our Sunday school, class No. 13. He will practice in Brooklyn. His friends here are all wishing him success.

A thriving Sunday-School is in operation in East Tecumseh this summer. The following is the corps of officers and Teachers:

Supt.—Dea. J. Margeson.
Asst. Supt.—E. Sherd.
Sec.—Nellie Boise.
Treas.—Mrs. Boice.
Organist.—Alice Garlinghouse.
Teachers.—C. W. Culbertson, E. Sherd, Miss F. Aten, C. E. Conley, Mrs. C. E. Conley.

The school was organized a year ago last May. It took a vacation about Oct. 1, until the first of last May. The attendance ranges from sixty to seventy-five. It is an interesting place to go to.

Rev. J. D. Fulton, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y. was in Tecumseh one day week before last. He is pastor of Clermont Ave. Temple, and by many is considered the Spurgeon of America. Few natives of this section have made themselves more felt in the outside world than has he. Though brought up in this vicinity he said he knew almost no one as he walked our streets. He was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. I. S. Hamilton during his short stay. He passed part of the time in the village cemetery caring for the graves of his father and mother. He last Spring lost his wife whom now sleeps in Greenwood. During his vacation his pulpit is supplied by his nephew, Charles F. Fulton, who most of our citizens remember as the youngest son of Dr. S. J. Fulton who for many years practiced medicine in Tecumseh. Charlie is just entering the ministry. Success to him.

TWO DAYS IN THE COUNTRY.

We enjoyed a brief period of "life in the country" last Friday and Saturday, partaking of the hospitality of J. D. Walker and S. J. Walker, of Norvell. The country north of Wampler's lake, between Norvell and Brooklyn cannot be excelled for farming purposes, and we know of no better place to rusticate for a few days. Scove Walker had a family reunion last week. His daughter, Mrs. Dr. Hyndman, of Tompkins Center, Jackson Co., was home on a visit, and Mrs. Beardsley, of Lafayette, Ind., another daughter, arrived unexpectedly on Saturday.

Friday forenoon we drove over to Brooklyn to make a few of our old friends a call. Found Bro. Clough and the Exponent office nicely domiciled in his new quarters in the Teach[illegible] well equipped for all kinds of work, and is publishing a newspaper that is a credit to Brooklyn. We also called on Dr. L. M. Jones, who occupies the same office he has for so many years. Helen H. Sisson still sells milinery in her new store on the west side. She also deals in sewing machines and musical instruments. Brooklyn, like all other interior towns, is rather dull at this season of the year, but the business of the place has enjoyed a healthy growth during the past two or three years. A drive to Norvell with horse and buggy consumed most of the afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon we made C. W. Akin a short call at his grove at the east end of Wampler's Lake. He has ten new boats, a splendid grove for picnics and plenty of stable room to accommodate all who may come. Started out with a party for a fish, but after struggling against a high gale for an hour or two, and getting well ducked, we concluded to postpone our fishing until some more favorable occasion. Charley is prepared to receive all comers and entertain them sumptuously. Had a splendid swim in Fay Lake on Sunday morning with "the boys," and a very pleasant drive home in the afternoon.

SAMARITAN NERVINE
NEVER FAILS.

"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, and fifty other complaints?" We claim it is so, simply, because the virus of all diseases arises from the blood. Its Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties meet all the conditions herein referred to. It is known world wide as

THE GREAT
NERVE CONQUEROR

It quiets and composes the patient—not by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the stomach and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid fancies, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. (14)

Put a Brand on Him.

"Women are a necessary evil," he said, bringing down his fist hard on the counter to emphasize the heartless remark. It was in the village store at West Milton, Saratoga County, and the speaker was the central figure of a group of bucholic philosophers. He was homely, slovenly and sixty. "There's where I differ from you altogether," said Mr. George T. Graham, of the same place. "Women are mostly what men make 'em. When husbands are brutes, wives will fall in submission or make home hot for the men; and they're unnatural in either character. Love them, and especially be good to them when they're sick, and you'll have no trouble. There's my own wife, now. She's suffered a good deal with dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other ailments that took the bloom off her cheeks and the spring out of her steps. Well, she saw an advertisement of PARKER'S TONIC, and thought it would be just the thing for her case. Gentlemen, I sent five miles after a bottle. She took it. I sent again after more. So several times. Trouble? Why, if you could see how much good it has done her, you would say that women are the greatest of God's blessings and Parker's Tonic is the next."

This preparation which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be called simply Parker's Tonic. This change has been rendered necessary by substitutes imposed upon their customers by unprincipled dealers uder the name of ginger; and as ginger is really an unimportant flavoring ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change however in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

TIRED OUT.

The distressing feeling of weariness, of exhaustion without effort, which makes life a burden to so many people, is due to the fact that the blood is poor, and the vitality consequently feeble. If you are suffering from such feelings, is just what you need, and will do you incalculable good.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

No other preparation so concentrates and combines blood-purifying, vitalizing, enriching, and invigorating qualities as AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

Native Eloquence.

The Laramie Times publishes what the Ute chief, Colorow, might have said had he been called on for a few impromptu remarks, a la Logan:

"Warriors, I have called you around the council fire to talk with you. We are not a great nation. The bones of our people are bleaching in the home of the pale face. We are not too numerous to mention. The light air and the fire-water of the white man have yielded a big crop of copper colored "stiffs." I call to my people and the echo of my voice alone comes back to me from the wilderness. Some are in the happy hunting grounds. Others are in Leadville. We are becoming more and more seldom.

The buffalo and the elk, too, have disappeared before the pale face. Grass is growing in the war path. The white man took away our hands and built narrow gauge railroads over them. My people are few. I shout, and their voices come back to me in the wailing winds. Our camp-fires have gone out, and we are compelled to use the base-burner of our fathers has disappeared, and the white man's porterhouse steak and jerked pancakes are given to us to keep away starvation. These are our wrongs.

We have called on the Great Father at Washington for redress, and he told us to "brace up." Are those the words of a kind father to his children? We asked again, and he told us to "cheese it." Is that the talk of a great chief? No!

We are dropping off like autumn leaves. The toes of the red man are turning up on every hand. [Laughter, and cries of "Oh let up!" from the galleries.] We are but a handful. Where once our warriors were as the sands of the sea, now there is not a corporal's guard. There is not enough to make a pie. The Great Spirit does not like this. He loves his children and will not allow the pale face to get the bulge on them. The buffalo, the elk and antelope belong to the red man. The Texas cow and the veal-cutlet belong to the pale face.

Warriors, I have taken down the scalping knife and the tomahawk. I mean business. My system requires the blood of the pale face. We must have a little excursion through Colorado. I will arrange for the round trip and furnish the refreshments. And now, farewell. Go to your couches and rest. Adux! Bon Homing! Ta! ta! Don't oversleep yourselves, for on the morrow we cook the goose of the pale face, and ride our war horses over his watermelon vines."

Greeley on Lawyers.

"Mr. Greeley," said Partridge, this is Mr. Denslow, a young attorney."

Greeley uttered a short grunt of recognition, but did not even look around. I, embarrassed, shrunk away to one corner and took a chair. He went around the room looking at the pictures and whatnot, and in about five minutes, when his back was turned on me, and I thought he had forgotten me, he suddenly, without looking at me, said:

"Hem! So you're an attorney are you?"

I confessed it.

"I hate lawyers!" he exclaimed, emphatically; "I hate lawyers, they do more mischief than their heads are worth."

"I suppose they are a necessary evil," I suggested, deprecatingly.

"Wholly unnecessary," he insisted.

"I suppose you will acknowledge," I said, "that they promote good order and remove impediments to good government."

"Just the contrary, just the contrary!" he squeaked, in his old falsetto; "they cause disorder, and they are the chief obstacles to good government."

I thought the man was crazy. "Perhaps you can 'inform me.'" I suggested "How debts could be collected without lawyers?"

"Don't want 'em collected! don't want 'em collected!" he squeaked. "If A lets B have his property without payment, I don't see why C, D, E, F, and all the rest of the alphabet should be called on to serve as a police to get it back! No debt should be collected by law. It's monstrous! Let a man trust another man at his own risk. Even a gambler pays his own debts that he isn't legally obliged to pay, and calls them debts of honor; but men will put their property out of their hands to prevent the legal collection of their grocery bills. Abolish all laws for the collection of debt, and that would abolish most of you lawyers—good riddance!"

Happiness of the Newly Married.

It is the happiest and most virtuous state of society in which the husband and wife set out together, make their property together, and with perfect sympathy of soul, graduate all their expenses, plans, calculations, and desires with reference to their present means and to their future common interest.

Nothing delights man more than to enter one of the neat little tenements of the young people, who, within perhaps two or three years, without any resources but their own knowledge or industry have joined heart and hand, and engage to share together the responsibilities, duties, interests, trials and pleasures of life. The industrious wife is cheerfully employing her own hands in domestic duties, putting her house in order, or mending her husband's clothes, or preparing dinner; whilst perhaps the little darling sits prattling on the floor, or lies sleeping in the cradle, and everything seems preparing to welcome the happiest of husbands and best of fathers when he shall come home from his toil to enjoy the sweets of his little paradise.

This is true domestic happiness. Health, contentment, love, abundance and bright prospects are all here. But it has become a prevalent sentiment that a man must require his fortune before he marries—that the wife must have no sympathy nor share with him in the pursuit of it—in which most of the pleasure truly consists—and the young married couple must set out with as large and expensive an establishment as is becoming those who have been married for twenty years. This is very unhappy; it fills the community with bachelors, who are waiting to make their fortunes, endangering virtue, promoting vice; it destroys the true economy and design of the domestic institution, and it promotes idleness and inefficiency among females, who are expecting to be taken up by fortune, and passively sustained without any care or concern on their part; and thus many a wife becomes, as a gentleman once remarked, not a "help-mate," but a "help eat."

For positive curative effects, one bottle of Ayer's Sarsaprilla is worth three of any other name.

The Baobab Tree and Fruit.

Monkey-bread grows on an enormous tree called baobab; botanically named for Adanson, a French botanist. The tree is a native of Senegal, in Africa; also found on the banks of the white Nile. It has been raised in England from the seed, and in India. At Alipore, near Calcutta, there is one whose trunk measures in some places, over sixty feet in circumference. The height of the baobab is not in proportion to its diameter. It has very long roots, seeming to like the earth better than do many trees. They have been measured one hundred feet laid bare, and were doubtless much longer still. The lower branches of the tree bend to the ground, almost concealing the trunk. They have large, dark-green, abundant leaves. The flower is large and white, its stamens gathered into a tube below, and spreading like an umbrella above.

The tree is mucilaginous in all its parts, the fruit being the most useful. It is, for what reason cannot be ascertained, called Monkey-bread. It measures from nine to twelve inches long, and four in diameter at each end. It has a brownish color when ripe. The pulp is slightly acid; that between the seeds tastes like cream tartar, and is used for fevers. Strong cords are made from the bark of the tree.

The baobab was long thought to be the largest tree in the world. The discovery of the mammoth sequoias in California has proven the mistake of this supposition. Livingstone judged a baobab which he examined, in Africa, to be at least 1,400 years old. The tree is not easy to destroy, but it is subject to a natural disease, a sort of correspondence to what is called brain-softening. Can it be that this vegetable giant becomes dizzy with its grandeur and superiority, and thus grows both vain and weak? It is sometimes easy for imagination to invest inanimate life with soul-life; and what man shall say where the mysterious lines of distinction begin or end in the divine plan and fulfillment? It is a question often asked before—one that sounds unreasonable, chimerical; but God has so constituted the human mind as to give it the impulse and curiosity of inquiry.

The baobab tree appears to have a positive limit for its age. It will sicken and die by a softening process, finally falling, by its own weight, into a ruined heap.

The trunk is usually hollow. Executed criminals, to whom the law denies rites of sepulture, have been entombed in these trunks. The bodies soon withered and became dry like mummies.

Comfort for Old Maids.

Old maids are useful. They can cook, sew and take care of the children and nurse sick people, and generally play the piano. Old bachelors are useless. They do not even know how to drive nails or split wood.

Old maids are amiable. If one wants anything done that requires patience and kindness of heart, a single lady is sure to be the one to do it.

Old bachelors are ill-natured. They snub children, despise babies and hate young mothers, and are always so busily employed in seeing that other people take care of them that they have not a moment to give to any one else.

Old maids are nice looking, and "young for their years." Old bachelors generally have red noses, rheumatism in the knees, bald heads and mouths that turn down at the corners.

Old maids can make a home of one little room, and they cook delicious meals for one over the gas jet, in cunning little tin kettles, besides making all their own wardrobes. Old bachelors need an army of tailors, waiters, cooks and distant relatives to keep them comfortable.

When old maids are ill they tie up their heads in pocket handkerchiefs, take homoepathic pellets out of two bottles alternately, and get well again. When old bachelors are ill they go to bed and send for four doctors; have a consultation, a mantlepiece full of black bottles, all the amiable married men who belongs to the club to sit up with them at night, besides a hired nurse, they telegraph to their relations, and do their best to persuade the world that they are dying.

When an old maid travels she takes a sandwich, a piece of pound cake and a bottle of lemonade in a basket, and lunches comfortably in the carriage. When an old bachelor travels he orders a meal in courses at the station, and raves because he has no time to eat it before the "fifteen minutes for refreshments" has expired.

Old bachelors drink strong liquor, and it gives them headaches.

Old maids are modest. They think their youth is over and their beauty gone. If after a while some autumnal love is given them they take it as a sort of a miracle, and hope people will not laugh at them for "marrying so late in life."

Miseries of Science.

Science is daily proving to us what a horrible world we live in. Our clothing is disease-breeding, our colored socks are poisonous, our hats produce headaches, neuralgia and baldness, the water we drink is tainted, the soap we use produces a thousand ills, the air we breathe sends death pulsing through our veins, and now a paper has proven to our entire satisfaction that the food we eat is adulterated, that we are in daily danger of taking in sickness with our sugar and death with our bread. Yet if we subscribe to no scientific papers, but go quietly on our way, eating what we please, drinking what we can get, wearing what we have, and sleeping where we may, we will probably never have any qualms of the stomach, and live as long and be as happy as the most scientific of scientists.

If a bottle of the oil of pennyroyal is left uncorked in a room at night, not a mosquito, or any other bloodsucker, will be found there in the morning. Mix potash with powered meal, and throw it into the rat holes of a cellar, and the rats will depart. If a rat or mouse gets into your pantry, stuff into the hole a rag saturated with a solution of cayenne pepper, and no rat or mouse will touch the rag for the purpose of opening a communication with a depot of supplies.

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters is taken occasionally.

How to Remove Stumps.

The editor of the Michigan Farmer describes the method of using giant powder for clearing out large stumps, with costs and results:

Going on a little further we met Mr. John Carpenter, with an ordinary market basket upon his arm, in which were his cartridges, like long, yellow-colored thick candles, about an inch in diameter, and about a dozen in number, and a coil of fuse that looked like a piece of thin twisted wire cord. He had a box of gun-caps also, which fitted the end of the fuse. At a distance was a man who seemed to be poking around the stumps with a spade, and who also had what appeared to be a straight iron crowbar with a chisel-shaped point and a broad head on the other end. After examining the stump, and deciding upon the right place for the charge to be placed, he sunk this far down into the ground, and then drove it as deep as he thought necessary, in a sloping direction under the stump with a maul. The rule is to get the charge as close up to the wood as possible, and about this depth. This man made the hole, Mr. Carpenter followed with the basket and his tamper. He first found the depth of the hole with his tamper; then he took the cartridge and putting a cap on the fuse, sunk it in the soft explosive, where it remained while he gently slid the cartridge into the hole, pushing it to the bottom with the tamper. He then pushed two or three small pieces of soft mold or earth down to the cartridge, pressing it lightly; he then tramped the hole full of earth, and lighting a match set fire to the fuse.

We all stood back then about ten rods and waited for the result. The stump was a tough old oak, about three feet across, with a firm hold on the clay soil, and looked as if not disturbed it might last for the next hundred years. All at once we saw that stump rise out of the ground, a puff of smoke followed, some splinters and a loud sound as of cracking timber came out of its centre, and from the side where the cartridge had been put there was a rush of earth, roots and grass sent up into the air for a distance of from fifty to seventy feet. The thing was done, the whole operation was repeated over and over again with the same results. In less than an hour there were no less than ten stumps blown up in this way. On examining the stumps after the explosions, we found many of them split in three and four sections, and many so split up that it was light work for the oxen to haul them out and draw them to the heap for burning. The powder had left a hole or chamber which it had hollowed out as if by compression; it was not very deep, but afforded room to get all the roots which it was necessary to cut off. The cartridges were in half pound cuts, and cost at the rate of 50 cents per pound. One cartridge will take an ordinary two feet stump, but when one of these stuff, three or four feet stumps are encountered, from two to three cartridges are used.

The Mahogany Tree.

Full-grown, the mahogany tree is one of the monarchs of tropical America. Its vast trunk and massive arms, rising to a lofty height and spreading with graceful sweep over immense spaces, covered with beautiful foliage; bright, glossy, light and airy, clinging so long to the spray as to make it almost an evergreen, present a rare combination of loveliness and grandeur. The leaves are very small, delicate and polished like those of the laurel. The flowers are small and white or greenish yellow. The mahogany lumbermen, having selected a tree, surround it with a platform about twelve feet above the ground, and cut it above the platform. Some dozen or fifteen feet of the largest part of the trunk are thus lost; yet a single log not unfrequently weighs from six or seven to fifteen tons and sometimes measures as much as seventeen feet in length and four and a half to five feet in diameter, one tree furnishing two, three or four such logs. Some trees have yielded 10,000 superficial feet.

My Wife and Fits.

"For 25 years," says our correspondent Henry Clark, of Fairfield, Lenawee Co., Mich.; "my wife had fits.—They would last about an hour, and sometimes longer. Samaritan Nervine has permanently cured her."

GUARDIAN SALE.

BY virtue of an order of the Probate Court for Lenawee County, Michigan, made on the second day of July, A.D. 1883, authorizing the undersigned as guardian of Alvinzie R. Arner, Louisa M. Arner, and Ambrose C. Arner, minors, will on the 22d day of August, 1883, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, on the premises hereafter described, offer for sale and sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the undivided one-half of all those tracts or parcels of land situate in the township of Ridgeway, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, known and described as follows to wit: All that portion of the Northwest quarter of section eighteen, town six south of Range five East, lying West of the center line of the ridge road (so called) leading across said quarter section—excepting therefrom the North twenty acres thereof now owned by Morgan M. THE DANGER OF OVER-EXERTION.

A Stalwart Man Becomes Weaker Than a Child and then Recovers his Former Strength.

Waterloo, N. Y. Observer.

In these days of rowing giants and athletic heroes, the physical development is more observed than ever before since the days of the Athenian games. The man who shows the elements of physical power is looked up to far more than in the days of our ancestors, possibly because there are fewer specimens of well developed manhood than then. An instance of this power and a magnificent specimen of physical power of few days since in the person of Mr. A. W. McNaughtan, of Waterloo. His muscles, which showed prominently, were as hard as wood. At his request the writer placed his fingers on the arms, but found it wholly impossible. The relation of what he underwent and experienced was fully explained.

"Have you always been so stalwart?"

"When I was a boy I was a very strong child, and felt that I could accomplish anything. I felt so full of vigor, and ambitious that I was always in the van. But in two months from that time I was crippled and for months I could do nothing. I consulted a large number of good physicians that day. I began to grow worse and worse. I believed that I had tried everything, and was learned and experienced in medicines, having spent one hundred dollars in medicines prescribed for malaria. My kidneys were affected, I had no appetite, I was nervous, I had no energy, I was a mere wreck of what I had been. My kidneys were so badly affected that I had to get up from my bed two, three, four times every night to void the secretions. I was in a state of complete prostration. I was completely discouraged."

What did the doctors say about you?"

"Ask me what they did not do. I suppose I have had as great a prejudice against advertised medicines as any one could have. While I was studying medicine at Ann Arbor, Michigan, I used to vow with the rest of the class that we would fight all such remedies at all times. When a man comes down to the last hour however, and bids his wife and friends good bye, much bigoted prejudices as these all vanish. I can assure you and any remedy that can cure you is gladly welcomed."

"And now have you been since then?"

"As well or better, than before."

"Do you still exert your strength?"

"Certainly. But I do not overexert, as formerly. My strength is increasing every day, and my health is number one. I know that my life was saved by Warner's Safe Cure, and I believe it is the best medicine that was ever compounded by any chemist or physician. I am willing the doctors should sneer at me for such a statement if they choose but I have proven its truth, and am prepared to stand by it."

The above experience should be of great value to all who are suffering. It shows the deceptive nature of this terrible malady; that all symptoms are common to it and that there is but one way by which it can be absolutely avoided.

Opinion of Dr. Mott, late Government Chemist, on Allcock's Porous Plaster.

My investigation of Allcock's Porous Plaster shows it to contain valuable and essential ingredients not found in any other plaster. These ingredients are so proportioned that the Allcock's Porous Plaster will not cause blisters or excessive irritation, and I find it superior to and more efficient than any other plaster.

Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of Zopesa for a friend, and stated that he Mr. Warner was afflicted with Kidney and Liver trouble for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of Zopesa. He was so bad at one time that he lost 27 pounds of flesh, but after using Zopesa claims he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. John Carter, of Saline township died very suddenly Sunday morning.

Mrs. Thos Tabor, of Bay City, formerly Rose DePuy, having been called home by the severe illness of her sister, will remain for some time among her friends here.

The monthly concert will be held next Sunday evening.

Dr. D. L. Wood, of Quincy was in our midst last Sunday, shaking hands and exchanging greeting with all of his old friends.

The question agitating the mind of many of our good people is, "who reports for the HERALD?" Various conjectures have been made, but the question yet remains unanswerable. For the enlightenment of some we will impart a little knowledge on this subject by saying that Macon has a regular reporter, who is neither a theologian nor a pedagogue. It seems as if there is a little talent outside of the contracted circle of a few which receives the credit for everything. Honor to whom honor is due.

Miss Haggart, of Clinton, was the guest of Miss Anna Pennington last week.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Power & Son is the name of the new drug firm here, instead of Parker & Son, as the types said last week.

Numerous young people of this place will attend the Teacher's Institute at Tecumseh.

The screech of the steam thresher is heard in the land.

Mr. G. W. Hallesey put a fine self-propelling engine and new separator in operation last week. The average yield of wheat per acre is good.

The apple crop will be a comparative failure here this season.

Still the west side moves forward. Extensive repairs are already making at the Exchange hotel, while the foundation for Eaton's new furniture store is well under way.

The new safe to be used by Mr. F. E. Curtis in his bank soon to be opened here, is on exhibition at Bowen's place. The safe is one of the Detroit Safe Co's make, is large and comprises all the modern improvements necessary to make it thoroughly fire and burglar proof. Its vaults will afford our people a safe deposit for wampum.

RIDGEWAY RUMBLINGS.

A very pleasant occasion occurred at the home of Mr. & Mrs. G. W. Jackson last Monday evening, at which time their china wedding was celebrated. A large number of invitations brought out a big crowd, and all seemed to enjoy themselves exceedingly well. The music was furnished by Prof. Mills, of Jackson and proved a delightful feature of the entertainment. The presents were numerous, consisting of a china tea set by the older people, silver castor, cake dish, pickle dish, sauce dish, and table spoons by the young people.

The following were individual presents:

China cake basket, Mr. & Mrs. W. W. Howe; toilet set, Mrs. Lucy Cheever; toilet set, Mr. & Mrs. M. M. Florence; fruit dish and 6 fruit knives, Mr. & Mrs. Wm. Snedicor; set silver teaspoons and Grant's Tour Around the World, Mrs. Lancaster; cheese plate and vase, Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Simonds; china sugar bowl, Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Jackson; pair vases, Mr. & Mrs. Geo. Frost; china cup and saucer, Ed. Arner; cup and saucer and two cheese plates, Mr. & Mrs. G. T. Shipman; water pitcher, Mr. & Mrs. Bert Morley.

Britton station handled 3,111,351 lbs. of freight during the month of July.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The autumn term of the Raisin Valley seminary will open on Monday, Sept. 4th, with an accomplished corps of instructors. Many changes have been made during the summer, of which these are the most important.

The students' rooms have been remodeled and nicely repaired.

The whole building will be heated by steam, a radiator being placed in every room.

A new cook room and dining hall has been arranged for, and cooking will hereafter not be done in the study rooms.

The study rooms heated with steam will be charged for as follows:

Boys, Fall and Winter Terms 50c per week.

Girls, Fall and Winter Terms, 45c per week.

Boys, Spring Term, 40c per week.

Girls, " " 35c " "

Furnished rooms will be provided when called for at the following rates: For board and furnished rooms for boys, fall and winter terms, $3.00. Spring term, $2.90. For girls 25 cents less per week and they care for their rooms.

A first-class telescope and other useful apparatus belong to the school. Besides the School Library, another Library to be located at the school, is about being established, which will be owned by a stock association. The work done at the school is thorough, and especial care is exercised to develop good moral characters in the pupils. Students will be met at trains, and efforts will be used to make life at the Seminary pleasant as well as profitable. Students wishing rooms should engage them at their earliest convenience. A SUNDAY WITH THE SHAKERS.

Some of our readers have seen the Shaker service. Many have not. For the benefit of both we give a report of a Shaker meeting. Shaker Village is perched on one of the most arduous hills of Androscoggin county, Me. Miles away you can see the large stone fortress like building where one of the two Shaker families composing the community lives. The second family's home is in a weather-stained, old-fashioned building, almost four years of age. It was built in 1795, and the elder said, after service last Sunday, "It's not fit for a decent house to live in." We are making preparations now to build a new one. The Shakers in their dignified drab coat-tails and Shakeresses in their neat, plain gowns, fastening white peaked kerchiefs and their scrupulously starched bonnets were marching from the house to the chapel when the reporter arrived. In the church the Shakers formed, standing in two squares, the males in one and the females in the other. The two divisions stood facing each other, with their hands clasped in front of them. In the rear ranks of each body stood the young wards of the community. There were three little boys of 8 to 10 years old, and half a dozen girls, apparently 4 to 14 years, whose long braided hair formed a marked contrast with the closely concealed locks of the Shaker women. The little boys' crowns were closely shaven, while the locks at the base of the head had been allowed to grow down their necks in imitation of the flowing, patriarchal hair of the aged Shakers.

Standing in this position, one voice commenced a strain of quaint song, which all took up. It was something between a hymn and a chant. The melody was strange but pleasing, and was sung by all the voices, male and female, in unison. An impressive effect was given the last chord by all the singers gradually softening the tone and ending the diminuendo in barely a murmur, at the same time lowering their hands from the clasped position to their sides in perfect harmony with the movement of the music. The elder then stepped forward to the space between the two sections of Shakers. The lines of his face indicate a man of remarkable firmness of character. The high sloping forehead, the prominent Roman nose, the unrelaxed facial muscles, his stately demeanor, and the distinct, solemn utterances of a deep musical voice, all pointed to a mind of the most positive convictions and ability of no mean order. The elder read the fourth chapter of St. John. The women and children then sang spiritedly a beautiful hymn. This and all the following hymns were given the same tremulous diminuendo, ending as before.

In the next song one common spirit seemed to move the worshipers in a stately march backward and forward across the floor of the chapel. They kept perfect time with the tune they sang, and marched with the regularity of militia, making square heels, and accompanying their march with a swinging motion of the arms and hands palms backward. There were several fine singers among the men, and all the women had excellent voices. The juvenile Shakers seemed to enter into the services with the same enthusiasm as the veterans. It was amusing to a spectator to watch the solemn faces and attitudes of the little fellows. Not a suggestion of a smile came over their features, and, to our mind, the staidest Shaker of them all was a lad of perhaps 10 summers. He wore a loose, cherry-colored sacque and a high-buttoned velveteen waist coat. He had a fair, untanned face, and pale blue eyes. The blue veins were seen through the delicate skin covering his temples, and he had a dreamy far away look. The net-locks of light hair fell over his coat collar. He seemed possessed of a most intense spirituality, and was as deeply absorbed in his devotions as the elder himself. Some of the Shakeresses once in a while allowed a sly smile to interrupt the continuous solemnity. The Shakers take these children by adoption, and have more requests to take and bring up orphan and uncared-for children than they can comply with. The wards are indentured to them until they are 21. Then they are at liberty to leave the community and go into the world if they wish. The Shakers educate them and give them the best of home training.

After several marching songs, the Shakers took seats. We had noticed among them one sandy-haired young man, apparently of not more than 25 years, who wore a plum-colored coat and who sang with much unction. The young man stepped forward nervously, drank a little water from a glass, opened a Bible which lay on a window shelf, and, after a nervous setting of the shoulders and compression of the lips, read a text from the eighth verse of the third chapter of Second Peter: "But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day." He then spoke earnestly for about fifteen minutes, without notes, in a measured, distinct and cultured voice. The speaker's words were listened to with the most profound attention by the audience. He was William Paul, the eloquent young preacher of the Shakers. Mr. Paul has been with them about four years. He is older than he looks, having reached the age of 35 years. He was born in Scotland, and educated in Glasgow. There are few pulpit orators who have the power of clothing their ideas in such chaste and eloquent language, or addressing themselves directly to the hearts of their hearers to a greater degree than this young Shaker Scotchman. After he concluded, another song was sung. The preacher then arose again and said: "If any of our visiting friends desire to say a few words they have perfect liberty."

One of the strangers present arose and explained the recently inaugurated custom of passing the contribution box. He said that it had not been originated by the Shakers themselves, but by the outsiders who desired to see the chapel enlarged, in order that they might be accommodated more conveniently. He then passed the hat and got a liberal collection.

The elder arose and said quietly: "Let us lay aside our seats and form a circle." The settees were placed beside the walls. A small circle of singers formed in the center of the chapel. Around this inner circle the other worshipers formed in double file and marched, while all joined in the Shaker hymns, and kept up constantly a swinging motion of their arms and hands in concert with the return. They took a very grave but promenade step, the women leading, and the small boys bringing up the rear. The queenly form and bearing of one woman, apparently one of the elderesses of the community, was noticed by many beholders. A handsome white handkerchief and the regal grace exhibited in her walk distinguished her from her sister Shakers. The sightless eyes of one very aged and infirm Shaker, who took part in the other exercises, prohibited him from participating in this. Four or five strangers, sober walk around. One of the scalp-locked lads was in the file with the elder, and the little fellow both lengthened his stride and drew down his face to equal proportions with the elder.

The marching ceased, and the elder, after a few remarks read an article from a publication called "The Shaker Manifesto," published by the United societies. The reading was followed by testimonies by the brothers and sisters. One aged, gray haired brother said: "I'm not ashamed of the Shaker life. I'm glad I have given up the life of self and given my life to God. I mean to be a better Shaker." A sister said: "I think the angels have come near unto us in our devotions. I am glad I am a Shaker. At the age of 16 I said to myself: 'Shall I serve myself or the Lord? Shall I live a life of pleasure or a godly life?' I said I would serve God, and I feel that I have done it. It has been a satisfaction to me to escape many trials, get out of the world, assume the plain dress and language, and live a life of purity. I'm glad I did so. I know I would have been as liable as any woman in this world to succumb to temptations of the world if I hadn't placed myself beyond them." After more marching the venerable blind Shaker closed the exercises by speaking a few words and requesting the audience to remain seated while they passed out. This was done. The Shaker service was over, when the patriarch was reverently led out of the door by a young brother.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

The Ideal Oatmeal Porridge.

Clean, aromatic, coarse dry meal must be got from some shop where they know what is good in the way of oatmeal. The meal must be stored as carefully as tea in a covered dry jar, so that neither must, mice or beetles can defile it. The saucepan must be the pink of cleanliness, and must not have been used for anything other than milk and breadstuffs. Saucepans in which potatoes, greens or meats have been cooked are never pure enough for milk and breadstuffs. With such materials the making of delicious porridge is easy, but without them it is impossible. Bearing in mind the principles on which breadstuffs and milk are to be combined in food, we perceive that the meal must be cooked in water. Therefore, having clean boiling water in the saucepan, we take a small teacupful of meal (two or three ounces) for each pint of water in the saucepan. Draw the saucepan of boiling water off the fire and then sift in the meal through the fingers. The meal must be sifted into the water so as to be evenly spread over the surface, and to sink free from lumps. Then push the saucepan fully on the fire and boil briskly for a minute or two, so as to thoroughly mix the meal up with the water before it begins to thicken. Next boil slowly for three or four quarters of an hour, according to the coarseness of the meal. Care must be taken that the porridge is just kept on the move, and it must be stirred if necessary, so as not to burn, and not get lumpy. Smoke and soot must be carefully kept from contaminating it. The porridge is now cooked so far that all the starchy granules are fully burst, and the meal is properly disintegrated. Now, pour out the porridge like a thin custard into a vegetable dish, and leave it to cool uncovered. If successful, the porridge on cooling will set or gelatinize, a brownish skin forms over the surface, and as this contracts the porridge separates all round from the dish at its edge. It becomes a soft, tremulous jelly, perfectly cooked, sweet in flavor, uniform in consistence, and free from contamination by dirty saucepans, by burning or by the defilement of soot or smoke. It should be eaten at the end of breakfast with cold milk, and it makes a most excellent supper.

A saucerful of such porridge put into a soup plate and a half pint mug of good rich new milk is, indeed, a lunch or a supper, or a finish to breakfast, fit for a king. It is a food on which any man can do anything of which he is capable in the way of labor, mental or physical. For growing children, and youths who are stunted in height or unsound in structure, this is exactly the food that is wanted. It is like brick-and-mortar for the growing frame of infants, school children and overgrown youths. For nursing mothers it is equally valuable, supplying them with the earthy phosphates and other materials out of which good milk is made, without drawing upon the mother's own structure, as is often exemplified by the rapid softening and decay of teeth in women who nurse their children largely upon meat and upon beer.—English Mechanic.

At last a modest but enterprising gentleman has invented a bicycle for the ladies. It is built just like the masculine affair, we believe, except the saddle is a kind of a bench like, with a square hole in the middle for the fair rider to—ha-hang both—ha—you just sit on this seat and hang both—er—ha—you reach down to the treadle with both of them, you know. Pshaw! the man that will make a bicycle like that ought to be compelled to describe it himself, that's what.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Wooden Pegs.

HOW THEY ARE MADE—A VISIT TO A FACTORY IN VERMONT.

It was the privilege of the writer to visit the picturesque little town of Arlington, Vt., which at the time boasted population of 2,500, three churches, five stores, two hotels, an extensive car works, saw and blind, and chair factory; also a "peg factory," which, by the courtesy of the foreman, Mr. L. E. White, who has been employed there twenty-nine years, he was shown through, and received valuable information. The timber used is black and yellow birch, which is cut into pieces four feet in length, varying in diameter from eight to fourteen inches. These logs are placed in a building in winter, and the frost extracted by steam. They are then run on a train railway to the circular saw department, and cut into slices or blanks of the thickness desired for the length of the pegs. These are sorted and the knots cut out, and are then passed on to a long bench which contains six machines, composed of two revolving rollers. Blocks are then run between these rollers, which creases both sides. They are then run through again to cross-crease, or mark out the size of the pegs. Then they go to the splitting machines, which are set with double knives, and cut the blocks into pegs. As they pass the last machine they are sorted, and all knots and discolored ones are removed as they are brushed off into large baskets. These machines are under the care of young women, who appeared much more happy and useful than do many of those who, thumping at their piano, would consider such employment menial. The next process is bleaching, which is accomplished by the fumes of bramstone, which is unhealthy (those who labor here shorten their lives.) They are then placed in large cylinders, which hold eleven barrels, and have 600 feet of pipe running through them, and revolve one and one-half times to the minute, drying two charges per day to each cylinder. They are then passed in large wooden casks or cylinders, which, revolving rapidly, polish them by the friction, the refuse falling through wire sieves or screen openings, after which they are again passed into a sifter, which separates all the single pegs and drops them into tubs, or boxes, leaving those which have not been separated in the machine. They are then put in barrels ready for market. The factory running on full time turns out 150 bushels, or fifty barrels per day. The sizes go from eight up to sixteen to an inch. The lengths go by eighths, two and one-half to twelve. Twenty-six hands are employed, half of them being women. The products of this mill are mostly shipped to Germany and France, and enter largely into the manufacture of toys and fancy goods as well as into the shoe manufactory. Thus the "genii of mechanism" converts, as by magic, the trees from the Vermont mountains into articles of use, which, floating off through the channels of commerce to far away countries, soon return to sparkle the eyes of happy children in toys in which these pegs have become important factors.—New York Mail.

Scientific Economy.

To purify muddy water: Agitate each quart of water with an ounce of phosphate of lime, and allow it to settle. This requires only a few minutes, and it will be found that most of the impurities are carried down to the bottom. The supernatant water is now filtered without any trouble through absorbent cotton. Ordinary cotton will answer as well, if previously moistened with alcohol and then washed with water. Of course, either of them must be pressed tightly into the neck of a funnel. By this means perfectly clear water can be obtained in about five minutes.

Some of the ways of distinguishing amber from copal are thus given in La Nature: "Copal is yellow, of a more or less deep tint, but uniform throughout, and has yellow points like sulphur on its surface. Amber in a fragment of 12 centimetres in length will show a variation of shade. Amber when rubbed will yield a strong aromatic odor; imitations will not. Amber may be bent after being smeared with tallow and heated; the imitations will not bend. Amber may be cut, sawed, rasped or polished, but cannot be cemented or soldered like copal. The density of amber is 1.09 to 1.11, that of copal is 1.04.

Mercadier has described a new and economical method of producing intermittent luminous signals by burning petroleum with oxygen. He has a lamp with a round wick, within which is a tube rising not quite up to the level of the top of the wick. This tube reaches a reservoir of oxygen; when the lamp is lighted and a properly adjusted jet of oxygen is permitted to reach it, it gives out a white flame, the intensity of which approaches that of the hydrogen light. When the lamp is burned without oxygen it gives a smoky flame of little brilliancy, which will, however, rapidly increase in intensity, and soon reach a maximum when the oxygen is turned on.

Dr. Robert Munroe, in the Glasgow Medical Journal, reports a series of cases of phthisis and chronic bronchitis in which very decided and favorable results followed frequent inhalations of vapor of boiling water containing carbolic acid. Cases of fibrous phthisis and chronic bronchitis in which there was excessive expectoration were especially benefited thereby. An inhaler, though convenient, is not essential, a pitcher or jug holding boiling water being all that is needed, and care must be taken to use it several times in the day and to inhale completely the rising vapor—not merely drawing it into the mouth. The editor of New Remedies states that he has had an experience with a similar use of the remedy, which enables him to indorse what Dr. Munroe says of its efficacy.

The Testimony of a Physician.

James Beecher, M. D., of Sigourney, Iowa, says for several years I have been using a Cough Balsam, called Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs and in almost every case throughout my practice I have had entire success. I have used and prescribed hundreds of bottles ever since the days of my army practice (1863), when I was surgeon of Hospital No. 7, Louisville, Ky.

Words of Wisdom.

Whatever is obtained by deceit cheats no man as much as the getter.

We lose the peace of years when we hunt after the rapture of moments.

An elevated purpose is a good and ennobling thing, but we cannot begin at the top of it.

If you would keep a book and daily put down the things that worry you and see what becomes of them they would be of a benefit to you.

It is not well to give up the battle after a single defeat. Some people are totally discouraged by a disappointment, while others are so enraged by it that their strength and persistency are doubled.

The liberal reward of labor, as it is the necessary effect, so it is the natural symptom of increasing national wealth. The scanty maintenance of the laboring class on the other hand, is the natural symptom that things are at a stand or going backwards.—[Adam Smith.

In the bitterness of parting by death, as the consciousness of having left nothing undone, little or great that lay in our power to bring a smile to the face or a cheerful feeling to the heart of those who have gone before us.

Though it be but a trifle—even a flower by the wayside, if it have beauty and fragrance—pluck it and hand it to your fellow-traveler, for if you wait to do great things for him he may have fallen from your side and disappeared forever before you have done aught to gladden his heart.

What are all regrets compared with the anguish of having parted from a friend—perhaps from our best beloved—with unkind and cruel words? It may have been those words were uttered carelessly, lightly, as the wild and wanton breezes weeps by; but they leave a pain, as the breeze leaves some scattered rose-leaves to mark its track.

In a School in Germany.

We were of all ages, ranging from four or five to sixteen or seventeen years. The school was divided into three classes. The first class comprised fifty, the second forty, and the lowest thirty girls. We all met together at ten o'clock, for the quarter of an hour allotted to play. The school was kept by an old lady superintendent, under whose management were three other ladies—governesses. Two of them were French, the other German; but none of these took any part in the teaching; they remained in the different rooms for supervision only. Once a day at least, during some class, never at any fixed hour, the lady superintendent would herself come into each room, and inquire of the master how things were going on, and if any pupil was either careless or refractory, she was there and then reprimanded in presence of us all. I am afraid none of us cared very much for the old lady, one reason for our dislike being the fact of her having very long fingers, with which she was in the habit of tapping rather feelingly upon the shoulder of any one of us who might be stooping over or sitting carelessly at her desk. It was the rule of the school that each pupil should bring her desk with her. They were all regulation size, large enough to contain the books, paper, and other things which we might at any time require, and they were carefully locked in the evening, each girl taking her key away with her. We had a professor for every separate subject, and I must say they did their best to interest us in our work. The religious teaching in the school took up one hour every morning. A Lutheran minister and a Roman Catholic priest attending the pupils of the two denominations. There was a professor for history, another for geography, a third for arithmetic, a fourth for astronomy, a fifth for chemistry, a sixth for writing, a seventh for the German language only, two for French—the one for correction and conversation, the other for preparation—a master for drawing, and another for class-singing.

How Easy it is to Die.

"If I had strength to hold a pen, I would write how easy and delightful it is to die," were the last words of the celebrated surgeon, Wm. Hunter; and Louis XVI. is recorded as saying with his last breath, "I thought dying had been more difficult."

That the painlessness of death is owing to some benumbing influence acting on the sensory nerves may be inferred from the fact that untoward external surroundings rarely trouble the dying.

On the day that Lord Collingwood breathed his last, the Mediterranean was tumultuous; those elements which had been the scene of his past glories rose and fell in swelling undulations and seemed as if rocking him to sleep. Capt. Thomas ventured to ask if he was disturbed by the tossing of the ship. "No, Thomas," he answered, "I am now in a state that nothing can disturb me more—I am dying, and I am sure it must be consolatory to you and all that love me to see how comfortably I am coming to my end." In the Quarterly Review there is related an instance of a criminal who escaped death from hanging by the breaking of the rope. Henry IV. of France sent his physician to examine him, who reported that after a moment's suffering the man saw an appearance like fire, across which appeared a most beautiful avenue of trees. When a pardon was mentioned, the prisoner coolly replied that it was not worth asking for. Those who have been near death from drowning, and afterwards restored to consciousness, assert that the dying suffer but little pain.

Capt. Marryatt states that his sensations at one time when nearly drowned were rather pleasant than otherwise. "The first struggle for life once over, the water closing around me assumed the appearance of waving green fields. * * * It is not a feeling of pain, but seems like sinking down, overpowered by sleep, in the long, soft grass of the cool meadow."

Now this is precisely the condition presented in death from disease. Insensibility comes on, the mind loses consciousness of external objects, and death rapidly and and placedly ensues from asphyxia.

The man who sits down on the road to success and waits for a free ride, will get left.—[Whitehall Times. And the man who jumps on to the tail-board of some one else's success, will be greeted with a cry of "whip behind"—[New Haven Register. Bi-cycle, that's so. There's no jumping at such a conclusion. Just help yourself, and don't wait for the wagon.—[Cambridge Tribune. Now, gentlemen, you can't blame a man for catching at the tail-board, when if he puts his "shoulder to the wheel" he gets tar all over him.—[Bloomington Eye.

Young man, what are you living for? Have you an object dear to you as life, and without the attainment of which you feel that your life will have been a wide, shoreless waste, peopled by the specters of dead ambitions? You can take your choice in the great battle of life, whether you will bristle up and win a deathless name, and owe everybody, or be satisfied with scabs and mediocrity. Many of those who now stand at the head of the nation as statesmen and logicians were once unknown, unhonored and unsung. Now, they saw the air in the halls of Congress, and their names are plastered on the temple of fame.

You can win some laurels, too, if you will brace up and secure them when they are ripe. Daniel Webster, and President Garfield and Dr. Tanner and George Eliot were all at one time, poor boys. They struggled against poverty and public opinion heavily on till they won a name in the annals of history, and secured to their loved ones palatial homes, with lightning if you make the effort.

All these things are within your reach. Live temperately on $9 a month. That's the way we got our start. Burn the midnight oil if necessary. Get some true, noble-minded young lady of your acquaintance to assist you. Tell her of your troubles and she will tell you what to do. She will gladly advise you. Then you can marry her, and she will advise you some more. After that she will lay aside her work any time to advise you. You needn't be out of advice at all unless you want to. She, too, will tell you when you have made a mistake. She will come to you frankly and acknowledge that you have made a jackass of yourself.

As she gets more acquainted with you she will be more candid with you, and in her unstudied girlish way, she will point out errors, and gradually convince you with an old chair-leg and other arguments, that you were wrong, and your past life will come up before you like a panorama, and you will tell her so, and she will let you up again. Life is indeed a mighty struggle. It is business. We can't all be editors and lounge around all the time, and wear good clothes, and have our names in the papers, and draw a princely salary. Some one must do the work and drudgery of life, or it won't be done.

The Passion for Diamonds.

"Are there more diamonds worn now than ever before in this country?"

"I should say so, most decidedly. I have been in the business over thirty years, and I never knew such a rage for the stone as exists to-day. Recently I attended a garden party at the Grand Union hotel at Saratoga and I saw bushels of them. This is the only way to describe the number of valuable diamonds worn there, and most of them were fine stones. Nearly every woman there had big solitaires in rings or ear-rings. You see the finest diamonds are worn solitaire in studs, rings and earrings, while for bracelets and hair-pins an inferior stone may be used, as they are not so conspicuous. I noticed one thing, however, at the Grand Union—nine-tenths of the diamonds were not clean. Dust settles on everything, and it is astonishing how little care a woman will give to her diamonds. They carefully inspect their gloves and shoes before completing their toilets, but their diamonds, worth often thousands of dollars, receive no attention, become dirty, and are sometimes lost. A lady customer of mine lost a very valuable diamond after possessing it years. If she had been in the habit of giving the gem any attention, she would have noticed that a setting of eighteen carat gold will wear out in time and lose its grip on the stone. The large solitaire diamond is now preferred to the cluster. Few diamonds are worn by gentlemen except in the case of young men anxious for display. Here and there a gentleman will wear solitaires on his shirt bosom, but, if he has good taste he will be careful that they are small or he may be taken for a gambler. It is astonishing how much money is sometimes represented in the diamonds worn by ladies on a "swell" occasion. It is a common thing in New York society to see $10,000 or $20,000 in diamonds on a lady's person. Mrs. John Jacob Astor has been known to wear $50,000 worth of diamonds at an evening reception, and I should say that the diamonds worn by Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt at the garden party I spoke of were wofully that amount of money. Mrs. Mackay, wife of the "bonanza king," once offered to buy the famous "Regent" diamond, the most valuable in the world. It is valued at a mere million, but the French government wouldn't sell it."—New York Tribune.

Butler, N. Y., May 14 8?
Rheumatic Syrup Co.:

Gents—Some six years ago I was attacked with a severe form of rheumatism and dyspepsia, and for five years have been taking different remedies recommended for these diseases, but found nothing to relieve me, and for the last three years have been unable to do a day's work without suffering intense pain through my back and shoulders, and my stomach was so much out of order that I could not eat without suffering great pain. I had no appetite and my victuals distressed me so that I really ever ate for my supper anything but crackers and milk. Commenced taking Rheumatic Syrup, and after taking two bottles I thought my stomach felt better. I began to have faith that the medicine was going to help me. I continued its use a few weeks and now my appetite is good, and can eat such food as farmers require, without distressing me in the least, and I can do as much work without pain as ever in my life and enjoy my meals; in fact, I am well, the Rheumatic Syrup is the best medicine in the world. Enough can not be said in its praise.

Leroy Henderson.

If you think it right to differ from the times, and to make a stand for any valuable point of morals, do it, however rustic, however antiquated, however pedantic it may appear; do it—not for insolence, but grandly and seriously—as a man who wore a soul of his own in his bosom, and did not wait until it was breathed into him by the breath of fashion.

"The enterprising firm of Hood & Co. are doing a rushing business in Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Tooth Powder, both well known and appreciated by thousands who have tested their efficacy. The Sarsaparilla has effected wonderful cures not only in this city, but in various parts of New England where its merits are known."—Ed. Lowell Daily Citizen.

As Others See Us.

An Englishman writing to the Glasgow Herald from Chicago, says no one who knew that city before it was burned could realize its appearance to-day. It shows, as nothing else can, what an energetic and go-ahead people can accomplish in a few years. Many of the customs prevalent may seem strange, and some of the habits of the people objectionable, to visitors from the old country, but no one can fail to notice the free and obliging manner of the citizens, and a total want of that patronizing air by her leading men which only too often marks the man in a similar position in Britain when addressing an inferior in position. A millionaire will talk as frankly and as freely as though he did not own a cent. Bankers, lawyers and business men generally work a great deal harder and longer hours than the same class do in Glasgow. I met the president of a leading bank in the city, a smart young fellow. I learn that it is his rule to be in his office by 8:30 A. M., and he seldom leaves before 6 o'clock P. M. Professional and other business men generally work similar long hours. Everything seems to be pushing and driving business at railroad speed. When the style of the people is seen, it no longer surprises the stranger that Chicago arose from her ashes in so short a time.

A Voice from the Press.

I take this opportunity to bear testimony to the efficacy of your "Hop Bitters." Expecting to find them a nauseous and decided compound of bad whiskey, we were agreeably surprised at their mild taste, just like a cup of tea. My Mrs. Grosvenor and a Mrs. Conner friends have likewise tried, and pronounce them the best medicine they have ever taken for building up strength and toning up the system. I was troubled with costiveness, headache and want of appetite. My ailments are now all gone. I have a yearly contract with a doctor to look after the health of myself and family, but I need him not now.

HALL'S

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to the diseases of the scalp, and the best and cheapest restorer of faded or gray hair to its youthful color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but to date have any of them all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and its success to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause, the merit of the article itself.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It strengthens the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this application are not transitory, like those of another class, but remain a long time, which makes it the cheapest article of economy.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind, Dec. 1, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir:—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MISS C. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir:—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. John Spitler,
No. 28 Wilt St, Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora thoroughly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than two hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

Wound no man's feelings unnecessarily.

There are thorns in abundance in the path of human life.

He who climbs above the cares of the world and turns his face to his God, has found the sunny side of life.

He who, with good health, has a true friend, may laugh adversity to scorn and defy the world

Of all the qualities that go to form a good character, there is not one more important than reliability,

Duties and toil may not be sought; they are always near at hand, if our eyes will only see them.

The path which leads to the mount of ascension does not lie among flowers, it through a dark valley and o'er a cold side.

To think kindly one of another is good; to speak kindly one of another is better, but to act kindly one toward another is best of all.

Selfishness, though refined, is still selfishness, and refinement ought never to interfere with doing good in the world as it exists.

Conceit is an assumption which is to nature what paint is to beauty—not only needless, but a detriment to that which it is meant to improve.

Oh, how good a thing and how peaceable it is to be silent of others, not to believe all that is said, nor easily to report what one has heard.

There is no condition in life so bad but it has one good side. Every situation has its point of view—we should place it in that favorable light.

How vain are eloquence and earthly glory compared with heaven-descended truth! Truth is always consistent in itself and needs nothing to help it out.

Never swerve in your conduct from your honest convictions; decide because you see reasons for your decision, and then act because you have decided.

Pride, like ambition, is sometimes virtuous and sometimes vicious, according to the character in which it is found and the object to which it is directed.

Like a plant in the tropics which all the year round is bearing fruits and shaking them off, so the heart is always shaking off memories and dropping off associations.

One man falls by his ambition, another by his perfidy, a third by his avarice, and a fourth by his lust. What are these but so many nets watched, indeed, by the fowler, but woven by the victim.

The Present is the child of the Past, and the father of the Future—the inheritor of all the wisdom and the treasures that have gone before, and the creator of the glory which will fill the days to come.

When two women with new hats on pass each other on the street there is a pair of back stares built immediately.

Scotch definition of metaphysics: "Twa men are talking togither. He that's listening dinna ken what he that's speaking means; and he that,s speaking dinna ken what he means himself."

Couldn't cheat him: "Tre dollar unt a half!" exclaimed Count Rampackle to the Niagara hackman, "dot was a schwindle!" "It's the regular fare," said the hackman, "but seeing it's you, I'll take you for three dollars and fifty cents." Goot!" exclaimed the count. "It was widout bossibilities to sheet me!"—Com. Advertiser.

The good woman was in sore trouble. An irascible neighbor had called her a "termagant," and she rushed in to consult a dictionary. "Well, if it only means 'boisterous, brawling and turbulent,' I don't care so very much, but if he ever calls me a 'virago' I'll pour hot dishwater all over his wife's flower bed. That's what I will."—New Haven Register.

On a recent Sunday, when the pastor of one of the leading Presbyterian churches of St. Louis was absent from his pulpit, several persons expressed dissatisfaction at seeing a stranger in the pulpit, and one old lady said she would not have come if she had knowed Dr. —— was not going to preach. An elder standing near, very promptly replied: "Madam, the worship of Dr. —— will be résumed next Sunday.

The Presidential bulletins made one think of the sailor whose shipmate was knifed in a row on shore. They went to the hospital next day to see how their messmate was getting along. Ben Bobstay went in to ask about him, received a true statement of his case from the surgeon, and came out with a solemn face. "Good Lord, mates," he said, "Jack's a dead man. The Latin part of his bowels is all cut to thunder."

At a recent examination in a girl's school, the question was put to a class of little ones: "Who makes the laws of our government?" "Congress," was the ready reply. "How is congress divided?" was the next question. A little girl in the clas raised her hand. "Well," said the examiner, "Miss Sallie what do you say the answer is?" Instantly, with an air of confidence as well as triumph, the answer came: "Civilized, half-civilized and savage."

The Heart's Secrets.

It is well that no spectators are permitted to catch a glimpse of our heart's secrets; that the door is never opened to let any one enter to view our unseen ghosts. If we have our songs in the night, our midnight vigils, we care not the world should witness our disappointments and mishaps. "Deep in each heart's undreamed, unsought recesses, lie buried many a fond idol, many a treasure. Our spectres stand before us in their dead form, and we touch their icy hands, press kisses on their cold lips; they are constantly sauntering out from their graves; we sigh and weep because we cannot clasp their lively presence within our arms. It is better that the world should not know our heart's secrets; it's bitter scorn and its cold pity would bestow little sympathy; it would neither condole nor solace us under merciless disappointment and withered hopes. We mingle in the whirling throng of human beings, we cross the broad ocean, we travel through foreign countries. Who reads the heart's secrets? They may be guessed, conjectured, suspected, but they are not voluntarily exposed. We prefer to shut them up within the recesses of our bosoms, far out of sight.

No family can afford to be without the following remedies in the house to use in case of emergencies, before a physician can be called—oftentimes saving calling one, and also saving the lives of the little ones: A bottle of Hatch's Universal Cough Syrup, which cures coughs, colds, croup, &c.; a bottle of Home Relief for sudden attacks of colic, cramps, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc.; a box of A. H. Davis' Family Pills, for constipation, torpid liver, kidney difficulties, headache, bones ache and fever symptoms. These sizes will cost only 75 cents for the outfit.

Dampness in Brick Houses.

Hundreds of brick houses throughout the country are made most uncomfortable and unhealthy from the dampness which comes through the walls. This difficulty arises from ignorance in building—the neglect of some of the simplest and most reasonable precautions. Most men in building leave everything to the mechanic, and many of these last gentlemen, however industrious and praiseworthy in many respects, never learned the A B C of their trades. All brick walls in dwelling houses should be hollow and parated outside. Then, between the cellar walls and the first course of brick there should be a layer of some sort of cement which becomes hard and impervious to water. In the last place, every house—brick or wood—should have a tile drain put all around it to the depth of three to five feet in the ground. This can easily be run into the drain which every well-regulated cellar is supposed to have, as a matter of course. By carrying out these simple and sensible hints, a house need never be damp inside, and such afflictions as mold on the wall or in closets will never be occurring to annoy the housekeeper. It would seem that every man who undertakes to "follow the trade" of building a house ought to be posted in such necessary, elementary knowledge of his calling. But not one in a hundred knows anything about it—at least in the country, where there is no system of sewerage. In fact, living near a thriving village where there are the usual number of "good" mechanics, we never heard this matter mentioned by but one man, though we have always been accustomed to hear these complaints of the dampness of brick houses. In cities where builders are obliged to understand their business, and where competent architects are always found, "they do these things better." But such apparent necessities in buildings should, it would seem, be understood by everybody. It is a lamentable fact that they are not, and one that tells sadly upon the health of all who are compelled to live in these damp brick houses.

A Virginia River's Name.

Just then we came to a pleasant stream and stopped to water the horses. I asked Lee what the stream was called.

"De Mat, sir."

Spell it," said I.

"M-A-T—Mat," said he.

We strolled along through the woods and fields for a few miles, and came to another stream. I asked Lee what the stream was called.

"De Ta, sah."

"Spell it."

"T-A—Ta."

Again we put whip to our horses, and after three more miles had been left behind we reached another small stream running through a piece of woods. I asked Lee what the stream was called.

"De Po, sah."

"Spell it."

"P-O—Po."

By that time we were on the road to Fredericksburg. Coming to a fourth rivulet, I asked Lee what the stream was called.

"De Ny, sah."

"Spell it."

"N-Y—Ny."

"The what?"

"De Ny, sah. 'En dar's yo' M-A-T, 'en dar's yo' Mat; den dar's yo' T-A, en dar's yo' Ta; 'en yo' M-A-T-T-A, 'en yo' Matta; den dar's yo' P-O, 'en yo' M-A-T-T-A-P-O, 'en yo' Mattapo; den dar's yo' N-Y, 'en dar's yo' Ny, 'en yo' M-A-T-T-A-P-O-N-Y, 'en dar yo' hab yo' ribber Mattapony, which am a big ribber made ob dese fo' little, teeny ribbers dat us jest passed ober!"

Lee was as serious as a person at a funeral. I had thought when he began the rigmarole that he was joking, but he was in earnest. It actually did take three hours for Lee to spell the word "Mattaponi," and meanwhile we had traveled fifteen miles. The first syllable was spelled at 8:10 A. M., when we crossed the Mat; the second at about 9:30, when we crossed the Ta; the third at 10:20, when we crossed the Po, the fourth at 11, when we left the Ny behind.

A clergyman remarked the other day, "Alas, how times change! In the Old Testament days it was considered a miracle for an ass to speak, and now it seems as though nothing short of a miracle would keep one quiet."

"Just one," murmured he involuntarily, drawing closer to the lips that smiled upon him, while his own quivered in an agony of expectant anticipation. "So I notice," replied she, coolly glancing at the clock, and time for you to pull up your coat collar and shut the door from the outside." He went.

Positive Cure for Piles.

To the people of this county we would say we have been given the agency of Dr. Marchisi's Italian Pile Ointment—emphatically guaranteed to cure or money refunded—internal, external, blind, bleeding or itching piles. Price 50 cents a box. No cure, no pay. For sale by Waldo & Doty, druggists.

One can not always be amiable. Not every man and possibly every woman, is a saint. It is a good rule for the husband and wife to take turns in getting mad.

Bury your sorrow. The place for sad and disgusting things is under the ground. A cut finger is not benefited by pulling off the plaster and exposing it to everybody's eye.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of any one, and you'll succeed five thousand times better than one who is always asking favors.

Arctic Birds.

No person can visit the Pacific-Arctic without being struck by the amazing number of sea birds he meets with. Gulls, ducks and geese are found in almost incredible numbers, not to mention the land birds, such as ptarmigan, plover, snipe and so on; but the one that eclipses them all in number is the auk, whose pygopodous family is so noted for its distribution in the Polar seas. Puffins, dovekies, guillemots and the little auks, darkening the air in their myriad flight, scream to each other in ceaseless uproar on the rocky cliffs of St. Lawrence and the Diomede Islands, to which places they resort and lay eggs on bare ledges and the rifts of rocks. A place much frequented by these birds is at the former island on some detached rocks a considerable distance at sea, their shape being so singular that when approached from a long distance they may be mistaken for a ship under full sail or a tall iceberg. Closer inspection, however, reveals a rocky tower, the counterpart of an immense Vendome column. The lesser auk, the most common object that one meets in this north country, furnishes a constant source of diversion from its awkward terior position of its legs obliging the bird to sit nearly bolt upright on the ice, supported on its heels and tail, the unique picture of comic seriousness. The eggs and flesh are particularly affected as an article of diet by the Esquimaux, who eat the flesh raw and sometimes boiled in oil. Roasted auk has been a common dish at their mess table, but it must be confessed that it is only a short reprieve from salt beef, for after a few days it palls on the taste.

Beards.

Exceptionally long beards have always attracted a good deal of attention, and history records many instances of this kind. Rauber von Talberg, a German Knight, and Councilor of Maximilian II. (d. 1575.) rejoiced in a beard which reached to his feet, and from there again to his waist. John Mayo, a celebrated painter of the sixteenth century, who accompanied Charles V. in his campaign, had a beard so long that although he was a tall man, it would hang upon the ground when he stood upright; he wore it, therefore, fastened to his girdle. George Killingworth, sent by Queen Mary as one of her agents in 1555 to Czar Ivan the Terrible, is said to have had a beard 5 feet 2 inches long. In the olden time, when every part of the body had its price, the beard was valued 20s—a large sum for the time—while the loss of a leg was only estimated at 12s.

We can easily imagine that at periods when the beard and whiskers were looked upon as ornamental, false beards were substituted for the genuine article. Pedro IV. of the Aragon (1351) found himself compelled to prohibit his Catalonian subjects from wearing false beards. But the most singular substitute is the golden beard which Chrysostemus says, was worn by the Kings of Persia. Suetonius says the same of Caligula, the Roman Emperor. According to Andreas Favyn, the kings of France of the first dynasty wore beards entwined with gold threads. Duke Renatus, of Lorraine, was the last, and it is related that he wore at the funeral of Charles of Burgundy, who died at Nancy, in 1477, a beard of gold thread hanging down to his girdle.

Home.

After all, when one comes to think of it, there are not many homes. There are, of course innumerable places which go by the name of homes, called so for a want of better designation, or because everybody calls the place where he eats and sleeps home; but when you come down to real sober fact, homes are comparatively scarce.

A home is the refuge place from the storm, the fret and worry of life. It is a place where the husband comes home to a sanctuary, where smiles and loving words answer his smiles and greeting. It is a place where the wife reigns in her benignity and grace; no, it may be, the grace of outward beauty, or cultivation, but of true womanhood, where she receives honor and love even as she gave them both. It is a place, it should be a place, where children are happier than anywhere else in the world, because there are the choicest words, the brightest looks and the kindest acts. Such are not the majority of homes as we find them.

How does it happen that when you see a real home, a light, pleasant spot where everyone seems to be happy, where if husband and wife have misunderstandings, no one seems to know it, where laughter and smiles are perpetual guests, why does it strike one as peculiar and noticeable? Simply because there are so few of them.

An Editor's Testimonial.

A. M. Vaughan, Editor of the "Greenwich Review," Greenwich, O., writes,—Last January I met with a very severe accident, caused by a runaway horse. I used almost every kind of salve to heal the wounds, which turned to running sores, but found nothing to do me any good till I was recommended Henry's Carbolic Salve. I bought a box and it helped me at once, and at the end of two months I was completely well. It is the best salve in the market, and I never fail of telling my friends about it, and urge them to use it whenever they need a salve.

Medical Skill Baffled.

T. C. Coyle, of Clarksburg, W. Va., writes: I am quite familiar with Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup, having used it for the past fifteen years as an alterative medicine, and can safely say that it is superior to any with which I am acquainted now in the market for the cure and control of those diseases of the blood that have baffled the skill of the masters of the medical profession.

In winter there is a novel method of capturing herring. Like mackerel, they go in schools, and for some reason they will always follow a light. Two or three fishermen provide themselves with torches made of birch bark or cotton batting, saturated with kerosene oil, and on dark nights row along the shores with a torch in the bow of the boat. The boat is rowed as swiftly as possible, and when a "school" is struck the chase begins. The herring dart after the boat, coming close up to it in swarms, and while one of the men rows the other dips up the herring with a dip net.

A PAPER FOR THE TIMES.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS is the pioneer of cheap journalism in the West. It was founded Dec. 20, 1875, as an evening paper with editions at noon, 3 and 5 o'clock. A complete newspaper,—complete in the one essential feature of American journalism, i. e., presenting all the news,—sold on the street at any price less than the conventional nickel, was an innovation in western journalism, and, like all new enterprises, the "cheap paper" had to contend with long established custom and even prejudice before securing the recognition it sought and deserved. At the end of the first year, 1876, it had achieved a daily sale ranging from 8,000 to 10,000 copies. From this time forward its progress was beyond all precedent in American journalism. In 1877 its average daily circulation was 22,037 copies; in 1878, 38,314 copies; in 1879, 45,194 copies; in 1880, 54,807 copies. On the morning of March 21, 1881, the CHICAGO MORNING NEWS made its first appearance. In September following, the sixth month of its publication, its circulation amounted to 490,910 copies, or a daily average of 13,846 copies,—a circulation never before attained by any daily paper in the United States, within a corresponding time.

The CHICAGO DAILY NEWS, therefore, as now published, consists of MORNING, NOON, and EVENING ISSUES, known respectively as the MORNING NEWS, NOON NEWS, and EVENING NEWS. The average combined circulation of the three issues of the DAILY NEWS now exceeds 90,000 copies each day. To approximate more nearly the truth would be to state that it is over three times the circulation of any other daily paper in Chicago or the West, while its circulation in the city of Chicago is GREATER than ALL other Chicago daily papers COMBINED. Being an independent paper, the organ of no party, sect, or class, it is the one universally read Chicago paper. The subscription price of the DAILY NEWS, either MORNING or EVENING issue, is $6.00 per year, or $2.00 for four months, postage included.

On July 2, 1878, the DAILY NEWS purchased the CHICAGO EVENING POST, consolidated its daily issue with the DAILY NEWS, and continued its weekly issue under the name of the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS. The WEEKLY NEWS under its present name and management is therefore less than five years old, though as a consecutive weekly publication it is now in its twentieth year. The CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS takes a corresponding field among weekly newspapers to that occupied by the DAILY NEWS among dailies. It gives the news of the world in condensed yet complete form. Its Chicago market quotations are especially complete and trustworthy. That the CHICAGO WEEKLY NEWS has been correct in its judgment of the requirements of a large class of readers of the weekly press is best evidenced by the extent of its circulation, which aggregated in the month immediately preceding the date of this writing, 202,053 copies, or a weekly average of 50,513 copies. The subscription price of the WEEKLY NEWS is but SEVENTY-FIVE CENTS per year, postage included.

The phenomenal success of the CHICAGO NEWS in both its DAILY and WEEKLY ISSUES has been achieved by observing that fundamental principle of offering the best article of its kind in the market at the lowest cost to the purchaser. The CHICAGO NEWS is cheap only in price. The character of its news service is unsurpassed. It is a member of the Western Associated Press, and in addition to the unrivalled news service furnished by this Association, it enjoys the exceptional advantage of its own special telegraphic wire from Chicago to Washington and New York on the East, and to Milwaukee and St. Paul on the Nort. Giving all the news through reportorial and telegraphic failities unsurpassed by those of any other Chicago paper, it commends itself to all classes in the community, to rich and poor alike, in that it offers an absolutely complete record of the news of the day in concise form, without the needless verbiage and amplification which render so many metropolitan journals "a weariness to the flesh," while its price brings it within the reach of all classes. It is a paper for the times.

Rheumatic
SYRUP.

The Greatest Blood Purifier Known!

Mr. Philip Moore, of West Webster, Monroe Co., N. Y., says: "My daughter, now eighteen years old, has for the past eighteen months been afflicted with Rheumatism in a very severe form. One year ago it settled in the knee, since which time she has been unable to touch her foot to the floor or move her limb without suffering the most excruciating pain. Her limb was fast growing out of shape, although we were doing for her all we could, having used all the remedies we could here of and that were recommended for rheumatism, none of which benefited her in the least. Her case was pronounced incurable by the physician and our neighbors, and all believed that she would be a cripple all her days, and that her limb would never be restored to its original shape. But I am happy to say that to-day my daughter is entirely free from all Rheumatic pains and that she can walk with perfect ease, having thrown aside her crutches, and her limb seems as strong and perfect as ever; all from the use of your wonderful medicine, "Rheumatic Syrup" which we consider one of the best medicines ever introduced for purifying the blood, and I only regret that all others who are afflicted with rheumatism cannot know of its superior merits. You are at liberty to use my name if it will do you any good, and I shall be only too glad to tell any and every one what it has done for my daughter. I am gratefully yours.

HOW TO CAMP OUT

So many of our people have fallen into the habit of camping out during the summer season that we give place to the following suggestions from the American Agriculturist. Provide an abundance of bedding—buffalo robes and comforters, and plenty of blankets, are usually sufficient, though some may need ticks filled with straw. In starting out for camp do not take too many things. One of the results of camp life is to show how little one can get along with. The most important part of the outfit is an abundant supply of good humor, a disposition to make the best of everything, to overcome difficulties, and always be cheerful. A grumbler is an unpleasant companion anywhere, but in camp he is a nuisance. In warm weather the camp-fire should be at a good distance from the sleeping tents, and precautions taken that the spreading of the fire can occur. It is best to leave all the crockery at home, and provide a supply of tin plates, tin cups and cheap knives and forks. Prepare in advance sufficient food to serve for the first two or three days, and then be governed by circumstances. If the locality furnishes fish or game, the procuring of these will afford sport for the men and boys, but it is not safe to depend upon these and there should be in reserve, a ham, a supply of the standard camp food, salt pork, which, with an abundance of potatoes, hard-tack, dried apples and coffee will keep the table well furnished. Have meals at stated hours, let each one in his or her way, help in preparing them, and—what is more important—help in clearing away and washing dishes. Keep the surroundings of the camp as good as you can. Have a pot in a convenient place for rags and slops, and provide other conveniences in a sheltered place at a proper distance. If girls are taken into camp, let it be the business of some one to provide a place for them beyond the reach of children and where no accident can occur. See that the greater part of the day may be spent in real—in leisure—in the best meaning of the term. Be sure you provide an abundance of reading matter. Any hard worked family will return from a fortnight's vacation, or a longer one of this kind better fitted to take up the home routine, and perhaps more appreciative of home comforts.

A BUSINESS MOVE.

During the past week Messrs. Savage & Farnum, general newspaper advertising agents, formerly located at No. 120 Griswold street, have taken full possession of their handsome offices in the new Campau building, and they now lay claim to one of the most elegantly appointed and most conveniently arranged offices of the kind in the country. The rapid increase of their business during the past year or two has necessitated quite an addition to their working force, and the employment of every known device for the systematization and perfect control of the work they have in hand. Their recent move, while being an evidence of prosperity, and liable to result most advantageously, was, in view of the overcrowded state of things, a matter of necessity. They have wisely, however, taken advantage of the opportunity afforded to prepare for future extension of their operations, and so arranged the new quarters that one acquainted with the details of the business cannot but acknowledge them to be very near perfection. A space of 105 feet by thirty feet is occupied altogether, which is precisely one-half the size of the building less hallways. The rooms face on Griswold street and extend the whole length of the Larned street side. Elegantly furnished private offices for the members of the firm come first in order in the arrangement, next the desks of book-keepers and other assistants, then follow the files, which, by the way, are something new in newspaper filing. 11,000 different newspapers being neatly cared for.—Free Press, July 15.

The "Treasury of Song" for the home circle, vocal and instrumental, contains the richest gems, sacred and secular, carefully selected from the best works of the various authors. It embraces the grandest harmonies of the best composers, comprising their favorite songs, hymns, glees, ballads, anthems, chants, and selections from opera and oratorio in delightful variety, chosen especially for their eminent fitness to promote the happiness of every home. I shall be most happy to introduce this beautiful book to the lovers of music in Tecumseh.

THE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The Lenawee county teachers' institute is now in session. These institutes have grown to be quite an institution. The primary object of teachers' institutes is to institute teachers. The secondary object is to enable the school ma'ams to congregate together, ask questions, fish for husbands, admire each other's new bonnets, trade pen knives and take notes for the benefit of the rising generation. Over one hundred school ma'ams are taking in the institute this week, to say nothing of the pedagogues of the male persuasion. These number about one in ten of the total enrollment, and if these young men fail to institute a matrimonial problem in addition to their regular institute work the fault will be theirs alone, and the institute will be a failure.

The exercises consist of lectures, normal classes and a question box. This box is open for the reception of questions at all hours of the day and night, and is relieved of its contents twice each week. Our citizens are expected to aid the institute in all possible ways. As we have no time to lecture, as we are not sufficiently numerous for a normal class, as we have no inclination to spark the school ma'ams, we have decided to cast our mite, where the bogus pennies go on Sunday, into the query or contribution box. These questions have cost us considerable mental anxiety and physical anguish, but if they shed a halo of light upon the proceedings of the institute we shall feel that the query box was not instituted in vain.

NOTES FROM KANSAS.

BULLS CITY, KAN., Aug. 2, '84.

EDITOR HERALD:

You may entitle this "special or regular correspondence" or what you will, but it really is but a letter which I have had in mind for some time to write you from Kansas, giving you some idea of the impressions which I have received of this "cradle of liberty" during a 5 months ramble through the state by rail and stage, from the Missouri nearly to Colorado. I left Michigan in March, and after a 36 hours ride over the Rock Island reached Atchison where I remained about six weeks. The city is really a great big village, and now has a population of about 15,000 though there are none of the features except street railways and gas which would mark it as a city. It does quite a wholesale trade and is good grain center, but there is hardly a manufactory in the place. Like myself, it was first settled in 1853, and at one time promised great things when it was the government supply depot for the west, but the outbreak of the war caused a stoppage of nearly all immigration, and its growth has been slow. When the census was taken in '80 the enumerators found that they lacked some 1,200 of having the 15,000 required for a city of the first class, but with blanks and a vivid imagination the hiatus was filled and they reported 15,105. This is an actual fact.

From Atchison I went to Leavenworth, where I remained about two months.—This is the wealthiest city in the state, though the honor of being the largest is disputed by Topeka, but it is without doubt the most enterprising go-ahead city, and now has a population of about 23,000 and rapidly growing. The abundance of coal, fine water works and plenty of capital, has filled the city full of manufactories of all kinds, wagons, carriages, stoves, flour mill machinery, iron bridges, flour, etc., and it would be a good location for a wrapping paper mill or farm implement factory. The city is located on a high plateau, completely encircled by wooded hills on the west bank of the "Big Muddy"; that is it was when I left, but the peculiarity of the Missouri is that when she takes a notion to go meandering off somewhere else and cut a new channel for herself no one tries to interfere, and this spring she was at work cutting a channel which would leave Leavenworth about three miles inland and steal just as much land from Missouri and present it to Kansas. As she has been a "star route" I presume she learned her tricks from the others, only we never heard of them giving any of their plunder to any one unless it was to Bob Ingersoll. Fort Leavenworth, under command of Major Gen. John Pope, which adjoins the the north city limits, however is the principal attraction and is the handsomest military post in the west. The broad, macadamized driveways, shaded dwellings and quarters, and smooth-shaven lawns, all conspire to make as beautiful a picture as Uncle Sam's money, and the free labor of the inmates of the guard house could make. The average force of troops there is 600.

Now, after a two months trip thro' central and northern Kansas and a careful consideration of all the points in her favor and against her, I am prepared to say that Kansas is the the state af the grandest possibilities of any in the Union, for two pursuits—agriculture and stock raising. If you could have been with me as I rode over thousands of acres of beautiful, rich, rolling prairie land, lying there only waiting for the tickling of the plow to yield up the golden grain, and have seen the farms whose fields of green corn and yellow wheat marked the earth like the squares of a chequer board you would not say I had over-estimated the future of the state. The price of land decreases as you go west from the river, and in this county, Osborne, improved farms can be bought from $8 to $25 per acre, and unimproved from $5 to $10. The majority of the farms are homesteads and tree claims, and around nearly every farm house can be seen the cluster of trees planted under that law and called "wind breaks" (don't confound them with "air breaks" which serve the double purpose of securing the patent and protecting them from the force of the "Kansas zephyrs" which occasionally blow.—Yes, they do occasionally blow, and though no patriotic Kansan will acknowledge that they are at all to be feared, yet the majority of them have what they call "cyclone cellars" in their back yards, and they get into them like prairie dogs when the sky gets too threatening.

The pleasantest feature of my whole trip, however, I experienced when I jumped down from the stage at Gayford, a pleasant and prosperous village in Smith Co., on the Central Branch of the Mo. Pacific, 227 miles from Atchison, and literally ran into the arms of our old friend Geo. T. Ketcham, now the popular landlord of the Gilman House, which bears the reputation of being one of the best hotels in western Kansas. George and Mrs. K gave me a right royal welcome, and introduced me to their little Mina, and I spent a day and two nights with them, which were filled with reminiscences of Tecumseh.

I know the interest which Michigan must take in Kansas as a prohibition state, and you may like to know how the law operates. Well, it works just in this way: where the majority of the sentiment of a place is not in favor of it, and officials are elected in accordance with that sentiment liquor is sold as openly as in Michigan, and where the sentiment is in its favor it is only sold from the back doors of drug stores and on the sly. I call'd at a few places, where it did also nicely; prohibit and even there it would n't pay to have too much of a droop in your left eye when you asked for soda water. But I consider the law is gaining ground, and the convictions in Topeka have done much to strengthen it. The greatest blow it has received was the election of [illegible] the extensive plan of remitting the fines of the liquor dealers as fast as convicted. In cities where it is sold openly the city authorities have two ways of deriving a revenue from it. In Atchison they pay a "fine" of $25 a month; in Leavenworth they receive license to sell "lemonade." But I only intended to write a couple of pages and behold!

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle. He will tell you that "It's the best dollar I ever invested."

LEBANON, N. H., Feb. 19, 1879.
Messrs. C. I. HOOD & Co.: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Sarsaparilla, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

We "went through" John Hick's new house the other day. We do not mean to say that we burglarized it, for he has not moved in yet and it wouldn't pay. But it is in good condition to be interviewed. The house is located on the west side of Union street, beyond Mr. Hardenburgs, is a large square two story residence with wing in the rear. Mrs. Hicks was the architect, having planned the entire arrangement of the rooms herself, and Mr. Hicks, like a dutiful husband, has followed out her wishes in constructing the house. It contains two large rooms each side of the main hall, dining room and kitchen and bath room on the lower floor, and corresponding chambers above. The basement or cellars is well lighted and is divided into a wash room, vegetable cellar and furnace room. There are two open cisterns in this apartment. A good wood house with a second story attachment completes the rooms. It will be elegantly finished both inside and outside, and when completed will be one of the finest residences on Union St., which is rapidly becoming the Fifth Avenue of Tecumseh.

A DAY AMONG THE FARMERS.

Last Saturday was a beautiful day, and we improved the weather to take a circuit among the farmers. Starting out on the Clinton road, the first halt was made at D. H. Silvers, who is now running the old Silvers' homestead. He seems to enjoy farming as well as he formerly did selling clothing, and makes a business of it just the same. He had secured a large crop of wheat and was drawing in the last of his hay on Saturday. Stopped at Wm. Silvers but found him over on the old Newberg farm, and therefore drove on without seeing him. Next halt was made at Thos. Service's. Mr. Service has 110 acres of land under a good state of cultivation. He has 18 acres of wheat this year and other crops in proportion, and is evidently doing well. We dropped in on David O'Reiley just about high noon and halted for refreshments. Mr. O'Reiley is running a farm on rather an extensive scale. He has 180 acres of land and cut 42 acres of wheat this year.—He is well provided with team, tools, etc., to work his acres to advantage, and has a good start in life for a young man. His wife knows how to get up a good dinner too. After dinner we proceeded to Pennington's corners and circulated around the village for an hour or two. Found Spencer Morgan and W. P. Cotton both at home and both seemed satisfied with their summer's trade. Tried to find "Uncle George" Burdette, but could not. Had a little visit with John Frost, who is still nailing on horse shoes at the old corner shop, and he boasts as good an eye and as steady a hand as he did twenty years ago.—We then turned westward and halted at J. R. Liddle's, whom we found topping out the last stack of 30 acres of wheat. He has 100 acres of land, a fine house, good buildings and is "well fixed" to enjoy a farmer's life, which he evidently does. Stopped at Jesse Aten's but found he had "gone to town," and then facing homeward we "came to town" also.

Misses Josie and Nora Colyin, daughters of James B. Colyin, of Raisin, had a narrow escape from a serious injury last Friday. They were returning from Adrian with a horse and buggy, and when near Walter Jones' met a man going the other way. He failed to turn out sufficiently and thus ran their buggy into the ditch and upset it. The horse struggled and cleared himself from the buggy, and dragged Josie out of the buggy, and several feet on the ground, while Nora sprang to the horse's head, and thus got control of him. The buggy was somewhat dilapidated, and the young ladies were "shaken-up" some but not seriously injured. The man whom they met drove right along and never stopped or offered to assist them at all. He ought to be prosecuted. They borrowed a harness of Mr. Jones and got safely home.

Yesterday the Park Hotel changed hands as intimated in the Democrat last week, Mr. Passmore becoming proprietor of Sink's hotel, Tecumseh, while W. H. Sink assumed charge of the Park. Mr. Passmore leaves many friends in Monroe and his record as a business man is first-class. We can cheerfully recommend him to the people of Tecumseh as a gentleman of the strictest honor and integrity who will prove himself a valuable acquisition to their business circle. Traveling men give Mr. Sink the reputation of being one of the best hotel men in Michigan, which seems assurance that the Park will not suffer under his management.—Monroe Democrat.

We clip the above, and in addition will say that we have met Mr. Passmore and he seems to be all the above notice states. Many improvements will be made in the hotel and we wish the gentleman all success. We understand that among other improvements a new cornice will be put on Merchants' block.

BASE BALL.

Two Games, both Good Ones—Quincy vs. Tecumseh last Friday—Bay City vs. Tecumseh Yesterday Afternoon.

The game between Quincy and Tecumseh last Friday was a very good one and the most interesting game to witness we have had this season. Our boys played pretty fair, scoring 12 runs, and making 7 one base hits with only 5 errors and 4 passed balls. The Quincy boys made 8 runs, 5 one base hits, 1 two base hit, with 11 errors and 4 passed balls. Tray, Tecumseh's regular pitcher, was not on hand for the game. Mr. Frazer umpired the game. The Quincy boys all seem to be good fellows and expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment here.

The game yesterday between Bay City and our boys was looked forward to with much interest and a good crowd was present at 2:30 when the game was called. Our team did not do as good field work as on Friday, but still held the Bay City team down fairly, the score standing 6 to 3 at the wind up. The following is the score by innings.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	R.	I.B.	T.B.	E.
Bay City	0	4	0	0	0	0	1	1	0	6	5	6	4
Tecumseh	0	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	1	3	8	9	10

The errors on our side were many, but not many of them did much harm. The B. B. Association deserve credit for the manner in which the games have been conducted here this year, and Bay City unite with the rest in saying that Tecumseh is not a bad place to come to play ball.

The Clinton and Raisin clubs will play a game on our grounds Saturday P. M. next at 2 o'clock. Let all turn out and see them.

A spiritual liberal camp meeting will be held at Flint, commencing Aug. 17 and lasting ten days.

Rev. J. B. Little, of Adrian, will supply the pulpit of the Presbyterian church in this village next Sunday morning.

Tecumseh rusticators are numerous at Sand Lake these days. An old maid party—excuse us, a young lady party—of twenty have chartered a cottage there this week and are missing all the big base ball games at home.

E. S. Palmiter, of the firm of Walbridge & Palmiter, publishers of the Michigan School Moderator, is attending the institute, and favored us with a friendly visit this morning. The Moderator is the best teacher's paper in Michigan and deserves a liberal patronage.

The crossing of the M. & O. and Lake Shore roads which was put in place last Sunday, cost about $700.—This includes the rails, timbers and all extras. The foreman of the construction gang on the M. & O. and trackmaster Corbus of the Lake Shore superintended the work.

Last Saturday morning fire was discovered in the roof of Griffith's blacksmith shop, on Pearl street, but it was extinguished at once by Ed. Chiveral and Friend McNeil, and the steamer was not called out. Had a fire obtained headway in that frame row it would have made bad work.

Manager Croswell will sell tickets for Frederick Warde, who appears at Adrian in "Virginius" on the 25th inst., at Hudson and Tecumseh. On Thursday the 23d he will be at the Comstock house at Hudson, with about 50 choice seats, and on Friday, the 24th, the day before the entertainment, he will be at the HERALD office with an equally choice lot.

Frank W. Smith, of Toledo, an ex-prisoner at Andersonville, will take to Andersonville 14,000 national flags, and decorate the graves in the national cemetery near the old stockade. He will be assisted by several ex-confederates and by Atlanta ladies. The New Orleans guards, who recently paid a visit to the north, sent Mr. Smith a contribution toward purchasing the flags.

ELECTING A SCHOOL EXAMINER.

The chairman of the township boards of school inspectors met at Adrian last Tuesday to choose an examiner in place of D. A. Hammond, whose term of office expires. C. B. Stowell, of Hudson, was elected chairman and the meeting adjourned until afternoon.

At the opening of the afternoon session, the roll call showed the following chairman as present:

Adrian—Edgar Montgomery.
Blissfield—W. W. Goff.
Cambridge—Edward C. Kuny.
Deerfield—Robt. E. Burnett.

Riga—Wm. H. Wise.
Rollin—Vincent Wood.
Rome—John H. Combs.
Seneca—Benjamin C. Franklin.
Tecumseh—Henry Wilson.
Woodstock—C. B. Heath.

The first and only business, of course, was the election of the county examiner, and, after some amending and more discussion, a resolution was finally passed making a majority of the votes cast necessary for an election. The resolution also specified that the election should be by ballot.

The president appointed J. G. Patson, of Fairfield, and J. H. Combs, of Rome, as tellers, after which a ballot was taken. It resulted as follows:

Whole number of votes cast.....20
Henry C. Wilson.....13
D. A. Hammond.....3
E. A. Condit.....2
Cyrus Crandall.....1
C. D. West.....1

On motion of J. E. Jacklin, of Palmyra, Mr. Wilson was declared unanimously elected.

Mr. Wilson being called upon, gracefully thanked the gentlemen present for the honor conferred upon him, and promised that he would do all in his power to enhance the educational interests of Lenawee county during the next three years.

STATE TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

A Very Successful Opening of a Two Week's Session—The Program of the First Four Days.

The regular teachers' institutes held under state auspices comprise fifty-two this season, of which forty are holden in August, five in September and seven in October. The usual time devoted to each institute is one week, but an experiment has been made this year at Cassopolis and Tecumseh by extending the session to a fortnight at these places. Supt. Gass is expected to be present in person here at Tecumseh this week or next to view the results of his experiment.

The regular sessions are held in the Central school building. The daily routine consists of a lecture each forenoon and afternoon upon some topic and normal class drill. The lecture is given to the entire membership, separate sections at the same time.—By this method much more work is accomplished and all the instructors are kept busy. Two evening lectures are given each week at the Opera House which are free to all. The exercises are conducted by Prof. I. N. Demmon, of Ann Arbor, assisted by Profs. Curtis, of Adrian, and Hammond, of Tecumseh. The first session opened Monday forenoon with an attendance of over seventy, and the enrollment had increased to 130 yesterday afternoon. The success of the two week's experiment is already a foregone conclusion.

A correspondent of the Adrian Times, who is blessed with a gift of prophecy, informed the readers of that paper last week that the institute would result in a failure. That correspondent should be here now and witness the evidence of his remarkable foresight. Whether we look at the number enrolled, the character and enthusiasm of the members, the efficiency of the instructors, or the program of exercises presented, the institute is a decided and gratifying success, and all those in attendance will support the statement.

As we are compelled to economize space we present an outline of each day's program, which will show the nature of the work done.

On Tuesday evening Prof. Demmon delivered a lecture at the Opera House on "The Public School and the Public Library." The professor is a pleasing speaker and his theme was ably treated. We present the following

ABSTRACT OF THE LECTURE:

The speaker traced the rise and rapid growth of the public library in the United States during the past thirty years, and called attention to the efforts making in many places, especially in the east, to wed the public school and the public library in the great work of popular education. It was urged that a large majority of the children in our country get only a common school education, and that the aim of the schools should be to prepare the pupils for self-education after leaving school. In order to effect this the school must teach how to choose and to use books, must inspire in the pupils the love of reading good books. The teacher's duty to his pupils in this regard was pointed out, and some directions were given for overcoming the obstacles in the way.

The first requisite is that the teacher must himself be an intelligent and enthusiastic reader, must have a love for good books. Supposing the teacher to have this qualification, the first great obstacle in the way is the multiplicity and variety of books constantly issuing from the press. The difficulty of choosing wisely becomes very great, and much care is necessary in order to avoid mistakes. The help of specialists in particular lines of study should be sought.

The second difficulty that the teacher encounters is in the fact that the love for good reading does not come by nature. Here as elsewhere the best influences come from without and above. Care must be taken not to attempt too much at first. Few children can read and enjoy the great master-pieces of literature. Stories are useful in cultivating a taste for reading, but the stories should be select. History, biography, travels, and some of the poets, such as Longfellow and Scott, will interest boys and girls, and lead them to lay aside the vicious story paper. The reading of fiction, except in a few standard authors, should be discouraged. Teachers should resist the fashion of the hour in literature. Life is too short to keep up with it. The newspaper and magazine, while serving a most useful purpose where rightly used, should not be allowed to absorb all our leisure for reading as they sometimes do.—Pupils should be cautioned on this point.

Teachers should put themselves in close relations with the public library. Should keep up with the recent purchases, and should to some extent try to direct purchases for the use of their pupils. Books should be drawn for the use of pupils, and the pupil's reading be done under the supervision of the teacher. The teacher in this, as in other matters, should seek to become a guide and friend to the pupil.

It gives us pleasure to call the attention of our readers to the series of advertisements of the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases now appearing in our columns. This watch case has been on the market for nearly thirty years and has attained a reputation which is second to none, it now being universally conceded to be the standard. The James Boss' Gold Watch Cases are made of two plates of solid fourteen karat gold, soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal. These plates of gold are thick enough to admit of engraving, chasing, etc., and supply all the gold needed for practical use, while the composition plate furnishes the strength and solidity needed in every watch case, and yet lacking in those made of solid gold. Although these cases are as good, and in some points better than a solid case, the cost is only about one-half as much. Many of the James Boss' Gold Cases have been in constant use for twenty-five years without wearing through the gold. The manufacturers furnish a guarantee with each case warranting it to wear twenty years, and this guarantee means just what it says, for unlike other guarantees furnished so often with watch cases, this is signed by the manufacturers of the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases. Purchasers should avoid any watch case unless the guarantee is signed, as otherwise it is not only worthless but is intended so to be, and the absence of a reliable signature is fair indication that the manufacturer lacks faith in his claims or in his goods.

The Energetic Period.

The old suffer to-day. Not only is there in many communities a decline of respect for old age, a dislike of the slight self-sacrifice involved in patience with weakness and slowness, and deafness, and feebleness generally, but the old are placed at an unavoidable disadvantage. They lose more by abiding in the chimney corner, more enjoyment, more vigorous society, more of the excitement derivable from change. Time was when we all lived, so to speak, in the chimney corner, and now it is only the old. No one now abides within hearing shot of his birthplace. We all see the change more or less, and suffer, and if science does, as is alleged, give us a compensation in improved health and serenity, even if it be in part unconscious, science does work good. We fancy it does it in some degree—though science has accomplished so little either for the deaf or blear-eyed—yet it has done much for the rheumatic, much for the bodily invalids, and much, very much, for that tendency to a kind of ague, which half a century since was so nearly a universal misfortune among the old; but the facts are not fully clear. The exclusion of the old relieves us of the sum of human suffering, but for the benefit of the world at large it is, we suspect, in mature age that more health and longer time are required. There is plenty of youthful energy in the world. Men are dashing over earth as they never did before, and for every enterprise, whether of danger or profit, volunteers readily too many—as many almost as conceptions. It is wisdom, not energy, that the world lacks, and it is from the better heads of the experienced, which would imply energy longer continued into the time when experience ripens, that the world has most to hope. If the period of life between 45 and 60 could be stretched ten years the world would gain indefinitely, for its guides, the statesmen and the thinkers, would have time to utilize their knowledge in active effort. As it is, after 60 all but a select few die of despair or recede, and the helm passes away to new hands, controlled by minds which just as they become rich lose their energy or their hope, and the half of experience is wasted, while the remainder is applied under a feeling of all others most fatal to good work—that there is no time remaining. If science could but make 70 instead of 60 the end of the energetic period, it would accomplish far more for mankind than it ever will do by doubling their numbers, or increasing the rate of growth, as it would be increased, for example, if the mortality of children under 5 could be reduced one-half.

Hay Fever.

I have been afflicted for twenty years, during the months of August and September, with Hay Fever, and have tried various remedies, without relief. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm; have used it with favorable results, and can confidently recommend it to all similarly afflicted.

ROBERT W. TOWNLEY, ex-Mayor Elizabeth, N. J.

I have been a Hay Fever sufferer for three years; have often heard Ely's Cream Balm spoken of in the highest terms; did not take much stock in it because of the many quack nostrums. A friend persuaded me to try the Balm, and I find so well worth success. This recommendation you can use for the benefit of Hay Fever sufferers. E. S. GEER, Syracuse, N. Y. Price 50 cents.

At home! These very words have more music to my ears than all the sottest strains that ever syren sang. They bring us back to all we have loved, by ties that are never felt but through some simple associations. And in the earlier memories called up, our childish feelings come back once more to visit us, like better spirits, as we walk amid the dreary desolation that years of care and uneasiness have spread around us. Wretched must he be who ne'er has felt such bliss; and thrice happy he, who, feeling it, knows that still there lives for him that same early home with all its love inmates, its every dear and devoted object waiting his coming, and longing for his approach.—[Lever.

Humor in the Stomach,

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

Author of "Robinson Crusoe."

Daniel De Foe wrote his famous "Crusoe" in 1719, by far the most popular of all his works. Its success was immediate, and the publisher who had accepted it after all the others had refused is said to have cleared £1,000 by its publication, a sum that was considerable in those days. De Foe was born at London in 1661, the son of a butcher, named James Foe, and our author did not add the prefix "De" to the family name until he reached manhood. At the age of 21, he began his career as author by writing a pamphlet which contained strictures on the clergy of that day; followed in a year by another pamphlet, and in 1685 he took part in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth, but escaped punishment, and later he engaged in trade, but misfortune moved him to abandon it. His satirical poem, "The True-born Englishman," written in vindication of King William, and in reply to a poem in which he had been attacked, had a wonderful sale, 80,000 printed copies being sold on the streets of London. He was prosecuted for a publication, and found guilty, pilloried, fined, and imprisoned. He published various works, and led quite a peculiar life for some time, until "Robinson Crusoe" appeared. De Foe's fictitious narratives are characterized by an unparalleled appearance of truth. Alexander Selkirk lived in solitude on the Island Juan Fernandez for four years, from 1704 to 1708, and it was his story which suggested to De Foe his "Crusoe."

See to it that each hour's feelings and thoughts and actions are pure and true, then will your life be such. The mightiest maze of magnificent harmony that ever a Beethoven gave to the world was but single notes, and all its complicated, and interlacing strains are resolvable into individualities.

Ladies' Ayer's Hair Vigor is a superior and economical dressing. It has become an indispensable article for the toilet.

Bad Grammar.

It is said that people living in the country universally use bad grammar. Now, we are not going to fly into a rage and contradict this statement, if we do belong to the country and take a big measure of pride in all that concerns her. We are not going to gnash our teeth and tear our hair and declare that we talk as well as anybody, and that whoever says we don't, the truth is not in him. Instead, when we remember how entangled we have often been among predicates and subjects, relative pronouns, participal and possessive adjectives, adverbial phrases, modifying adjuncts, co-ordinative conjunctions, and simple declarative and compound and complex sentences, we are ready to confess that it is all true—the half has not been told. Country people don't know how to talk, and what is more, don't want to know. But if we can be grammatical, may be it would be best to be as grammatical, as we can. There is no hope to reform the old sinners; we have walked in our ungrammatical ways till any departure therefrom would be like an expulsion from Paradise; but let the children be taught to talk. A former school teacher, now a mother, looks back and regrets that she did not teach the law of language more effectively. She acknowledges having taught the text-book with great faithfulness, for she loved the study, but she allowed the errors of her pupils to go uncorrected. She was afraid of wounding their feelings, and did not realize that to speak correctly is the most important end to be obtained in the study. Now that she is a mother, she would be glad for her children to have more thorough conversational drills at school than she herself enforced when in the capacity of a teacher. It is even thus, when it is too late, we see the error of our ways. If teachers could see the importance of enforcing the correct construction of sentences in youth, they could do much toward correcting the bad grammar of country children which they acquire from the rough-and-tumble language of home, and be potent agents in the purification of the spoken English language. If the study of grammar is irksome to them, and they cannot comprehend the rules and application as readily as a mature mind, they can be taught the practical part, and a more thorough understanding of the whys and wherefores will be unfolded to them in the ripening years to come.

Retrospection.

How happily for us is it ordained that, in the most stirring existences, there are every here and there little resting-spots of reflection, from which, as from some eminence, we look back upon the road we have been treading in life, and cast a wistful glance at the dark vista before us! When first we set out upon our worldly pilgrimage, these are, indeed, precious moments, when, with buoyant heart and spirit high, believing all things, trusting all things, our very youth comes back to us, reflected from every object we meet; and, like Narcissus, we are but worshiping our own image in the water. As we go on in life, the cares, the anxieties, and the business of the world, engross us more and more; and such moments become fewer and shorter. Many a bright dream has been dissolved, many a fairy vision replaced, by some dark reality; blighted hopes, false friendships, have gradually worn callous the heart once alive to every gentle feeling, and time begins to tell upon us; yet still, as the well-remembered melody to which we listened with delight in our infancy brings to our mature age a touch of early years, so will the association of these happy moments recur to us in our reverie, and make us, young again in thought. Then it is that, as we look back upon our worldly career we become convinced how truly is the child the father of the man, how frequently are the projects of our manhood the fruit of some boyish predilection; and that, in the emulative ardor that stirs the schoolboy's heart, we may read the prestige of that high daring that makes a hero of its possessor.

These moments, too, are scarcely more pleasurable than they are salutary to us. Disengaged, for the time, from every wordly anxiety, we pass in review before our own selves, and in the solitude of our own hearts are we judged. That still small voice of conscience, unheard and unlisted to amid the din and bustle of life, speaks audibly to us now; and, while chastened on one side by regrets, we are sustained on the other by some approving thought, and, with many a sorrow for the past, and many a promise for the future, we begin to feel "how good it is for us to be here."—[Charles Lever.

Stop Scowling.

Don't scowl; it spoils faces. Before you know it your forehead will resemble a small railroad map. There is a grand trunk line now from your cowlick to the edge of your nose, intersected by parallel lines running east and west, with curves arching your eyebrows; and on, how much older you look for it! Scowling is a habit that steals upon us unawares. We frown when the light is too strong, and when it is too weak. We tie our brows into a knot when we are thinking, and knit them more tightly when we cannot think. There is no denying that there are plenty of things to scowl about. The baby in the cradle frowns when something fails to suit. The little toddler who has sugar on his bread and butter tells his troubles in the same way when you leave off the sugar. "Cross," we say about the children, and "worried to death" about the old folks, and as for ourselves, we can't help it. But we must. Its reflex influence makes others unhappy; for face answereth unto face in life as well as in water. It belies our religion. We should possess our souls in such peace that it will reflect itself in placid countenances. If your forehead is rigid with wrinkles before forty, what will it be at seventy? There is one consoling thought about these marks of time and trouble—the death angel always erases them. Even the extremely aged in death often wear a smooth and peaceful brow, thus leaving our last memories of them calm and tranquil. But our business is with life. Scowling is a kind of silent scolding. For pity's sake let us take a sad iron or a glad iron, or some soothing tool of some sort, and straighten these creases out of our faces before they become indelibly engraven upon our visage.

Economy in Butcher's Bills.

The most profitable joint which can possibly be bought for the use of a household is the top side of the round of beef. It is not a cheap joint, but it can be used all through, and not a particle need be wasted. If the meat is of good quality, is carefully cooked and well basted, it is tender and juicy. If carelessly cooked, it will be dry and hard. Thick flank of beef and the leg of mutton piece of beef are also profitable. The thin end of the flank and the brisket and the pitch-bone of beef cost less per pound, but they are dear, because there is so much waste with them, especially for children, who will not eat fat and gristle. A sirloin of beef is an excellent joint, but it is generally rightly considered an expensive one. Yet it may be used so as to turn it to very good account. Unless there is a family weakness for fat, it should never be cooked with the flap on. Rather the flap should be cut straight off, then salted and boiled, pressed and glazed, when it is excellent. Or a little ox kidney and a few tinned oysters should be put with it, and it should be made into a pie, when it will be delicious. The housekeeper, when purchasing a sirloin of beef, will do well to think of this way of using the flap, and buy a joint weighing a pound or two more for the purpose of trying it. She may thus obtain a better cut, and will certainly reap an advantage. Sometimes the under cut of a sirloin is taken out and cooked separately, like rump steak. Cold roast sirloin is, however, so excellent that it is questionable whether the plan is a good one. When a sirloin of beef is no longer fit to be brought to the table, there is always a great deal of meat on it which can be used for rissoles, croquettes, sausage rolls, Cornish pasties, shepherd's pie, etc., and there is a fat which can be rendered down for dripping. Hard, sinewy parts of meat generally cost little, and are very good if stewed long and gently. Of this nature are the roll of the blade bone of beef, the muscle of the leg of beef, and the scrag end of a neck of mutton. Meat of this kind should be stewed gently for a long time—five or six hours. It will then be found excellent, and will supply cheap and good dinners at a trifling cost.

Rum and the Morgue.

By far the strongest temperance lecture of the season is the statement made by the keeper of the Morgue, that four fifths of the five thousand bodies that reach the dead-house every year are sent there by drunkenness. The jolly fellows who make fun of the anti-liquor agitation, as they stand at bars and drink good old whisky for, of course, no other kind is sold, know only the beginning of what may follow, but the rough, pine boxes, filled with what once was clear headed, bright eyed humanity, are just as directly the work of drink as bar rooms. There may be cities in the world where people can drink spirits without injury to soul and body, but New York is not one of them. In a city where every bed, even the millionaire's, is to the city laborer, as a rule, mainly impelled to doing more work than he can finish, whatever may be physical or mental excitement is a positive curse. The Morgue's occupants, too, all come from the lower classes, where if not rum, some of honorable stock have been found there too often, for alcohol is shameless a leveler as death itself.

Is Fun Better than Physic?

Fun is excellent; a hearty laugh is known the whole world over to be a health promoter; but fun does not fill the bill when a man needs physic, on the other hand people take too much physic. They would be more healthy, live longer and enjoy life thoroughly if they used Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which cures all blood troubles, indigestion, kidney and liver troubles, removes pimples, and is a perfect tonic. Can be taken by the most delicate. Only 50 cents a bottle. For sale by Baker & Hall.

Grave Robbers.

Of all classes of people the professional grave robbers are the most despised. He robs us of our dear friends for a few dollars. How different is the new grave robber, Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure, which robs the graves of thousands of consumptives. This unequalled remedy for coughs, colds and consumption, whooping cough, croup and all throat and lung diseases, subdues such dangerous diseases speedily, safely and thoroughly. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's.

That is the most perfect government in which an injury to one is the concern of all.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends, if but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Put a Brand on Him.

"Women are a necessary evil," he said, bringing down his fist hard on the counter to emphasize the heartless remark. It was in the village store at West Milton, Saratoga County, and the speaker was the central figure of a group of bucholic philosophers. He was homely, slovenly and sixty. "There's where I differ from you altogether," said Mr. George T. Graham, of the same place. "Women are mostly what men make 'em. When husbands are brutes, wives will fall in submission or make home hot for the men; and they're unnatural in either character. Love them, and especially be good to them when they're sick, and you'll have no trouble. There's my own wife, now. She's suffered a good deal with dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other ailments that took the bloom off her cheeks and the spring out of her steps. Well, she saw an advertisement of PARKER'S TONIC, and thought it would be just the thing for her case. Gentlemen, I sent five miles after a bottle. She took it. I sent again after more. So several times. Trouble? Why, if you could see how much good it has done her, you would say that women are the greatest of God's blessings and Parker's Tonic is the next."

This preparation which has been known as Parker's Ginger Tonic, will hereafter be called simply Parker's Tonic. This change has been rendered necessary by substitutes imposed upon their customers by unprincipled dealers under the name of ginger; and as ginger is really an unimportant flavoring ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change however in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of Parker's Ginger Tonic contain the genuine medicine if the fac simile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

THE CHILDREN.

"I'm tired of this ceaseless worry"—thus the weary mother said;
"I rise up betimes in the morning, and I'm always the last to bed;
Yet my labors are never ended, and the children's frolic and strife
Seem sometimes to drive me crazy, and I'm tired of this wretched life."

I grieved for the weary mother, for her face was worn and wan;
And a very little I'd seen for pleasure for many years gone;
But, when I looked at the children so happy, so healthful and gay—
I spoke not a word of pity, but turned with a sob away.

For I minded how once my dwelling, how orderly, still and neat,
Received not my children's voices, and the pattering of their feet,
As they scampered through hall and parlor, and up and out at the doors
While dollies disturbed my sofas, and picture-books strewed my floors.

And I minded the day they sickened, and their voices grew hush and weak, [illegible] and washed the burning cheek,
Till over the pale, pinched features, so changed from their winsome grace,
[illegible]

O God! thou dost all things wisely, and I question not thy decree
Perchance, I had else forgotten that my treasures were lent to me,
But, ah! the benumbing anguish to list for the falling breath,
As the dear form chills and stiffens in the cold cold clutch of death!

To-day, though my lonely dwelling, so quiet, precise and neat,
Where the echoes are sadly silent, I wander with restless feet;
I find not the old confusion which once did sorely annoy,
But I moan 'midst the drear precision for the sight of a broken toy!

Ah! vapid and vain your being should your little ones need no more!
My children are gone forever; but all that a mortal might strive
Were bliss—but bliss—could I clasp them safe, safe in my arms, alive! —M. E. Harmon.

The "Rahzer."

ITS BEAUTIES IN THE HANDS OF THE AMERICANIZED AFRICAN.

A brawny arm set off with a sledge-hammer fist is good enough weapon for a typical beef-eater of Britannia, a shillalah is the desideratum of a son of Erin, a poniard fits the belt of a swarthy Spaniard, the Italian is rarely found without his stiletto, the Turk without his cimeter, the American ruffian without a revolver, and the American Indian without his tomahawk, and the double-edged machette always swings in easy reach of the right hand of a greasy Mexican. Our kettle-colored race, the race most conspicuous in all southern and semi-southern climes, exhibit an originality, however, in the choice of a weapon. The negro chooses the razor, or, to borrow from his vernacular, the "rahzer." Because the farmer is handy with his scythe, we never heard of his turning the awkward instrument upon an antagonist, the carpenter does not arm himself for battle with a hand-saw, no more does the mason with his trowel. It would seem that their implements of industry could be converted into weapons of war with the same propriety that the indispensable of the tonsorial "profession" is converted. It is questionable, however, that an equal facility in wielding them could ever be acquired. The Americanized African takes up the "rahzer" as naturally and with the same ease as a baby takes in his primitive and foreordained rations. In the right hand of a negro the razor becomes one of the most formidable of weapons. He opens and swings the blade of the instrument until its back almost touches the back of the handle, clutches the handle near its junction with the blade with his index and middle fingers, then encircles with his other two fingers the handle and that part of the steel between the razor rivet and the keen edged blade, anchors his grasp with his thumb, and then with a chopping machine assails his enemy. At a single flourish a nose or an ear is secured, a ghastly seam is made in the face from the forehead to the chin, or by a dexterous twist a throat is chopped open from ear to ear. With his horrible weapon once adjusted, the wielder inspires terror, as do the bristling bayonets of a charging army, and with few exceptions the one who first adjusts may be said to "have the drop" on his foe. So general has become the use of the razor among the descendants of Ham that it is considered the weapon of the race. Its adoption obtains not only among the men, but among the colored women and children. "Close the doors of any of the churches in this city," said a prominent native of Cincinnati a few days since, a native who had investigated the subject, "close the doors and examine the pockets of every man, woman and child in the audience, and believe me, sir, on the person of seven out of every ten you examine you will find concealed a razor." The blood of any of them, if only tinged with the African, when once up, suggests this ill-shaped instrument. The black, the mulatto and the octoroon all have the same instinct. If worsted in a rough-and-tumble fight they are apt to be found feeling in their breast or hip pockets, and then woe to the too confident adversary! The wounds of the bullet and bowie are awful; the wounds of the "rahzer" are nasty, sickening to the surgeon, and equally fatal. Of all concealed weapons none deserve to be more severely tabooed than the "rahzer."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Polishing the Wrong End.

Many men daily polish their boots who never give a thought to the condition of their hair, except to harrow it casually with brush and comb or submit it to the paralozing attentions of the average barber. What happens? Why, this: From neglect, mental anxiety, or any of a score of causes the hair turns prematurely gray and begins to fall out. Paker's Hair Balsam will at once stop the latter process and restore the original color. An elegant dressing, free from grease.

Prof. W. Matthew Williams says: "I have taught many to swim, and my first lesson is on balancing the body. The easiest formula for attaining this power is to keep the hands down and look at the sky, while the chest is expanded as much as possible by throwing the shoulders well back, inmilitary attitude. Any man or woman of specific gravity who can do this can float and breathe, but to do it, simple as it is, requires practice or training—physical training of the muscles, and cerebral training in order to acquire that command of all the faculties without which there can be no treading of water or other device for keeping the mouth and nostrils in the air."

Diphtheria poisons the blood. Convalescent should take Hop Bitters which is a central tonic and eliminate the poison matter.

Host and Guest in England.

The universal deference paid to a man's right to himself in England makes social duties as well as social pleasures far less onerous than they are with us. In America the relation of host and guest is a double slavery. The host has the comfort and amusement of his guest so painfully at heart that he often becomes his officious slave for the time being, while the guest, unable to refuse his host's continual and pressing offers of indiscriminate kindness, becomes in turn the slave to his host's notions of amusement. He either has blindly to follow out his host's programme, or has to rack his own brain to furbish the latter with opportunities to show him attention. The typical American entertainer cannot leave his guest alone; with the very best and most friendly intentions in the world, he begins by imploring him to "make himself thoroughly at home," and immediately proceeds to make his house as little like home as fits within human power. "What would you like to do to-day?" or "Would not you like to, etc., etc." [illegible] questions.

In England hosts let their guests do just what they please. Go to spend a week at an Englishman's house and you may be sure that your host will not put himself out for you in the least, unless you expressly desire it. Everything in the house goes on as usual, just as if you were not there. But, per contra, the house and all that is in it are practically yours while you stay within its walls. Your host puts his servants, his wine-cellar, his larder, often his horses and his game preserves absolutely at your disposal. You are at liberty to act, and are expected to act, precisely as if you were in your own house. You can order a sandwich, a bowl of broth, a glass of wine or spirits whenever you please; you can announce your intention of going off shooting the very morning after your arrival, and guns and dogs are waiting for you. It is the commonest occurrence for men, arriving in the afternoon at a friend's house, to send their dress suits down to the laundress to be pressed just before dinner. In England guests are not only told to "make themselves at home," but are actually allowed to do so.

Saved by an Elephant.

An old "showman" tells the following exciting story of his experience when connected with a well-known menagerie during an engagement at Smithland Kentucky. "After the exhibition was over," he says, "I passed into the menagerie to talk to the watchman. From some cause he was absent from his post, and I walked across the amphitheater toward my old friend the elephant to give him an apple, for we were the best of friends. He was one of the largest elephants I ever saw, and was as good-natured as he was large.

I was about half across the ring when I heard a growl, and looking around, saw to my horror one of the lions out of his cage and approaching me in a crouching manner, ready for a spring.

I thought of a thousand things in a moment, and among them I must have regretted perpetrating so many old worn-out jokes at the performance that night. I had sufficient presence of mind to realize my dangerous situation and to know that it required the utmost caution to extricate myself from it.

One hasty motion on my part and I could be in the jaws of the monster. I felt that my only hope was the elephant if I could reach him, but he was chained by the foot and could not reach me.

Nearer and nearer came the lion, waving his tail in a manner that meant business. If I turned my back, he would spring; if I took my eyes from him, I was lost.

It was a terrible moment. I glided backwards swiftly as I dared. I had another fear. I feared stumbling backwards, and knew if I did fall, I would never rise, but that where I fell I would make a meal for that lion.

As I neared the elephant I saw that the lion understood my movements and fearing he would be balked of his prey, he prepared to bring the matter to a crisis. I then saw that I had but one hope, to rush with all my speed to the elephant.

I think I must have jumped twenty feet when I turned, and I know the lion jumped thirty, but he just missed me.

How I completed the race I do not know I only knew that the elephant's trunk was around my waist and he was lifting me up on his head. I only knew I was saved

How Authors Write.

The Detroit Free Press gives an account of "how authors write," from which the following extracts are made:

Some authors have been martyrs and victims to political cruelty, as history assures us, and have yet nobly stood up for their principles and professions. A French writer wrote "In the Bastile;" John Saunders wrote Bound to the Wheel," and another modern author "Beneath the Wheels." Also, one wrote "Through Fire and Water," and two others "On the Rock," "Under Foot," and "Trodden Down."

As to the period since which authors have written, Sir Walter Scott, as is well known, wrote "Sixty Years Since," and G. P. R. James "Thirty Years Since." Meta Orrid wrote "A Long Time Ago." Katharine Macquoid evidently commenced her literary labors at an early age, as it is said she wrote "Too Soon," while another beginning late in life wrote "Too Late." F. W. Robinson wrote "As Long as She Lived," and Miss Braddon, having once commenced, persevered and wrote "To The Bitter End." She is more original than Miss Mulock, who, though a voluminous scribe, wrote "Nothing New." Mrs. Gaskill, after several attempts which were not successful, wrote "Right at Last."

One author tells us that he wrote "In My Study," another "In a Garden," a third "At My Window," while a fourth wrote "In an Old Attic." Black wrote "In Silk Attire"—an effeminate taste in a man. George Sala, who was of solitary habits, wrote "Quite Alone." Mariam Harland, also wrote "Alone."

Various motives have actuated authors in pursuits of their profession. Charles Gibbon wrote first "For Lack of Gold," afterward "For the King." F. W. Robison, in love probably with some young lady, wrote "For Her Sake," and Mrs. Oliphant "For Love and Life."

A Startling Discovery.
Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption and all throat and lung diseases is daily curing patients, that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery; resulting in hundreds of our best physicians using it to their practice. Gems of Thought.

Vice and wrong degrade us.
Wisdom and virtue ennoble us.
Overcome injuries by forgiveness.
The envious are always malicious.
No one can be happy without virtue.
Industry is the foundation of pleasure.
Sorrow is the noblest of all discipline.
The whole universe of nature is a library.

Where there is no conflict there is no conquest.

Adversity borrows its sharpest sting from our impatience.

Sincerity is to speak as we think and be what we seem to be.

A contented mind opens a clear sky and brightens every object around.

Truth, wherever found will draw forth incense from the pure heart.

It is one of the sweetest tests of friendship to tell a friend of his fault.

The man who commands himself is greater than he who commands the world.

Time does not end all at once. It is ending in part, every day and hour and moment.

In this world, full often, our joys are only the tender shadows which our sorrows cast.

God sends us ten thousand joys but we will not even stretch out our hand to grasp them.

Charity is not a meteor which occasionally glares, but a luminary that is forever shining.

One life: a little gleam of time between two eternities, no second chance to us forevermore.

As there is nothing in the world great but man, there is nothing truly great but character.

Love in marriage should be the accomplishment of a beautiful dream, and not, as it too often is, the end.

Great results cannot be achieved at once; and we must be satisfied to advance in life as we walk, step by step.

We are all building a soul-house for Eternity; yet with what different architecture and with what various care!

The works of vanity and ambition are demolished and destroyed by time, but wisdom is venerable to posterity.

Look not mournfully into the past; improve the present, and go forth to meet the shadowy future without a fear.

Sincerity is no sign of security. A stream is never so smooth, equable, as at the instant before it becomes a cataract.

A noble man compares and estimates himself by an idea that is higher than himself and a mean man by that which is lower.

Signification of Dreams.

Lively dreams are, in general, a sign of excitement of nervous action, says Dr. Hammond; soft dreams, a sign of slight irritation of the brain, often in nervous fevers, announcing the approach of a favorable crisis. Frightful dreams are a sign of determination of blood to the head. Dreams about fire are, in women, signs of impending hemhorrhage. Dreams about blood and red objects are signs of inflammatory conditions. Dreams about rains and water are often signs of diseased mucous membrane and dropsy. Dreams in which the patient sees any part of the body especially suffering, indicate disease in that part. Dreams about death often precede apoplexy, which is connected with determination of blood to the head. The nightmare (incubus ephiattes) with great sensitiveness, is a sign of determination of blood to the chest. "To these," says Baron Von Fechtersleben, "we may add that dreams of dogs, after the bite of a mad dog, often precede the appearance of hydrophobia, but may be only the consequences of an excited imagination." Dr. Forbes Winslow quotes several cases in which dreams are said to have been prognostic. Arnaud de Villeneuve dreamed one night that a black cat bit him on his arm. The next day an anthrax appeared on the part bitten. A patient of Galen's dreamed that one of his limbs was changed to stone. Some days after his leg was paralyzed. Hippocrates remarks that dreams in which one sees black spectres are bad omens.

There is hardly an adult person living but is sometimes troubled with kidney difficulty, which is the most prolific and dangerous cause of all disease. There is no sort of need to have any form of kidney or urinary trouble if Hop Bitters is taken occasionally.

TORNADOES.

Scientifically Accounted for, and Some Remote Causes that Produce Painful Results Explained.

The following synopsis of a lecture delivered by Dr Horace R. Hamilton before the [illegible] of science, contains so much that is timely and important that it may be read with both interest and profit.

[illegible] modern times that the dread and [illegible] origin of tornadoes. Science has studied it for the benefit of humanity, [illegible] investigated it for [illegible] their families. It has been [illegible] and through all this investigation [illegible] has kept across the land carrying destruction to [illegible] as well as to the innocent dwellers in its track.

[illegible] whirling body of wind [illegible] its results are powerful [illegible] also be powerful. Let us therefore consider a few facts. First [illegible] preparatory to a cyclone is invariably preceded by clear weather [illegible] the sun. These steps the heating [illegible] disturbed condition of the solar [illegible] necessarily affect the atmosphere of our earth. An unusual general [illegible] of heat in one part of the atmosphere is certain to cause a partial vacuum in another portion. A partial vacuum in to fill this vacuum [illegible] distributed across the [illegible] additional [illegible] during the day and not at night. [illegible] great [illegible] may be [illegible] to say that it is possible to control the kidneys and liver, to render their action wholly normal, and their effect upon the system that of purifiers, rather than poisoners. That this end has been accomplished largely by means of the remedy I have named I do not have a doubt, and I feel it my duty to make this open declaration for the enlightenment of the profession and for the benefit of suffering humanity in all parts of the world.

[illegible] cause [illegible] the whirling body of wind [illegible] its results are powerful [illegible] also be powerful. Let us therefore consider a few facts. First [illegible] preparatory to a cyclone is invariably preceded by clear weather [illegible] the sun. These steps the heating [illegible] disturbed condition of the solar [illegible] necessarily affect the atmosphere of our earth. An unusual general [illegible] of heat in one part of the atmosphere is certain to cause a partial vacuum in another portion. A partial vacuum in to fill this vacuum [illegible] distributed across the [illegible] additional [illegible] during the day and not at night. [illegible] great [illegible] may be [illegible]

[illegible] the atmosphere [illegible] through which its rays come. The [illegible] at the effect is here [illegible]

[illegible] every department of life. An operator in San Francisco [illegible] manipulated [illegible] in New York. The [illegible] at the White House, and the whole nation is aroused by [illegible] An uneasiness and disquiet [illegible] everything in life, could only be felt [illegible] sickness is felt by many people, and the cause is to be found in the distant home thousands of miles away. An uncertain pain may be felt in the head. It is repeated in other parts of the body. The appetite departs and all energy is gone. Is the cause necessarily to be found in the head? The next day the feeling increases. There are added symptoms. They continue and become more aggravated. The slight pains in the head increase to agonies. The nausea becomes chronic. The heart grows irregular and the breathing uncertain. As these defects have a definite cause, and, after years of deep experience upon this subject, I do not hesitate to say that the cause is to be found in some derangement of the kidneys or liver far away from that portion of the body in which these effects appear. But one may say, I have no pain whatever in my kidneys or liver. Very true. Neither have we any evidence that there is a tornado on the surface of the sun, but is none the less certain that the tornado is here, and it is none the less certain that these great organs of the body are the cause of the trouble although there may be no pain in their vicinity.

I know whereof I speak, for I have passed through this very experience myself. Nearly ten years ago I was the picture of health, weighing more than 200 pounds and as strong and healthy as any man I ever knew. When I felt the symptoms I have above described, they caused me annoyance, not only by reason of their aggravating nature, but because I had never felt any pain before. Other doctors told me I was troubled with malaria, and I treated myself accordingly. I did not believe, however, that malaria could show such aggravated symptoms. It never occured to me that analysis would help solve the trouble, as I did not presume my difficulty was located in that portion of the body. But I continued to grow worse. I had a faint sensation at the pit of my stomach nearly every day. I felt a great desire to eat, and yet I loathed food. I was constantly tired and still I could not sleep. My brain was unusual active but I could not think connectedly. My existence was a living misery. I continued in this condition for nearly a year, never free from pain, never for a moment happy. Such an existence is far worse than death, for which I confess I earnestly longed.

It was while suffering thus that a friend advised me to make a final attempt to recover my health. I sneered inwardly at his suggestion but I was too weak to make any resistance. He furnished me with a remedy, simple yet palatable and within two days I observed a slight change for the better. This awakened my courage. I felt that I would not die at that time. I continued the use of the remedy taking it in accordance with directions, until I became not only restored to my former health and strength but of greater vigor than I have before known. This condition has continued up to the present time and I believe I should have died as miserably as thousands of other men have died, and I are dying every day had it not been for the simple, yet wonderful power of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy I employed.

The lecturer then described his agonies of restoration more in detail and concluded as follows,

My complete recovery has caused me to investigate the subject more carefully, and I believe I have discovered the key to most ill health of our modern civilization. I am fully confident that four-fifths of the diseases which afflict humanity might be avoided were the kidneys and liver kept in perfect condition. Were it possible to control the action of the system, sickness could and will be averted. That, however, is one of the things that cannot be. But I rejoice to say that it is possible to control the kidneys and liver, to render their action wholly normal and their effect upon the system that of purifiers, rather than poisoners. That this end has been accomplished largely by means of the remedy I have named I do not have a doubt, and I feel it my duty to make this open declaration for the enlightenment of the profession and for the benefit of suffering humanity in all parts of the world.

TIRED ALL OVER.

What Rested and Refreshed a Weary Man in Memphis.

"My case never amounted to an acute pain, but amounted to be a dull weary ache in the small of my back," writes Mr. James Thomas, of No. 59, Madison St., Memphis, Tenn. "This was an old experience, and, like a dull, muscle. I was tired all over, with pain in the lower limbs, and a habit of lying awake of nights. Recently I tried one of Benson's Capsine Porous Plasters and was decidedly relieved within twenty-four hours. It may have been Providence that did the work, but I give the credit to Benson's porous plaster." Mr. Thomas' reverential idea does him credit, but Providence works by agents, and among them Benson's plaster ranks first as an external remedy. It acts quickly in relief and healing, and renders life better worth living. Price 25c. Look in the table of diseases for the word Capsine. Ask your physicians about it. 'Tis only a fact all people should know—
Everybody high, everybody low—
All who desiring their teeth to look white,

You'll prove by its use—try it at leisure.

CUT THIS OUT.

Frank P. Warner came into our store to purchase a sample bottle of Zopesa for a friend, and stated that he (Mr. Warner) was afflicted with Kidney and Liver trouble for five years, and had paid $200 or $300 doctor's bills, and has now been completely cured by the use of two large bottles and one sample bottle of Zopesa. He was so bad at one time that he lost 37 pounds of flesh, but after using Zopesa claims he is a sound man, and now weighs 145 pounds. He was loud in its praise, and readily consented to allow us to use his name for reference.

SHE WAS SCREAMING WITH PAIN.

Personally appeared before me, Mary Murray, who, being duly sworn, according to law, deposes and says: That she resides at the corner of Franklin and Water streets in said city. That she received relief within twenty minutes after taking the first dose of Wilson's Lightning Remedy for Rheumatism, and went to sleep. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUZZINGS.

A very pleasant occasion occured at the Christian church last Friday evening, at the silver wedding of Rev. R. F. Rapp and wife. A large number were present and enjoyed themselves exceedingly well. Rev. D. E. Millard, of Marshall, who regretted his inability to attend, sent a powerful poem, which was read by Mrs. G. D. Ellis, of Worthington, Ind., also two other poems which were very appropriate. The exercises were interspersed with singing by the choir, after which the Sabbath school and congregation presented them with $26 in silver. Quite a number of valuable presents were received from abroad. The company then adjourned to the basement of the church, where a splendid supper awaited them, with ice cream, etc., and judging from appearances the ladies of East Ridgeway have not forgotten their skill in preparing for the wants of the inner man, and all went away thinking they had spent a very pleasant evening.

On Sabbath morning Mrs. C. D. Ellis gave a lecture to the Sabbath school, and exhibited her charts, showing the effects of alcohol and tobacco on the human system, which were very interesting.

A young man, a laborer on the M. & O. road is very sick at John Rehiff's.

Laborers are engaged in cutting and clearing the timber from Mrs. Jackson's, A. Hanford's and G. Price's land. Grading has commenced again east of Britton.

Mrs. Geo. Burkert is teaching a fall term in Dist. No. 4, and Miss Ollie Oliver the fall term at Britton.

Mac Sleeper has built a new barn.

Geo. Hoxie has been quite ill, but is much improved.

Adrian Times: A couple of boys from the country became engaged in a fight in the alley back of the post-office yesterday afternoon. The father of one of them went into the alley to separate the combatants and became involved in the rumpus instead of acting as a peacemaker. He had just got nicely to fighting when his wife heard of the affray, and repairing to the scene of action cleaned out the whole party with an old cotton umbrella in just about a minute. As they scampered out of sight she remarked to a crowd which was admiring her pugilistic powers, "Just let 'em stand up to me two minutes, and I'll whip 'em out of their socks."

The "Treasury of Song" for the home circle, vocal and instrumental, contains the richest gems, sacred and secular, carefully selected from the best works of the various authors. It embraces the grandest harmonies of the best composers, comprising their favorite songs, hymns, glees, ballads, anthems, chants, and selections from opera and oratorio in delightful variety, chosen especially for their eminent fitness to promote the happiness of every home. I shall be most happy to introduce this beautiful book to the lovers of music in Tecumseh.

H. M. GAMON.

A cheap excursion to Detroit over the Ypsilanti branch of the Lake Shore via. Manchester will take place next Saturday, the 18th inst. This will be a fine chance for Tecumseh people to take a cheap trip to Detroit. Full particulars in another column.

The 5th annual reunion of ex-soldiers and sailors now living in Nebraska, will be held at Hastings, Adams county, Nebraska, commencing on the 3rd day of September, 1883, and lasting one week.

Homer celebrated the advent of the M. & O. road last week Tuesday with a big time. Delegations were present from Marshall and other towns and the railroad hands were treated to a free dinner.

CHEAP DOUBLE EXCURSION.

The regular annual double excursion from Adrian and vicinity to Detroit and return will take place this year on Tuesday, the 28th instant. The train will leave on the Lake Shore at 7.30 a. m., going by way of Dundee branch, taking the passengers right to the river side, at Wyandotte, where the party will embark on the swift-going and beautiful steamers Sappho and Fortune, which have been chartered for the occasion, and which will make the trip up the river lashed together. The main train does not leave Adrian in the morning until after the arrival of the regular passenger train from the west, and connects at Lenawee Junction with the passenger trains on the Jackson and Fayette branches arriving in Detroit at 11:30 a. m. Returning, will leave Detroit at 5 p. m., giving excursionists five to six hours to visit the attractions of Detroit, and arriving in Adrian at 9 p. m., giving ample time for connections with regular passenger trains on main line, Jackson and Fayette branches. Special cars will be attached to regular morning trains on main line for Hudson and Clayton, on Jackson branch for Clinton and Tecumseh, and on the Fayette branch for all stations on that branch.

The fare for the whole trip from Adrian and all points east, will be only $1.25. Tickets for the entire excursion, good from Hudson and Clayton, and all points on the Jackson and Fayette branches, will be sold at the moderate price of $1.50. The affair is under the experienced management of Messrs. J. H. Blain and H. H. Osgood, and these gentlemen expect to make the trip one of the pleasantest ever planned from this section. Refreshments will be for sale on the train and boats, at reasonable figures. Parties desiring more particular information can address the managers at Adrian.

Perhaps there is no town in the state so frequently and largely visited by tourists from the southern states as Elk Rapids, Antrim county. The hotels are not large enough to accommodate all the visitors, and if they continue to come in increased numbers more room will be required.

The Adrian Record, which is edited by the state oil inspector says: "The oil refining companies are exporting some mighty poor oil to this state. We are aware that the purer the oil the more it costs to make it, but better oil than that furnished can be made at a fair profit at the same price asked for the contemptible stuff that is palmed off as an illuminator." This may be considered as official.

St. Clair antiquarians are interested in the recent finding of some Indian remains by Mr. Drullard, lumber merchant of that place. The location of this "find" is on the river bank nearly opposite the new St. James hotel. The remains were discovered while grading the ground. There are evidences that this was at one time an Indian burial ground. It is said that in one of the graves were found the remains of a young girl wrapped in cedar bark, with beads and other ornaments about her.

Care of Infants.

The New York board of health issued the following directions

Nursing of Infants.—Over-feeding does more harm than anything else. Nurse an infant a month or two old every two or three hours; nurse an infant of six months and over five times in twenty-four hours and no more. If an infant is thirsty, give [illegible]

On the hottest days a few drops of whisky may be added to either water or food, the whisky not to exceed a teaspoonful in twenty-four hours.

Feeding of Infants.—Boil a teaspoonful of powdered barley [illegible] in a coffee grinder, and a gill of water, with a little salt, for fifteen minutes, strain, thicken it with half an ounce of milk-boiled, sweet, and a pinch of white sugar. Use [illegible] and prepare it fresh from a morning bottle. Keep bottle and nipple in a bowl of water when not in use. [illegible] may be added. For infants [illegible] months old [illegible] barley water and half boiled milk, with salt and a pinch of sugar. For older infants give more milk, from [illegible] Do not give raw potatoes, [illegible] oatmeal instead of barley. [illegible]

Glycerine and carbolic acid—three ounces of the former to fifteen grains of the latter—are among the most effective applications for chapped hands and lips for a early chill. It may be used two or three times a day.

Glycerine is also said to be exceedingly [illegible] in some cases of piles. A gentleman who had suffered from them for years and whose case appeared to defy medical treatment was cured by taking it daily with his food. A dose would be one a and two whole tablespoonfuls.

Writers in the London Lancet strongly recommend it for acidity of stomach. In one of the troubles was first discovered by a private gentleman who had long been a sufferer from it. Having read in the paper that glycerine kept milk from souring, he said to himself, "Why won't it keep [illegible]

He tried it with complete success, and was able thenceforth to take food from which he had been forced to abstain. It was subsequently employed by physicians with like results.

It does not remove acidity, it only prevents its occurrence. Take from a teaspoonful to a tablespoonful immediately after eating, or take it in the tea in place of sugar.

Thunder—Churning

[illegible] thunder which accompanies the [illegible] writes one authority "as well as the [illegible] attending the electric spark has not yet been satisfactorily accounted for. Both modern and from a consumption of the air through which is the passage of electricity, but it is difficult to understand how it takes place. Even if the difficulty were cleared there still remains the sound, rolling of the thunder and its strengthening and failing to account for the echoes sent between the clouds and the earth or between objects on the earth's surface, may explain this to some extent but not fully.

The principle involved in churning is the thorough agitation of the contents of the churn so as to cause the rupture of the minute fat globules present in the milk and the incorporation or kneading of these ruptured fat globules into larger or smaller masses of butter. It is held by some authorities that the temperature of the milk in summer should not exceed 62 degrees; and in very hot weather may be under 60; while during cold weather the milk should be about 2 degrees higher when churning.

Flocks of sheep.

We are asked how many sheep can advantageously be kept in one flock. The answer to the question would depend somewhat on the breed, which our correspondent does not designate, and it would also depend upon how much room he has. If he has room enough we do not see why a limit should be fixed, especially of Merinoes; and we do not know that it would be necessary in regard to other breeds. There is a prevalent idea that Cotswolds do not do well in large flocks, and we are not able from personal observation or experience to say whether they will or not. It is said, however, that in the old country they are kept in flocks to the number of even 800, and from all we have read upon the subject, we should think that there would be no difficulty in maintaining large flocks, if there were room enough. There are some obvious reasons why smaller flocks are better than larger ones, but it is not impossible to keep large ones, and it is practicable. The Merinoes will herd to any number if there is room enough.

Consumption

A REMEDY SUGGESTED BY A MINNESOTA PHYSICIAN.

In a letter from Minneapolis, Minn., to the Chicago Tribune, in which he declares that no cough mixture can reach the lungs, Dr. D Unger says:

I need not describe the symptoms of consumption, as they are so well known and frequently occur [illegible] intelligent can diagnose the disease from the hectic spots in the cheeks, the terrible exhausting cough, the purulent expectoration and [illegible] night sweats. I here put down the [illegible] opinions although [illegible] to causation. It will be enough to say, that, when it is once proved, strengthening efforts to check the progress [illegible] Nature herself always tends to the thousand [illegible] and the penalty [illegible]

Let us inquire [illegible] If we [illegible] the lungs [illegible] and the lung tissue and the given [illegible] but if we fail to supply the old decayed [illegible]

[illegible] light gases [illegible] and hydrogen [illegible] oxygen and not efficient [illegible] supplying [illegible] from [illegible] fever [illegible] blood more may by than the [illegible] supply it. If [illegible] the body would not waste, it was put into the blood in excess of what the disease required, where would be an increase in the strength and bulk of the body, instead of a decrease. Like the lamp, the supply of oil in the body must be equal to the demand or in excess of it. If this be not so [illegible] the wick will be consumed.

[illegible] doubtable indeed, whether Peter the Great ever became St. Petersburg for a permanent court residence and capital. As late as 1724 seven months before his death, it was not here, but at Moscow, that he celebrated the coronation of his wife. Either he or his spirit much of his time on the sea, it was chiefly because a work of such magnitude as he had undertaken required the master's incessant presence. For the rest, that Peter wanted there was a port and could, under the circumstances find no better. He built it on opprobrious ground out of all the boundaries of Old Russia, and a Finnish population the former subjects of Sweden.

He drafted his workmen among the serfs of all his provinces, and wasted 100,000 human lives in the accomplishment, labor being so cheap for him as it ever was for the kingly builders of the Egyptian pyramids. The site was a swamp—an unsafe and unhealthy swamp, so unsafe that some of its finest monuments—the monolith column of Alexander I and the Isaac Church—show in their deep crevices the rapid decay to which the treacherous ground underneath is dooming them; so unsafe besides as to be subject to inundations, like the ground of ancient Rome; for the city has already been destructively flooded eight times since 1703, the date of its foundation.

Grasshoppers as Food.

In the Sierra and Marias valleys Indian huts can be seen, and around them are congregated the warriors and squaws of the tribe. The warriors smoke and talk of war, all intent upon the accomplishment of the grand result. Meanwhile the squaws do the work while the noble lords lounge on the green sward, smoke their pipes and dreamily and lazily gaze upon the countless myriads of buzzing hoppers that fill the air and decorate the vegetation. The squaws carry aloft great cone-shaped baskets of great capacity, scoop the grasshoppers with a fine-shaped implement into their large baskets and when loaded carry the writhing mass of insects to camp and then prepare them for food. The grasshoppers, killed and subsequently dried, are mixed with mashed pine nuts and toasted wheat, and make into bread most delicious to the palate of the Western Indians. Visitors at the camp are always invited in accordance with Indian hospitality to partake of the compound, and great is the astonishment of poor Lo at the disgust expressed by the white man for food of this kind. To the limited mind of the Indian, it is incomprehensible that any one should reject food which in his vernacular is defined as being "mucheee good."

On Piling Wood.

Many people who handle wood do not know that if they wish the bark to come off they should pile it bark down; if they wish to retain the bark the opposite course should be taken. A correspondent writes to the Detroit Post and Tribune, giving his experience, as follows: "I have sold wood for over forty years in Michigan and I find that when wood is corded bark up the bark remains on until I sell and measure up the wood, and all that is piled bark down the bark falls off and measures nothing; besides, there is more heat in the bark than in the sap of the log. The most and best ashes are also in the bark. I have on my place now some maple wood that was chopped nine years ago and corded bark up and the bark would hold on if I would draw the wood to Saginaw (8 miles) and cord up and measure, besides, the bark is lighter to draw. Where the bark is piled down the water runs in around the wood and makes it dozy, wet and heavy. Tell your neighbors to try it. Railroad companies would save thousands of dollars by piling their wood bark up.

THE LAPLANDER.—The Laplander's sledge is not [illegible], but, like himself, it is covered with reindeer skin and is in shape something like a canoe. Harnessed to the sledge [illegible] is quiet starts off with almost the speed of the steam-engine. The reindeer is not only the Laplander's horse, but his cow and, during the time that it gives milk, he is freezing large quantities [illegible] to be used when no more is to be obtained. Then he breaks off a piece, thaws it out and has again a good article of milk.

The deer is also his food; large herds of them being kept in some parts of the country. From the skin of the Laplander makes the roof and floor of his house, his bed, his shoes and stockings, his clothes, and cords and strings for his bow. Without this animal the Laplander would be in a deplorable condition.

50 Fits in 24 Hours.

"I employed some of the best physicians here," wrote Wm. E. Tanner of Dayton, Ohio. "They all said my child could not live 3 weeks. It had 50 fits in 24 hours. We gave it Samaritan Nervine and the medicine effected a permanent cure." Druggists.

Brain Development.

It is not surprising to find the unlearned in things medical unable to understand that brain development, which of course is generally a matter of heredity, determines character. Such, however, is, and must needs be, the fact. Whether the mind is something outside matter which acts through or by the brain, as a musician may use a musical instrument, or whether, as some think, what we call mind is simply brain function, it should be manifest on consideration that upon the quality and conformation of a man's brain must depend his mental capacity, and consequently, also his characteristics, both intellectual and moral. We are not disposed to urge speculation, resting upon an average degree of intelligence that every student will grant, that the individual is clearly responsible for his acts; but it must not be forgotten that the laws of right are a mean and the locality of judgment with which to distinguish between good and evil, as well as both in proportion to his brain development.

The mind is in a large sense the character in a given and so [illegible] speed of a race-horse is dependent on its muscular development. This is not sufficiently recognized, and because it is not we early now and then find silly remarks in print such as the following: "The convolutions of the brain may have something to do with the difference between intelligent and [illegible] but at present they are not recognized in the law courts, and it is difficult to see how they can be, with such loose and wide moral reflections as that it would be entirely satisfactory to a prisoner to have his brains so examined in order to prove to those he left behind that he really could not help being a thief." And yet the facts are sufficiently plain and simple, so plain and simple that any one should be able to understand them.—Lancet.

Bananas and Plantains.

A pound of bananas contains more nutriment than three pounds of meat or many pounds of potatoes, while as a food it is in every sense of the word far superior to the best wheaten bread. Although it grows spontaneously throughout the Tropics, when cultivated its yield is prodigious, for an acre of ground planted with bananas will return, according to Humboldt, as much food material as thirty-four acres of wheat or over 100 acres of potatoes. The banana then is the bread of millions who could not well subsist without it. In Brazil it is the principal food of the laboring classes, while it is no less prized in the island of Cuba. Indeed, in the latter country the sugar-planters grow orchards of it expressly for the consumption of their slaves. Every day each hand receives for ration of salt fish or dried meat, as the case may be, and four bananas and two plantains. The banana—it should be added parenthetically that until lately there was no such word as banana—is divided into several varieties, all of which are used as food. The platano manzanito is a small delicate fruit, neither longer nor larger than a lady's forefinger. It is the most delicious and prized of all the varieties of the plantain. El platano guineo, called by us the banana, is probably more abundant than any other kind. It is subdivided into different varieties, the finest of which are the yellow and purplish ones we see for sale in our market; but the latter is so little esteemed by the natives of the Tropics that it is seldom raised to them. El platino grande—known to us as simply the plantain—is also subdivided into varieties which are known by their savor and their size. The kind that reaches our market is almost ten inches long yet on the Isthmus Darien there are plantains that grow from eighteen to twenty-four inches. They are never eaten raw, but are either boiled or roasted or are prepared as preserves.

A Word of Advice.

It is as easy to be a good man as a poor one. Half the energy displayed in keeping ahead that is required to catch up when behind, would gain credit, give more time to attend to business, and add to the credit and reputation of those who work for gain. Be prompt; honor your engagements. If you promise to meet a man, or do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time. If you go out on business, attend promptly to the matter on hand, then as promptly tend to your own business. Do not stop to tell stories during business hours. If you have a place of business, be there when wanted. No man can get rich by sitting around stores and saloons. Never "fool" on business matters. Have order, system regularity and promptness. Do not meddle with business you know nothing of. Never buy an article you do not need, simply because it is cheap, and the man who sells it will take it out in trade. Trade is money. Strive to avoid harsh words and personalities. Do not kick every stone in the path—more miles can be made in a day by going steadily on than by stopping to kick. Pay as you go; a man of honor respects his word as he does his bond. Ask but never beg. Relieve others, when you can, but never give what you cannot afford to, simply because it is fashionable. Learn to say no. No necessity for snapping it out dog fashion, but say it firmly and respectfully. Have but few confidants. Use your brains rather than those of others. Learn to act and think for yourselves. Be vigilant. Keep ahead rather than behind the time. Young men, cut this out and place it by careful perusal in the golden store-house of your brain, and if you find that there is folly in the argument let us know.

SHOE-PEGS.—To a Massachusetts man, Joseph Walker, is due the credit of inventing the shoe-peg. Previous to the year 1818 its use had not been known, and the invention gave a new start to the manufacture of boots and shoes. Up to that date such articles had been sewed, and the peg, made at first by hand, came in to revolutionize the trade. It was, however, the custom of shoemakers who lived away from the manufacturing centers to make their own pegs by hand even down to recent times, but the machine-manufactured peg has now superseded all such slow work, just as the horseshoe nail manufacture is now almost wholly in the hands of establishments that make them by machinery. The usual story comes with the introduction of the shoe-peg, to the effect that some unscrupulous parties tried to swindle the unsuspecting by endeavoring to sell shoe-pegs as a new kind of oats. But this tale is like many others, to be read, and then "taken under advisement."

Women and Wine.

Of the worst foes that women have had to contend with, wine stands at head. The appetite for strong drink in men has spoiled the lives of more women—ruined more hopes for them, scattered more fortunes for them, brought to them more shame, sorrow and hardship—than any other evil that lives. The country numbers tens of thousands—nay, hundreds of thousands—of women who are widows to-day, and all in hopeless woe, because their husbands have been slain by strong drink.

"Yes," says the Spectator, "we have there are hundreds of thousands of homes scattered all over the land in which women live lives of torture, going through all changes of suffering, that he but seen the extremes of fear and despair, because they love, love wine better than they love woman they have sworn to love. There are women by the thousands who dread to see at the close the apparent sober husband, lest they find that she has learned a secret under the influence of the seductive poison. There are women, greatly with pain, while we write these words [illegible] in the drinking habits in any statement based in regard to this matter, because no human imagination can create anything more [illegible] than the truth, and no pen is capable of portraying the truth. The sorrows of a wife with a drunken husband or a mother with a drunken son, are as near the realization of hell as can be reached in this world at least. The shame, the humiliation, the sorrow, the sense of disgrace for herself and her children, the poverty—not unfrequently the beggary—the fear and the fact of violence, the anxiety, life-long struggle and despair of countless women with drunken husbands, are enough to make all women curse wine and engage unitedly to oppose it everywhere as the worst enemy of their sex.

Theory of Meteorites.

One of the oldest theories, and the most consistent with known facts and laws, is that meteorites are bodies moving round the sun which occasionally enter our atmosphere, and are either frittered into dust or reach the earth as aerolites. In other words, they are abnormally large fragments of comets. Small comets are dissipated in the higher regions of the air by the intense heat produced by friction, and give rise to the phenomenon of shooting stars. Larger pieces appear as fire balls, and very large masses fall through the air in a state of combustion, which is not, however, sufficiently intense to consume their volume before reaching the ground. This idea of a celestial origin seems to have originated among the Greeks. Plutarch says:

"Falling stars are, according to the opinions of some physicists, not eruptions of the ethereal fire extinguished in the air immediately after its ignition, nor yet an inflammatory combustion of air, which is dissolved in the upper regions of the space; but these meteors are rather a fall of celestial bodies, which in consequence of a certain intermission in the rotary force, and by the impulse of some irregular movement, have been hurled down not only to the inhabited portions of the earth but also beyond it into the great ocean, where we cannot find them." The views of Diogenes of Appollonia are expressed thus: "Stars that are invisible, and consequently have no name, move in space with those that are visible. These invisible stars frequently fall to the earth, and are extinguished, as the stony star that fell burning at Ægos Potamos." Diladni, as the result of his investigations, advances the idea that meteors are bodies moving in space, being either accumulations of matter originally created, or fragments separated from a large mass of similar nature. Sir H. Davy offered the same explanation in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1817. These views, or rather a modification of them suited to our increased knowledge of cosmical way means, have their modern advocate in Prof. H. A. Newton, of Yale College.

Every Day Thoughts.

[illegible] the sunlight from the human heart? From the world that renders our lives happy? What scatters wealth, ease and daily intercourse with friends if we are dissatisfied and discontented? Can we derive peace from anger, or joy from bitterness of spirit?

God sends us ten thousand joys, but we will not stretch out our hands to grasp them; and yet we grieve that our days are so inharmonious, our hearts are continually going in and out, as it were, of eclipses. Yesterday jostles to-day and to-morrow carries them both away captive. Our mornings are spent in anticipating the afternoons, and our afternoons are spent in regretting our mornings. May God make us more patient to live. More patience is what we need to advance our happiness and the happiness of those around us. We all in a sense depend upon each other for our happiness. Tenderness and attention to the outbreak of a pained heart will clear our way more fully, and the feeling of wrong, desparation and disquietude would be abated. Nothing draws us so fully and tenderly toward a person as their inquiries after our welfare and our enjoyments. To know that our happiness is studied by some angelish creature brings exquisite pleasure—if we are not deformed by an ungrateful selfishness.

This is not a trivial subject to dream and write about; as our actions here fix the nature of our enjoyment hereafter.

It is the sunlight from the human heart that renders true happiness—it is kind words and pleasant deeds that make the world bright and glorious.

From the open portals of Heaven come charity, love and faith; with these in our hearts we can diffuse kind words and do noble deeds, and from them glean pure happiness.

A correspondent of a London paper warns people against throwing broken bottles among sun dried grass or peat, in summer, as the bottom of such bottles frequently act as burning glasses. The Australians know that extensive and damaging bush fires have taken place in Australia in consequence of broken bottles having been carelessly thrown down among the dried scrub. So, too, camp fires at Aldershot, and bush fires on English commons may have their origin in parts of broken bottles acting as burning glasses.
